Cutting a Wise Investment?...

Cuts in various mental health services are being anticipated once the fiscal year '06 Maryland budget is finalized, and a related program seemingly destined to be completely dismantled is the nationally recognized Office of Children, Youth, and Families. While Governor Ehrlich wanted to add funding to this particular program, the House of Delegates chose instead to send it to the chopping block.

A story about local mental health programs expected to take a cut can be found on the front page of this newspaper.

While it is true that there is fat in nearly every budget, and that occasionally one can make a strong case for completely eliminating an entire program, the element of compassion should be first and foremost. Persons needing mental health services should be considered no differently than persons who suffer physical illness or injury. When someone is injured in a car accident, for example, there is never a question, never a hesitation, about transporting that person to the hospital for treatment, regardless of ability to pay. Those who truly suffer from mental illness are also in pain, just as needy, and just as deserving. Also, when people do not get the care they need for their mental illness, often times other innocent persons become victims of unintentional abuse and violence.

Setting the compassion element aside and looking at it strictly from a financial perspective, there is also great logic in maintaining a strong mental health care system. Without mental health care, persons needing it often become a much more expensive problem, ending up in jail or mental institutions, possibly becoming long-term wards of the state. Suddenly the cost to provide for them greatly exceeds that of preventive care.

Thus, supporting a strong mental health care system should be considered a wise investment, both in compassion and in dollars.

WHAT IF HE WAS RIGHT ABOUT US?

In case you missed it, the Pope died this week.

That's not meant sarcastically, but is only said to underscore that various news analysts have pointed out that the news of Pope John Paul II's death appears to be the most reported breaking story in world history. The millions of people who have traveled many hours, to stand in line many more hours, to pay their respects is said to be the largest gathering of humanity for one event, one man in history.

Why is this? Why did three American presidents kneel together yesterday before a bier bearing the body of a man wearing brown loafers?

There's no logical explanation, just as I couldn't explain, then or now, to myself why I, a wiseguy high school senior, stood among a huge crowd along a D.C. city street straining to catch a glimpse of the man when his motorcade passed by in his 1979 visit. Or why I followed the crowd to the cathedral many blocks off, where the streets were packed with even bigger crowds chanting "John Paul II, we love you!" outside the red brick church. And why did this sarcastic teenager nearly come to tears of joy when the Pope stepped forth to the balcony and practically sang into the microphone to us, "John Paul II, he loves YOU!"...and why I could easily come to tears as I write this?

It has no logical explanation; it just is, I guess.

Anyway, the last thing this media-saturated event needs is more Papal analysis, here goes....

It appears to me that all the commentary about the Pope has been of one of two strains: 1) His faith, teaching, and moral fiber were instrumental in bringing down communism in his native Poland, setting off a domino effect of freedom's outbreak that ripped the Iron Curtain in two – for this he is being universally praised; 2) on the other hand, his faith, teaching and moral fiber were "out of touch" with many Catholics, our nation, and much of modern society on concepts including personal freedom and morality, society at large, as well as issues of, yes, war and peace. For this he is being near-universally critiqued in not an always positive light.

This raises a logical question: How could Pope John Paul II have been so right about the biggest issue of the day, and so wrong about so much else?

The role of a Biblical prophet was to challenge as well as console, to "comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable." This is what Jesus did – and the Pope did it, too.

So without answering the question, it might behoove us all to ask ourselves, our nation, our culture...

What if he was right about us?

AS NEWBORN BABES

When the bells began to toll Saturday evening here in Paris, no one asked for whom. We knew. All day, newspapers, radio, television, Internet bulletin boards all ran the same news: the end of an earthly life was imminent.

The public secularism of France took a break for the weekend. It was announced that the French foreign minister was delaying his departure for Poland out of respect for the remaining life and impending death of one who ranks among the great heroes of that country.

The press usually so reticent about matters religious and the French left so regularly critical of what they deem Christian reaction took a breath. They said, love him or hate him, agree or disagree, this man possessed greatness.

The French play a little game with adjectives, sometimes placing them in front of and sometimes behind the nouns they modify. "Un grand homme" can mean simply "a tall man." It can mean, but does not necessarily mean "a great man." "Un homme grand" is reserved for those who lived on a level beyond the ordinary. This phrase was on the lips and in the air, "Il était un homme grand."

The churches throughout town were open, and were aflame with candles lit in prayer for one in final stage of his earthly pilgrimage and in hope for continued pilgrimage in another country. The gate between the two is strait, and narrow is the way.

He died during the vigil of the Easter Octave. That is: the Saturday night before the Lord's Day after Easter. He lived one full week from the beginning of the Easter vigil, the full Easter week. One wonders if he had prayed, "Lord, give me one more Easter, just one more."

The eighth day in the resurrection story was the day that Jesus appeared to Thomas, offering him the proof which just a week before he had demanded. The account concludes with that golden beatitude, "Blessed are those who have not seen, and yet believe" (St. John 20:29).

The eighth day is emblematic of that time when proof is no longer demanded, no longer needed, when faith has become complete. Thus, also, the eighth day symbolizes when Christ begins his eternal reign of peace. To die watching for such a blessing is as good a death as can be hoped for.

In my work as a pastor, I have sat by bedsides coaching Christians in that final stage of earthly pilgrimage, often without being sure of how much was heard or understood. Having been a pastor himself of many flocks and then of just one, this "homme grand" anticipated such a problem. He recognized the problem both for himself as a Christian and for the sheep of his flock around the world who would attend and ponder his death.

Twenty years ago he wrote in his "Act of self-abandonment to the mercy of God": "If one day, sickness invades my brain and annihilates my lucidity, already my submission is before you and shall continue thus in silent adoration. . . . I will that my last breath be a breath of love for you."

The day after his death, the Octave of Easter, I attended the Church of St. Eugene and St. Cecile where the approved Tridentine Mass is celebrated. That is, as the bulletin says, "the liturgy in use as of 1962." The service is in Latin, and the priest leads the people in facing God together. The Octave of Easter is also known as "Quasimodo Lord's Day" because "quasimodo" is the first word of the Latin introit, taken from I Peter 2:2: "As newborn babes, desire the pure milk of the Word."

The motif enacted by the Tridentine mass is that the service takes place in the border country where earth and heaven march together. It is that same country where the Christian pilgrimage ends and begins. Everyone comes to that gate as helpless as a newborn babe.

What is it like to journey from the womb into this world? That too is a strait gate and a narrow way. All of us have traveled that path, even if some through a trapdoor, but who remembers it?

All of us had that first desire for our mother's milk. We made our first use of voice box and lungs crying for it. How sweet and delicious, how comforting that milk must have been the very first time! It was the first evidence we had that longing could become hope.

Perhaps it is thus, traveling through that other gate, tasting for the first time the pure milk of the Word from the breast of God, as little conscious, as longed for, as delicious.

The church filled with incense. The bell rang. The faithful knelt. The priest lifted Christ, crucified, risen and coming again. We were pilgrims and strangers in the march of heaven, country recently traversed by another pilgrim.

At 6:30 that evening the church towers all over the city were alive with sound, as the Archbishop of Paris began a memorial mass at Notre Dame Cathedral.

The bells tolled for Karol Wojtyla and for all of us.

Dear Lord, give us one more Easter, just one more.

To the Editor:

My wife and I reside at Overlook North Apartments in Oakland. We recently received our water and sewage bill from the town, and on it was a "state mandated fee" for "bay restoration," a charge of $7.50 that is uncalled for. Why do we have to pay for restoring the Chesapeake Bay? There's a lot of miles between here and there. What about people in West Virginia, Washington, D.C. and so on? They should pay a fee too. Doesn't the Potomac River flow into the Chesapeake Bay?

It's time for us all to call our great governor, Robert Ehrlich Jr., and complain (1-800-811-8336), especially those of us receiving disability benefits and living from month-to-month as it is. We can't even afford to visit the Chesapeake Bay. We also can't afford to buy seafood from there. We buy our fish in a box (Mrs. Paul's or Gorton's). Who thought up this mandated fee?

What's the point of restoring the bay anyway? It's like the wind power issues. What's the big deal? Some day soon, Jesus is going to return, and the things on Earth are going to be destroyed anyway. I'd much rather look at a wind mill than to look at those condos at Deep Creek Lake. That is destroying nature too. From what I understand, having wind power will help decrease energy costs and electric bills.

child will go hungry, he added. A letter will then be sent home informing the parents of the empty account and that one lunch had been charged.

Parents may call the school or send in a note requesting a credit availability report at any time during the school year. This report will not only give the balance of the account, but it will also indicate what the child purchased each day.

"As we learned the system, we realized that limits could be set on the student's a la carte purchases, which was something that had been requested by some parents," said Germain.

He added that it should be the parents' responsibility to talk to their children about what they should and shouldn't eat at lunch and not to abuse the a la carte choices. But Germain added that if parents wish, they may contact the school and have a block put on all a la cart purchases.

This way, when the child attempts to buy anything a la carte, the screen will display a cash only message.

Items on the a la carte menu range from milk to large and small cookies, nachos, ice cream, and pepperoni rolls. The types of choices and amount of choices vary with each school and for each grade, Germain said.

All a la carte items and menus will be re-evaluated by January, Germain said. It has been requested by the state board of education that all items be checked for nutritional value. A nutritional policy will be put into effect by the food service department by the beginning of next year.

Budgetary Ax

lead to suicide continues to operate, despite reduced funding.

Part of this is made possible by the philosophy of the health department's mental health director Brooke Schneider.

"If someone comes in and obviously needs help, we'll do what's right and figure out how to pay for it later," she said.

Much of the same philosophy can be found at the Lighthouse, a psychological rehabilitation program in Oakland where 150 people with all types of mental illnesses can go for daily activities and classes, but it's only able to operate for four days a week because of funding. Its director, Debbie Jo Noroski, says she should have the funding to offer services seven days a week.

"Right now it's tough. We haven't had to lay people off, but we're not replacing the people who leave. We don't know yet what the fiscal year looks like from the state, but we're telling them that programs like ours allow people to stay in the community rather than having to be hospitalized at state expense. Hospitalization is three to 10 times more expensive than community care," she said.

The effects of budget cuts in Garrett County's mental health program causes ripples throughout the community.

Duane Yoder, president of Garrett County Community Action Committee Inc., says he worries over the effects that cuts in mental health services will have on the Head Start program. "We need at times to have mental health experts observe some of our children in the program," he points out.

Yoder is also concerned about how to find monies to place in temporary housing those people who are recently released from the hospital or jail and have no place to go. His organization has developed a voucher system for such persons, but that money for this year has already been spent. He has still managed for the most part to keep people in Gar-rett County from roaming the streets in a homeless state.

He said he has recently seen an increase in the number of older people suffering from depression and who are in vital need of mental health care.

Garrett County's health care problems, according to Fred Polce, can be broken down in the following categories according to the care received by patients in 2004: 434 were illnesses diagnosed in childhood, 419 suffered from adjustment disorder, 405 suffered from major depression, 211 from anxiety disorder, 156 suffered from bi-polar (manic-depression), and 96 were treated for schizophrenia.

All the health professionals agreed that there are drawbacks to treating the mentally ill in rural areas.

"First you have the transportation problem. Then you don't have the specialists that you do in urban areas," said Glotfelty. "And then the income is usually lower."

Brooke Schneider estimates that 30 to 35 percent of the people who come to the Health Department for mental health care have no insurance of any kind.

But Schneider and Glotfelty agree that there are some pluses for mental health care in rural areas like Garrett County.

"People know each other. They tend to care more. They tend to notice if someone is in trouble and do something about it. It's not all bad," said Glotfelty.

Dr. Stewart Callis is Garrett County's only full-time psychiatrist. He is a county native who has been practicing here for 15 years. He estimates that among seeing patients at the health center, visiting patients in the hospital, and spending time in his private practice, he works between 60 and 70 hours per week.

"What I miss is the ability to refer patients to specialists, such as a child psychiatrist or a neuro-psychiatrist. When I make these referrals they are always for out of town," he said. "I spend a lot of time talking to primary physicians, giving them suggestions."

But what he likes about practicing here is being able to see generations of Garrett Countians come to his office and knowing who they are and how their family matters or even how genetics may be affecting them.

"But I wouldn't want to work anywhere else. This is my home, and the people who come to see me are all my fellow Garrett Countians. It's a good place for me to practice," he said.

HISTORY COMES TO LIFE — Living History programs offer a close-up look at what things were like in the past. Living historians research the characters, time period, and clothing, then participate in programs to share their information. Historic Braddock Road Is Marked; Events Planned

In celebration of the 250th anniversary of General Edward Braddock's march during the French and Indian War, the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce unveiled new signs Saturday to mark the Historic Braddock Road.

"This former path or trace used by the Nemacolin Indians played a large part in the early history of our nation," said Charles Ross, Chamber of Commerce CEO. "Widened by the troops of General Braddock, the trail was recently mapped by local historian Bob Bantz. Many features of the trail, described in writings by George Washington, Thomas Gist, and other early travelers, are still visible today."

For the past two years, frontier men and women and Indians have shared stories from the 1750s while participating at the trading post and encampment during Living History programs in May and November.

Living History programs scheduled for May 18, 19, 20, and 21 at the Western Maryland 4-H Center, off Route 495 in Bittinger, will focus on the ill-fated trip of General Edward Braddock and the future president of the United States, George Washington.

Washington traveled the Nemacolin Trace, later known as Braddock's Trail, several times.

Along this trail, General Braddock built a road that later became the foundation of the National Road. It took weeks to hack through the wilderness. He strove to drive the French from the area, but died in the retreat.

Scheduled programs will feature actual encampments, a trading post of artifacts, historical characters in period dress, movies, and authentic colonial cooking.

"This is a chance to learn what life was like when Washington passed through these mountains," Ross said.

More than 170 county students and teachers took part in the program last November and traveled back in time for the 251st anniversary of Colonel Washington's first expedition on the Nemacolin Trail as he marched to destiny in the French and Indian war.

"George Washington got his start here," said Committee member Jack Caruthers, who will be portraying the nation's first president. "He found out he could lead men in combat."

In Loving Memory of
who passed away April 11, 2004

Our Dearest Aunt Ruthie

Life without you seems so difficult there's a hole that's as big as the sky.
God sent his angels to take you and still we keep wondering why.

Your life here on earth has such meaning
From the love and kindness shared,
And everyone who knew you had not a doubt you cared.

Those of us left behind still remember
How you touched us in your special way.
We miss your little stories and sweet smile
And we wish you were with us each day.

The pain in our hearts can't be measured.
We sometimes don't know what to do.
That's when we ask God to help us
Make it through life without you.

Love you very much,

Baseball... The Perfect Game
edited by Josh Leventhal
Review by Terri Schlichenmeyer

Now that opening day is behind us, would any baseball fans like to make a prediction on who will go to the World Series in a little over five months?

Not so fast. There are still plenty of games to hear, watch, or attend. In the meantime, grab a cool one, settle down with the radio on, and start reading Baseball... The Perfect Game, edited by Josh Leventhal (c. 2005, Voyageur Press).

Using excerpts from biographies, programs, and newspaper and magazine articles from times past and times recent, Leventhal gives you a peek into the game's greatest (and not-so-great) moments, the arguably greatest players, and the teams you've cheered for and followed, perhaps all your life.

It's easy to imagine what goes through the mind of the pitcher who wins the game in a shut-out or allows very few hits. But what about the guy who loses and is booed off the field? He knows he did his best, but he feels lower than the dirt under his cleats. In the fitting first chapter, "Opening Day," former Reds player Jim Brosnan writes about being the losing player on the very first game of the official season.

Nearly every little boy – and a fair amount of little girls – grew up collecting baseball cards. Way too many of those little-boys-cum-big-boys now bemoan the fact that they used those cards to make "motors" for their bikes, or that Mom threw all those cards in the trash. Read about the Grandfather of Card Collecting in The Collector, the true story of J.R. Burdick, a quiet man who raced death as he organized his vast collection for donation to New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

If you were to ask a hundred people to name the best all-time baseball players ever, you would hear a hundred names: Babe Ruth, Ted Williams, and Sammy Sosa, to name a few. Yes, they have their own chapters in this book... but what about Satchel Paige? There's a can't-miss chapter from his autobiography in this book. There are also stories about Jackie Robinson, Willie Mays, Sandy Koufax, and a nice, long chapter about the day that Hammerin' Hank Aaron smashed the Babe's home run record.

Aside from the actual narrative in this book – and that alone is a baseball fan's paradise – the pictures in this book caught my eye. Baseball... The Perfect Game is filled with vintage photos, paintings, clips, still shots, and programs from everyday games and World Series matches going back to the very beginning.

This book is not for the casual baseball fan. There are statistics in here — lots of them. There are dozens of "remember when?" kinds of stories that you'll understand best if you cut your teeth on a bat. If you're a once-in-awhile kind of baseball fan, you probably aren't going to like this book as much as a real, true baseball nut will.

If you're that real, true baseball nut, though, this book is a big home run.

Award-Winning Poet Bosselaar To Speak At FSU

An editor as well as a writer and teacher, Bosselaar and her husband co-edited an anthology titled Night Out: Poems About Rebels, Exiles and Renegades, as well as Urban Nature: Poems about Wildlife in the City.

MSAC Offering Workshop About Arts Marketing

The Maryland State Arts Council, through its Organizational Development Assistance Program (ODA), is extending invitations to small, emerging, and mid-sized organizations that produce or present arts activities to a series of free workshops running from April to November 2005. The workshops will be held in numerous locations around the state.

The Garrett County workshop will take place at the Gallery, located along Alder Street, on Wednesday, April 13, from 4 to 6:30 p.m.

The Organizational Development Assistance Program is designed to provide developmental, financial, and management support services to non-profit organizations that present or produce the arts. Workshop topics will include How to Start a Non-Profit, Boards . . . A to Z, Financial Management, How to Market Your Non-Profit, and Fundraising.

To be eligible to attend the workshops, the organizations must be incorporated in Maryland and have an arts budget of $250,000 or less.

Organizations must register and attendance will be granted on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration forms, workshop descriptions, and the schedule of all workshops in the series are available on the MSAC website at www.msac.org and by calling the Maryland State Arts Council at 410-767-6555.

The mission of the Maryland State Arts Council, an agency of the Maryland Department of Business and Economic Development, is to encourage and invest in the advancement of the arts for the people of Maryland. FSU To Present The Importance Of Being Earnest

Oscar Wilde's noted social satire, The Importance of Being Earnest, will be performed at Frostburg State University on Friday and Saturday, April 15 and 16, and Thursday to Saturday, April 21 to 23. Curtain times are set at 8 p.m. each evening, with an additional 2 p.m. matinee performance on Saturday, April 16. The FSU Performing Arts Center box office opens one hour prior to curtain in the F. Perry Smith Studio Theatre.

The 19th century classic is described as "arguably one of the greatest English satires to grace the stage," according to a spokesperson. "The hilarity begins when bachelors Jack Worthing and Algernon Moncrieff both go by 'Earnest,' a name that seems to inspire absolute confidence in order to win the love of the women they adore. Gwendelon accepts her proposal from Jack and Cecily from Algernon, but the women become heatedly confused when they meet and believe they are engaged to the same man. This fabulously witty comedy erupts when the formidable Lady Bracknell becomes involved, and, with the help of Miss Prism and a handbag, everyone is forced to discover the importance of being 'earnest'."

Tickets are $10 for the general public and $5 for students. For reservations and information, persons may call the University Theatre Box Office at 301-687-7462, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Group discounts are available when booked in advance.

Garrett Comm. Band Concert To Be April 30

The Garrett Community Concert Band, under the baton of Dr. Jerry McGee, will present its spring concert on Saturday, April 30, at the Lodge at the Wisp, McHenry. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

The local band will join dozens of bands and orchestras from all over the country that are participating in a centennial tribute to composer Harold Arlen, who wrote music for many movies from 1934 to 1963 and scores for Broadway musicals from 1934 to 1973.

"Although Arlen's name may not be well recognized, many of his songs are very well-known favorites," McGee said, "including 'It's Only a Paper Moon,' 'Stormy Weather,' and 'That Old Black Magic.'

"But with over 400 songs composed, he is best known for creating the music for The Wizard of Oz."

Eight of Arlen's songs have been nominated for Academy Awards, and his most famous composition, "Over the Rainbow," has been selected by the Recording Industry Association and the National Endowment for the Arts as the Number One Song of the Century of 365 songs that were considered.

The GC band's program will include "Over the Rainbow," sung by Garrett College vocal student Caroline Stahl. Another Arlen medley will also be performed, along with a variety of other pieces.

Titled "Over the Rainbow," this will be the band's third cabaret-style program presented at the Wisp. An optional buffet dinner will be served at the lodge from 6:30 to 7:30. Tickets for the concert only are $7 for adults, $2 for students, and free for children under 6.

Arts Council Readying For '05 Garrett Galaxy Variety Show

The Garrett County Arts Council will present its annual showcase of local performing artists at Garrett College on Saturday, April 16, at 7:30 p.m.

"Garrett Galaxy is family entertainment at its finest," said Steve Schlosnagle, executive director of the arts council. "And better yet, the program is free."

This year's Garrett Galaxy will star the eclectic local band The Remedy and feature solo performances by Alex Hicks (percussion), Duffy Kane (guitar), Abe Folmsbee (banjo), and Ellinor Benedict (fiddle).

Vocal performances will be given by Caroline Stahl, accompanied by Jerry McGee, and Dave and Wayne Callis, accompanied by Muriel Franc.

GALAXY TO FEATURE THE REMEDY – The Garrett County Arts Council will present its annual Garrett Galaxy showcase of area talent on Saturday, April 16, 7:30 p.m., at Garrett College. Among the performers will be The Remedy, a local band, pictured above. In the front are vocalists Kim Weimer (left) and Jana Brown. Standing, from left, are Chuck Walch, percussion; Rodney Glotfelty, trumpet; Monty Pagenhardt, piano and vocals; Mark Ashby, bass and vocals; Jim Jones, guitar and vocals; Greg Was (saxophone and flute); and Gino Mauricci, sax and clarinet. Solo performances at the Galaxy will be given by Alex Hicks (percussion), Duffy Kane (guitar), Abe Folmsbee (banjo), and Ellinor Benedict (fiddle). The program is free to the public. See story.

The Remedy is composed of local professionals who play a diverse range of musical styles in response to audience tastes, including jazz, standards, blues, rock, country, and contemporary urban and rap music. A band spokesman said the group has developed a special song list for the Garrett Galaxy performance.

Band members include Jim Jones (guitar and vocals), Monty Pagenhardt (piano and vocals), Mark Ashby (bass and vocals), Chuck Walch (drums and percussion), Gino Mauricci (saxophone and clarinet), Jana Brown (vocals), Fred Hazelwood (blues harp, guitar, and vocals), Rodney Glotfelty (trumpet), Greg Was (saxophone and flute), and Kim Weimer (vocals).

The Galaxy program will also feature various solo appearances by entertainers performing in a variety-show format, beginning with a drum performance by Alex Hicks.

Hicks has played drums with a number of regional nightclub bands, and currently plays with a band in Allegany County. A graduate of Garrett College, he operates his own drum shop in Cumberland.

Duffy Kane, a PMC recording artist and veteran of the East Coast blues scene, has played guitar for 26 years, touring extensively. He has studied with notable jazz guitarists and plans to perform an original jazz composition.

Abe Folmsbee, current Maryland state banjo and mandolin champion, plans to play music that he has written. Folmsbee has played Appalachian old-time and traditional Irish music for three years, during which time he's performed with a number of bands, both in concerts and at dances. He has toured throughout the tri-state area and Ohio.

Ellinor Benedict is well known throughout western Maryland and the surrounding area as an accomplished fiddler. She has won numerous awards in old-time fiddle competitions throughout the region. Prior to taking up the fiddle, Benedict played symphony cello.

Caroline Stahl is currently a student at Garrett College, where she studies voice and piano, and plays euphonium with the Garrett Community Concert Band. For Garrett Galaxy, she plans to sing an African-American spiritual, a traditional Japanese folk tune, and "L'Uccelino" by Puccini, accompanied by Jerry McGee.

Brothers Dave and Wayne Callis, members of the Garrett Choral Society, will sing "Unchanged Melody," accompanied by Muriel Franc on piano. The Callis brothers most recently performed at the choral society's Valentine's Day benefit in Oakland.

"Garrett Galaxy is our gift to the community," said Schlosnagle. "It's our way of showcasing local talent and presenting local entertainment in a dazzling variety show format. We invite the community to join us for a celebration of the performing arts at Garrett College."

Although admission to Garrett Galaxy will be free, Schlosnagle said contributions will be appreciated to help defray program expenses.

Additional information about Garrett Galaxy is available online at www.garrettarts.com or by calling the Garrett County Arts Council at 301-334-6580.

Rams Open With A Loss, Then Win Three Straight

After dropping their season opener, 5-4, to host Hampshire last Thursday, the Southern High varsity baseball team regrouped and reeled off three straight victories, including a 13-3 thrashing of host Keyser on Friday, a 2-0 Western Maryland Interscholastic League win over Fort Hill in Cumberland Tuesday, and another WMIL, 6-5 victory last night at Westmar.

The Rams trailed throughout much of the game against Hampshire last Thursday, as the Trojans jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning behind a two-run single by Carl Corbin.

Southern then chipped away at the lead by scoring a single run in the second, third, and fourth frames, knotting the score at 3-3.

The tie was short-lived, as Hampshire scored a run in the bottom of the fourth to take a 4-3 edge.

The Rams tied the score again when Brad Reese led off Southern's half of the seventh with a double and would later be singled home by Scott Wildesen. Southern left three base runners stranded, as Hampshire reliever Anthony Lewis got his team out of the jam.

But the Trojans won the game in the bottom of the seventh when Lewis rapped an RBI single that brought pinch-runner Dusty Frye home. Frye was running for Brandon Oster, who led off the frame with a single.

The Rams finished with an 11-8 advantage in hits, with Reese recording a double and two singles, Chad Everd smacking two doubles and driving home two runs, and Cory Bosley adding a pair of singles.

Wildesen, who pitched the first five innings for Southern, was relieved by Anthony Schrock, and the two combined for eight strike-outs.

Leading the Trojans' hitting were Robbie Harris with a double and a single, plus one RBI, and Corbin, who finished with two singles and two RBI.

The Rams needed just six innings to dispose of Keyser on Friday, as they scored one run in the top of the sixth to give themselves a 10-run lead.

They wasted no time taking a lead, which they would never relinquish, by putting five runs on the board in the top half of the first inning.

Aaron Louden went the distance for Southern, allowing only two hits, one of which was an RBI triple by Brian Winebrenner.

Meanwhile, the Ram bats pounded out 10 hits, with Tyler Graham driving in four runs with a double and a single, Schrock rapping three singles for two RBI, and Everd adding a pair of singles and one RBI.

Keyser dropped to 1-2 with the loss.

Senior hurler Scott Wildesen copied Louden's effort against Fort Hill on Tuesday, allowing just two Sentinel hits, both singles, and he also struck out 15 batters and gave up only one walk.

The game was scoreless until the top of the third, when the Rams recorded the only two runs of the game. Brad Reese led off the inning with a double and scored soon afterward on a single by Graham. Louden then stroked a double to plate Graham.

Southern finished with seven hits. Nick Gregg had two hits, a double and a single.

The two harmless singles allowed by Wildesen were by Jon Dicken and Casey Merritt.

It was the second loss in five games for the Sentinels, who fell to 2-1 in the WMIL standings.

Details of yesterday's win over Westmar were not received.

The Rams are scheduled to play at Northern next Monday at 4:45 and host Allegany in a 4:30 contest next Wednesday.

Ram Netters Split With Fort Hill's Sentinels

The Southern High School girls' varsity tennis squad took a 4-3 win over Fort Hill Monday, while Ram boys dropped a 6-1 match to the host Sentinels.

SHS's girls took the top three singles seed matches, as top seed Jasmine Scheffel netted an 8-6 win, No. 2 seed Sarah Stephens routed her opponent in an 8-3 victory, and third seed Hannah Watkins scored an 8-4 triumph. Southern's Liz Thayer, playing in the No. 5 seed match, demolished her counterpart by an 8-2 tally.

The Ram boys had a tougher go of things, taking only one match. SHS's second seed doubles team of Josh Wood and Justine Nines took an 8-6 win to avert a complete sweep by the unbeaten Fort Hill boys.

The Rams are slated to host Northern Wednesday afternoon.

Rams' Softball Squad Falls To Allegany, 10-3

Despite getting out to a quick start, the Southern High School varsity softball squad faltered against the Allegany Campers Monday and dropped the road contest by a 10-3 margin.

The Rams' Sarah Bittinger highlighted a three-run Southern first inning by cranking out an RBI double that scored Julia Bosley, then Bosley singled home Kayla Nazelrod. Anna Lucas scored on a fielder's choice with Ashley Metcalfe in the batter's box.

It was all Alco from then on, however, as the hosts scored two runs in the bottom of the first, a pair in each of the third and fourth stanzas, and four runs in the fifth.

SHS was held to three hits for the game, while the Campers had seven hits and drew 11 walks. Metcalfe struggled with her control somewhat on a number of pitches that were just outside the strike zone, but recorded a dozen strikeouts nonetheless.

Allegany's Julie Mizak drove in four runs with a double and a single, and Teammate Lindsey Twigg struck out nine Rams while issuing just three walks.

Southern is slated to visit Fort Hill this afternoon, then return home to host Beall in a 4:30 p.m. contest on Tuesday.

Huskies Fall To Mounties; Crush Alco, Batter Beall

After stumbling at the start of the week in a 5-3 loss at Beall Friday, the Northern High School varsity baseball team roared back with a 15-2 demolition of host Allegany Monday, then took a sweet revenge win over Beall yesterday by a 10-5 margin before a delighted Cove crowd.

The Huskies fell behind in the opening stanza at Beall Friday as the Mounties scored three first-inning runs. Northern scored once in the third inning on an RBI single by Michael Bergstorm, then Preston Sisler ripped a two-run double in the following stanza that knotted the contest at 3-all.

In the NHS half of the fifth inning, with the score tied at 3-all, Michael Wolf reached first base on an error and advanced around the horn to perch at third with one out showing; however, the Beall pitcher shut down the scoring opportunity, leaving Wolf stranded.

Beall scored twice in the sixth to go up by its final 5-3 margin, and the Huskies were held hitless in their final inning at bat.

Beall (2-1) had 11 hits during the contest, but three of the Mounties' five runs were unearned.

The Huskies flattened Allegany in Monday's meeting, ripping out 12 hits while junior Greg Beachy scattered five singles. The righthander whiffed five batters and gave up just three walks in a masterful complete-game, six-inning performance.

Northern's scoring flurry started early when the Huskies got first-inning RBI singles from Johnson and Bergstrom. NHS went up 6-0 in the following stanza, as Beachy and Johnson stroked run-scoring singles, Corey Carr crossed the plate on a fielder's choice, and Trevor Butler scored on an error.

The flurry had grown to a blizzard of runs by the third inning, when Northern got RBI singles from Bass, Beachy, and Carr.

The Huskies capped their scoring with six runs in the sixth inning. The first came when Darrick Lowdermilk stroked a two-run single that scored Logsdon and Carr. Jason Shapiro later followed with a bases-loaded, two-run double that scored Lowdermilk and Chris Thomas and perched runners on second and third. Wolf scampered home on an error, then an RBI groundout by Matt Bass scored Shapiro.

Allegany committed seven errors, while Northern played flawless defense.

The Huskies got their revenge on Beall yesterday with help from Johnson, who blasted a home run and a double, while Carr and Brock Glotfelty teamed up on the mound.

Beall scored one run in each of the first three innings, but NHS caught fire in the second and third stanzas with four and three runs, respectively, to blaze to a 7-3 fourth-inning lead. The Mounties scored twice in the fifth to pull within two, but Northern put three runs on the board in the bottom of the sixth to bring the curtain down.

The Huskies had 10 hits to Beall's 9, with Sisler contributing a double and a single. Wolf singled twice and drove home one run, and Glotfelty punched out an RBI single.

Carr worked the first four innings on the mound to pick up the win, and Glotfelty earned the save.

The Huskies are slated to take part in the Hancock Tournament on Saturday, which will include the host Panthers and Broadfording High. On Monday NHS hosts arch-rival Southern at 4:45 p.m., and on Wednesday Allegany pays a 4:30 p.m. visit to the Cove.

HUSKIES AVENGE A LOSS – It was sweet revenge for the Northern High School varisty baseball team yesterday, as the Huskies paid back visiting Beall for a Monday defeat by crushing the Mounties, 10-5. NHS sophomore Corey Carr is shown at the left firing a pitch to the plate. The righty picked up the win on the mound by working the first four-plus innings of the contest. Senior Michael Bergstrom, right, lays down a picture-perfect sacrifice bunt – one of the most sublime moments the sublime game of baseball has to offer. The Huskies next home game is Monday, when arch-rival Southern pays a 4:45 p.m. visit for a fund-raiser for the Garrett County Relay for Life, to be played in memory of longtime NHS athletic program supporter and matriarch Donna Carr. Treatment Options For Hyperactivity Disorder

Attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) is a diagnosis applied to children and adults who display certain long-term, excessive characteristic behaviors over time such as distractibility, hyperactivity, and impulsiveness. Until relatively recently, it was believed that children outgrew ADHD in adolescence. However, it is now known that ADHD nearly always persists from childhood through adolescence and that many symptoms continue into adulthood. Typically, handicaps in at least two areas of a person's life, such as school, home, work, or social settings, must be affected.

Treatment consists of a combination of medication and therapy/counseling. Medication can help normalize the brain activity. Stimulant-type drugs are most common as they have been repeatedly shown to be effective for the majority of patients. Stimulants, however, are not without drawbacks. Carefully consider your options as a parent or as an adult with ADHD. Talk to your pharmacist and doctor about ADHD medications to find out specific advantages and disadvantages.

POLARIS. The Way Out.

Northern Nipped By 'Cats; Hammered By Beall, Alco

It's been some tough early going for the Northern High School varsity softball team, which remains winless in four outings so far this season. Victory narrowly escaped the Huskies Friday when Westmar rallied for a 10-7 win, before NHS fell by a 37-2 margin to Beall Tuesday, and Allegany yesterday in a 10-0 shutout.

NHS quickly jumped out to a big lead against Westmar, scoring five runs in the first inning and one each in the second and fourth stanzas. Northern had a healthy 7-0 lead in the fourth, but Westmar tied the contest at 7-all with three runs in the bottom half of the stanza and four more runs in the fifth. With three sixth-inning runs, the 'Cats pulled away for their three-run victory.

Overall, Northern produced an 8-6 hit advantage at the plate, with senior Jayme Miller ripping a double and a single. NHS committed just two fielding errors to Westmar's four, but the Huskies fell prey to bases on balls. Northern issued 14 walks along the way.

Westmar's Erin Steele doubled and singled for three RBI.

Tuesday's outing at Beall started going south from the beginning, as the hosts scored fourteen first-inning runs, including four on an Amy Farris grand slam. The Mounties added twelve in the second, two in the third, and eight in the fourth.

After her bases-clearing blast in the first, Farris went on to add a second home run, a double, and two singles. Her teammates Tasha Wilhelm and Kacey Kahl slugged one homer apiece. NHS catcher Kayla Kipp belted a double.

Northern hurt itself in the field by committing eight errors, and the Huskies were held to just three hits overall by a Beall pitching combo of Farris and Wilhelm.

Yesterday's home game against Allegany ended with the Huskies accruing just two singles, one by Kipp and one by Kerry Harding. Emily Sisler worked the contest on the mound for Northern.

The Huskies will try to get in the win column tomorrow at Salisbury. Their schedule indicates a layoff from then until next Thursday, April 14, when NHS hosts Beall for a 4:30 p.m. rematch.

"IF YOU BUILD IT, THEY WILL COME" – The famous line from Field of Dreams sums up a cooperative construction project at the Northern High School baseball diamond that has resulted in a new concession stand and pressbox. It was Ed Carr's dream to honor the memory of his wife and fellow ardent Husky supporter, Donna, who passed away last August. Carr and a group of family and close friends built the structure, which will be dedicated before Monday's 4:45 p.m. home field contest with Southern, using all the donations to the Donna Carr Memorial Fund. All gate receipts from that game, and the Monday, April 25, NHS-SHS contest in Oakland will benefit the Garrett County Relay For Life. A cancer survivor will throw out the first pitch at each game, with longtime NHS assistant coach Jon Houser, who now resides in Reading, Pa., returning for this Monday's ceremonies. Northern's senior baseball players and coach Phil Carr are shown in front of the new building. From the left in the first row are Michael Wolf, Robert Fontaine, Matt Bass, and Eric Johnson. In the second row are Darrick Lowdermilk, Preston Sisler, Carr, Michael Bergstrom, and Trevor Butler.

NHS Netters Sweep Alco, Beall

The Northern High School tennis program picked up its first wins this week with convincing victories by both the girls' and boys' squads over Allegany and Beall. On Tuesday both teams throttled visiting Allegany by identical 6-1 tallies, and yesterday the NHS girls rolled to a 7-0 triumph over host Beall while the Husky boys took a 6-1 win.

Lakers Win Three Of Four To Take Record Above .500

The Garrett College baseball team went 3-1 in Maryland JUCO Conference games over the past week, sweeping a doubleheader from host Baltimore City last Thursday, 10-4 and 17-11, falling to Allegany College of Maryland in Cumberland Tuesday, 10-4, and topping visiting Hagerstown CC last evening, 11-9.

The absolute highlight of the doubleheader win at Baltimore last Thursday was a record-setting performance by Laker Tyler Boshart, who hit not one, not two, but three grand slams in the two games, one in the opener and two in the nightcap. He finished with a total of 13 RBI for the afternoon.

Boshart's first blast came in the second inning of the first game, when the Lakers took a 4-0 lead. They added two more runs in the fourth and four in the sixth, finishing with a total of nine hits.

Danny Flores and Matt Butler each hit a double and a single, while Jeff Romberger hit two singles and drove in two runs.

Giving up only one hit were Laker starter Aaron Harper and relievers Cliff Everett and Dan Vagnetti. Harper pitched into the sixth and got the win.

The second game was a slugfest, with the Lakers recording 17 hits and Baltimore finishing with 12.

After two complete innings, the Lakers trailed 6-1, but erupted for eight runs in the top of the third to take the lead for good. Not only did that half-inning include Boshart's second grand slam, but also two solo homers by Burt Comerford and a home run by Bryan McGee.

Boshart's third slam of the day came in the Lakers' six-run fifth.

Romberger went 4-for-4 for the day.

The Lakers and the Trojans of Allegany College both finished with 10 hits in Tuesday's game, but AC was able to put 10 runs on the board, while Garrett managed only four.

Matt Butler had three hits for the Lakers, Brandon Benson hit a double and a single, and Bernie Diaz added a pair of singles.

Leading Allegany (12-8) were Kelly Frantz with two doubles and a single, Jimmy Collins and Tyler Hostetter with two hits each, and Brandon Hostetter with a two-run single.

Getting his third win in as many starts this season was AC's Jason Zinck.

There was also plenty of hitting and long-ball action yesterday in the Lakers' game with the Hawks of Hagerstown CC, with Garrett reaching base safely 13 times and the visitors recording 11 hits.

The Lakers trailed 5-0 after two complete innings, but scored a run in the bottom of the third and then took the lead for good with five more runs in the fourth.

Cumerford's two-run homer came in the five-run fourth, while Benson recorded his in the fifth.

Also getting multiple hits for Garrett were Tyler Boshart with a double and a single, and Luke Hardwick with two singles.

Robbie Davis hit a pair of round-trippers for the Hawks.

The 3-1 effort for the week improved the Lakers' overall record to 8-7. They will travel to Essex CC this Saturday for a noon doubleheader, host the College of Southern Maryland in a noon twinbill on Sunday, and play a single game at Frederick CC next Tuesday.

The girls' and boys' track and field teams of Southern High School opened their 2005 seasons last Thursday at Keyser, with the SHS girls falling by a 89-48 margin and the Southern boys being trounced 125-7.

Leading the Southern girls, who are coached by Steve Cosner, were Sarah Cosner, Sarah Stephens, and Chanda Remley.

Cosner won the 100-yard dash with a time of 14.3 seconds and was a member of the winning 800 and 400 relay teams, which recorded times of 2:00 and 56.8 seconds, respectively.

Stephens won the long jump with a distance of 12'9", and the 300 hurdles with a time of 54.8 seconds.

Remley was the winner of the 200 dash in 30.18 seconds.

Other members of the winning relay teams were Kendra McLaughlin, Kelly Taylor, and Meghan Flinn.

Capturing second places for the Rams were Chelsea Wassell in the 100 and 300 hurdles, and Ashley Davis in the long jump.

Getting third places for the Southern boys, who are coached by Tom Tusing, were Jonathan Ross in the 400 dash and Caiden Shaffer in the 200 dash. The SHS 800 relay team also placed because of a disqualification of the Keyser team.

The Rams' next meet will be this afternoon at Frankfort. They will compete at Preston on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m., and will host Northern next Wednesday in a 4 p.m. start.

DNR Seeks Comment On Proposals For One-Year Deer Harvest Changes

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources is proposing a mid-cycle change in the deer hunting seasons and bag limits for Garrett and Allegany counties, which compose Deer Management Region A. The department is accepting comments on these changes through Tuesday, April 19.

"Over the period of 1999-2002 the deer population in these counties reached an all time high," said Wildlife and Heritage Service director Paul A. Peditto. "In order to bring the population back down to an acceptable level, DNR incrementally increased antlerless deer harvest limits. However, the most recent changes have had a more rapid impact than expected, especially on public lands."

A DNR analysis of the statewide 2004-05 deer hunting season harvest data shows that for the past two years deer populations dropped below deer management plan goals.

These changes would only apply to the 2005-06 deer hunting seasons. Any new regulation proposals would be open to public input through the normal regulatory cycle in early 2006.

The Wildlife and Heritage Service is proposing a 10 percent reduction in the antlerless deer harvest rate. For the past two years the antlerless harvest has been in the 45-50 percent range. The antlerless harvest rate represents the antlerless portion of the total deer harvest, and does not represent the portion of antlerless deer removed from regional population.

The following proposed changes would achieve a 30-35 percent antlerless harvest rate, according to DNR.

1. Change the bag limits for each season (Bow, Firearm, Muzzleloader) from two deer – one antlered and one antlerless or two antlerless, to two deer – one antlered and one antlerless.

2. Shorten the private and public land firearm season either-sex days from the last two days (Friday and Saturday) of the two-week firearm season to the last day (Saturday) of that season.

3. Reduce the number of private land either-sex days in the two-week muzzleloader season from the last seven days (Saturday – Saturday) to the last three days (Thursday – Saturday) of the two-week muzzleloader season.

4. Reduce the number of public land either-sex days in the two-week muzzleloader season from the last two days (Friday – Saturday) to the last day (Saturday) of the two-week muzzleloader season; and

5. Eliminate the three-day antlerless-only muzzleloader season on private lands.

"We are proposing these adjustments to bring the population back to acceptable ranges for the social and environmental conditions, and more effectively manage the Garrett and Allegany deer populations without fear of causing a long-term decline," Peditto said.

Interested persons may submit comments by one of the following methods: online through the web site located at www.dnr.state.md.us/wildlife/rega_forum.asp; by mail: Wildlife and Heritage Service, Region A Deer Proposals, 580 Taylor Avenue, E-1, Annapolis, MD 21401; phone 410-260-8540; or fax at 410-260-8596.

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources has announced that it is discontinuing the use of check-in stations for turkey or deer killed during hunting season. Beginning with the bow season slated to open in September, a new game checking system will require hunters to register their kills via a toll-free phone call or an Internet visit.

The toll-free game check phone number will be 1-800-379-4000, and the web site will be http://www.gamecheck.dnr.state.md.us.

"Current deer and turkey harvest levels have outgrown DNR's current system of maintaining check stations in most parts of the state for checking deer and turkeys," DNR Wildlife and Heritage Service director Paul Peditto explained.

"States with telephone check-in feel their reporting rates increase and they get more accurate and more reliable data, which is valuable for making timely and correct management decisions," he also noted. "In Maryland, the cost for a telephone check-in system would be significantly less than the current check station system."

The DNR will still be collecting biological data for managing deer and turkeys, according to Peditto, as agency biologists and Natural Resources Police personnel will have daily, real-time access to the check-in data in a more convenient format than what the current system offers. Biological data previously collected at check stations will be collected at processors and taxidermists, or reported directly at the time the kill is registered.

"Current check stations that wish to remain unofficial weigh stations will be allowed to use the state-purchased scales and turkey measuring devices," Peditto added. "In addition, we will promote those stations that wish to participate in DNR's new Junior Hunter Certificate Program," intended to continue attracting hunters to the former check-in station sites, many of which were situated at locally owned convenience and sporting goods stores, and gas stations.

Businesses that join the new Junior Hunter Certificate Program will receive free advertising space in the Guide to Hunting and Trapping in Maryland, online, and through other agency promotional materials.

New one-use-only field tags will be required for the next license year, according to DNR officials, who said the tags will likely detach from the hunting license itself. A hunter in possession of a harvested animal will be required to have a tag on it or face a penalty.

For further information, persons may consult the DNR web site at www.dnr.maryland.gov.

Eades Set To Speak To Garrett County Business Women

Connie "CJ" Eades, the owner of Marketek LLC, will speak about marketing and advertising at "Spotlight on Garrett Women in Business," sponsored and organized by the local BPW, Thursday, April 14, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Will O' the Wisp.

Participants must register by April 8 to be part of the unique "Spotlight" program.

Eades will begin speaking about target marketing strategies at 7 p.m. With over 25 years in the field, she brings hands-on experience to her clients. Her background includes buying and/or selling of all major forms of media, management of several retail and service businesses, and many years of marketing/business consulting. Eades has a bachelor's degree in business administration and marketing from Glenville State College in West Virginia.

At Marketek LLC, a multi-purpose marketing and advertising company located in Garrett County, she individualizes her services based on the needs of each client.

"She enjoys designing success for businesses," said Suzanne Nicolas, who is the owner of the Oakland and McHenry Curves. "This is a great opportunity for Garrett County business women."

Eades will discuss why it is important to know the difference between marketing and advertising, knowing your customers better, matching your customers with the most effective marketing, and tips on getting your marketing money's worth.

This meeting will throw a spotlight on Garrett County women who are in business, said Donna McClintock Fost, president of the local Business and Professional Women. This spotlight offers an opportunity for women in business to network with one another, share resources and information, and learn about marketing strategies,

Tabletop exhibit space will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. Benefits include a complimentary registration for the forum, attendee list, and a brief description of the business in the program. Exhibit space will include a draped table, two chairs, and signage.

Businesses interested in having a display at the event or anyone wanting to attend should contact Nicolas at 301-533-0331.

"We need to work together to help each other succeed in business and in life," said Judy Carbone, BPW member. "Business women provide a foundation for future economic development."

The event is supported by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

The Northern Garrett Republican Women's (NGRW) Executive Committee held a planning and budget meeting last Thursday at Mt. Zion Methodist Church.

Programs and events were tentatively scheduled for the coming year. A budget was prepared for recommendation and approval for Fiscal Year 2005.

The NGRW will hold their next meeting on Tuesday, April 26, at 7 p.m. at Hilltop Restaurant, Grantsville, with Sen. John Hafer and Del. George Edwards as guest speakers. They will report on the past year's legislative activities and accomplishments.

The NGRW also reported on the Maryland Federation of Republican Women (MFRW) western regional meeting, held last Saturday at Rocky Gap Resort near Cumberland. Local ones attending were Lois Rowe, Ruth Umbel, Carolyn Ganoe, Twila Mae Fike, and Mildred Husselbaugh.

RECYCLING BINS INSTALLED AT VISITORS CENTER FOR TWO MONTHS – As a pilot program for the months of April and May, a recycling container has been placed at the Visitors Center in McHenry for magazines, guides, brochures, and any paper with a shiny/glossy appearance. Items may be placed directly into the container. No plastic bags, said a spokesperson. Adorable Adoptables leads some of the programs as a map maker, also lectures and writes about colonial America. He is an elected member of the board of directors of the Braddock Road Preservation Association, acting curator of the Rinfuss Museum at Jumonville, a member of several historic societies, and has a television show, "Historically Speaking," which airs on HSTV.

JACK, A LARGE SPRINGER SPANIEL MIX pictured at left, is available for adoption from the Garrett County Animal Shelter. He was given up by his owner and is described as eager for attention. Also looking for a new home is a medium size Lab-mix, who was picked up as a stray so not much is known about him. "Last week's adoptable, Bear, the Lab-Pyrenees mix, is still available, come and meet him!" said a Garrett County Humane Society spokesperson. "Remember to have your pets vaccinated and licensed. Plus, bring in all feral cats and dogs so that they don't keep reproducing in our communities." For more information, persons may call the animal shelter at 301-334-3553.

"George Washington is the common denominator of everything that happened between 1753 and 1758," Adamovich said.

Ross noted that he wants to continue promoting these types of events for county students and expand to offer these programs to young people from outside the county.

"It was a young Col. George Washington who led colonial militia across northern Garrett County in 1754 heading toward Fort Duquesne," Ross said. "We can revisit that time and reconnect with the people who were forming the future of our nation."

Local historian Bob Bantz leads students along a public section of Braddock's Trail. Students also have a chance to taste frontier food, as well as hear from Adamovich and other living historians.

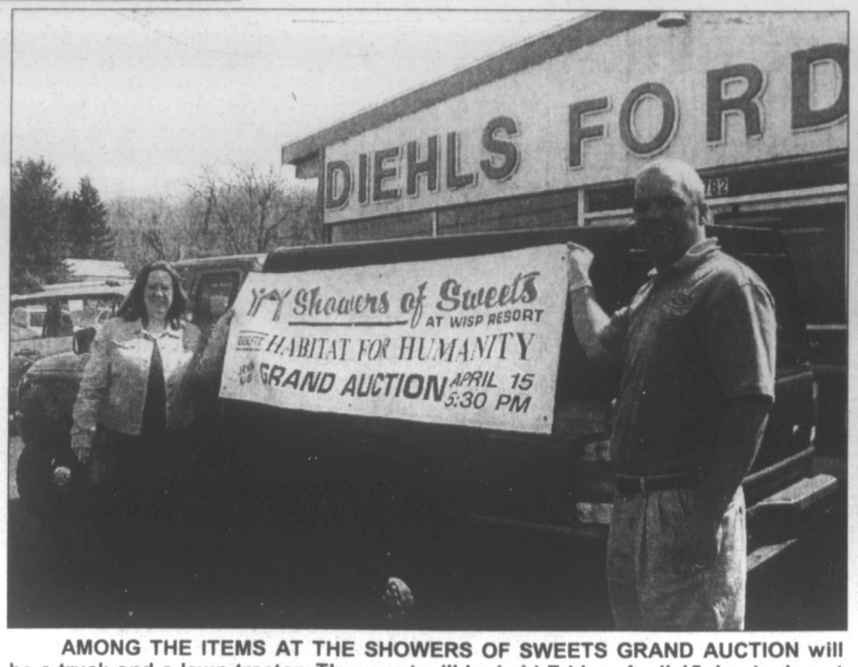
More information on area programs is available at www.deepcreekinfo.com.

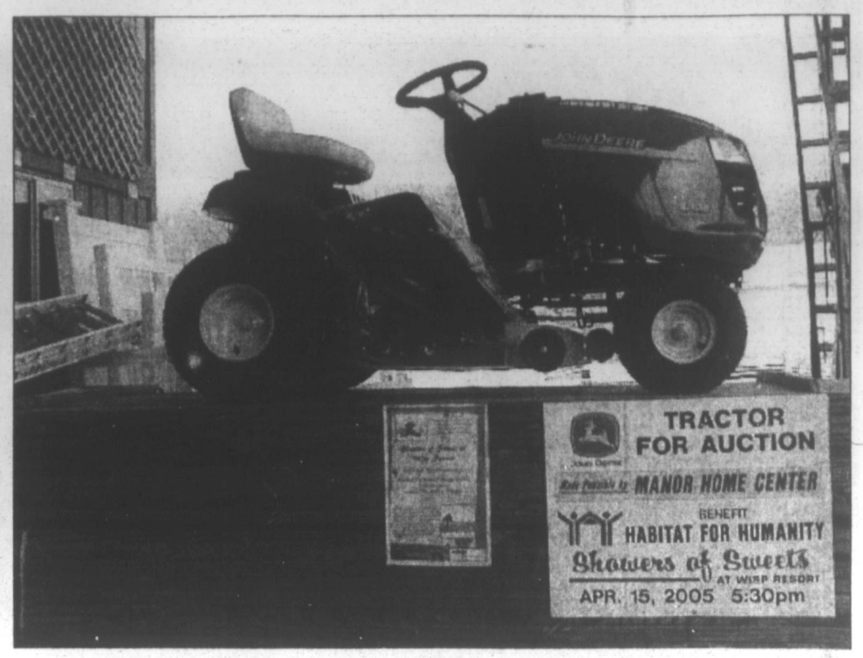
Several events are scheduled for the area.

At Fort Frederick State Park, an 18th Century Market Fair is planned for April 21-24, in which persons portraying 18th century artisans, craftspeople, and settlers will work amidst a 1730-1790 encampment. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thurs., Fri., and Sat., and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sun. For more information, persons may call 301-842-2155 or visit http://www.friendsoffortfrederick.org/marketfair.htm.

Guns at the Fort, which includes a historic encampment and artillery demonstrations, is scheduled for July 16 and 17.

Information about other events is available at www.fortedwards.org/braddock/events.htm.





AMONG THE ITEMS AT THE SHOWERS OF SWEETS GRAND AUCTION will be a truck and a lawn tractor. The event will be held Friday, April 15, beginning at 5:30 p.m. at Wisp Resort. Proceeds benefit Garrett County Habitat for Humanity. Donated by Diehl Ford Sales in Grantsville, the truck is a 1999 Ford Ranger crew cab with cap. It has 87,000 miles. Pictured with the truck are Jo Gilman, Habitat board member and co-chair of Showers of Sweets, and Greg Diehl, owner of Diehl Ford Sales. The tractor is a John Deere, model 108, offered by Manor Home Center in Mtn. Lake Park. "In a addition to these two items, we have a weekend at Nemacolin Resort, a gift certificate from Savage River Lodge, other gift certificates, and much more," said Doug Riley, executive director of Habitat for Humanity. "You can call the office for tickets to Showers of Sweets or order by regular mail or e-mail. Please come out and support Habitat. Garrett County Habitat for Humanity is increasing the number of homes we are going to build from our normal two to five in 2008." For more information persons may contact Riley at 301-533-0600 or driley@garrettcac.org or visit online at garretthfh.org. The Habitat office is located at 360 W. Liberty Street in Oakland. The mailing address is P.O. Box 363, Oakland, MD 21550.

Garrett County To Host South African Math, Science Teachers

Six practicing teachers from South Africa, four math and two science teachers, will arrive in Garrett County later this month to observe and teach in the local high schools for a three-week period. Three of the visiting teachers will be placed at Northern High School and three at Southern High.

"The South Africans will be taught current and new technologies that can be used in the classroom, such as the ability to use the graphing calculator, digital cameras, and PDAs (personal digitial assistants) so students can analyze and evaluate problems," said Dr. Nancy Priselac, dean of student development at Garrett College. The visiting teachers will also learn how to create individual web pages, send e-mail, use Geometer's Sketchpad, Fathom, and Inspiration software packages, and use Blackboard as a course management shell.

"This educational exchange will provide insight into curriculum reform in mathematics and science as studied by both United States and South African educators," Prislelac stated. "These South African educators will observe classroom curriculum reform in the United States with specific attention to the Maryland State Standards in mathematics and science. The observational emphasis will be devoted to using appropriate technology to support learning."

Next month 34 other South African educators, who are receiving training at other locations in the state, will arrive in Garrett County to attend a technology training workshop designed by Dr. Priselac. The workshop at the college is slated for May 16-25.

The following month, on on June 4, the South African mathematics instructors will return to Garrett College to engage in a two week mathematics workshop developed by Dr. Priselac. Several national mathematicians will provide training. Research for Better Schools, located in Harrisburg, Pa., will provide training on a new geometry package for middle school teachers titled "Images" as part of the program.

Several community receptions will be held to welcome the visitors. The first is scheduled for 5 p.m. at Garrett College Lakers Café on May 14. The Aldredge Academy drummers will perform, as will the Garrett College Pipes and Drums. Caroline Stahl, music major at Garrett, will sing the National Anthem. Members of the county school system, along with college faculty and staff, will be in attendance.

Several consultants will be assisting with the program's technical training segments, including Miki Merritt of Casio Inc., Dr. Stephen Priselac and William Conn of Graystone Training, and Kurt Woolslayer, a West Virginia school science instructor. Garrett College instructors Linda May-Gerard, Mike Nedrow, Mary Stanton, and Tim Foster will also teach portions of the program. Students who will be assisting with the program include Phil Gordon, Ron Bray, Gina Lewis, Barbara Sweitzer, and Linda Gordon.

A partnership between Garrett College and the Garrett County Board of Education has made this opportunity for multicultural exchange possible. Lynn Bell, Garrett County hostess for the South African delegation, is director of secondary education for the Garrett County School System. Lynn and her husband Jerry will host the delegation for a picnic at their home, as will Mike and Vianne Bell, owners and operators of the Good Timber Bed and Breakfast along Mayhew Inn Road.

The South Africans will present several programs at the college and in the community during their stay in Garrett County. Persons interested in further information can contact Priselac at 301-387-3045 or e-mail npriselac@garrettcollege.edu.

Md. Attorney General Urges Plan For Health Care Issues "Before The Crisis"

From the Maryland Attorney General's Office

Because of the heightened national awareness of issues about the medical treatment of seriously ill patients, Attorney General J. Joseph Curran Jr. reminds all Maryland residents of their legal right to decide these matters for themselves.

"Life threatening illness is a difficult subject to deal with, but it's also one that people of all ages face," he said. "If you plan now for what should happen after a terrible accident or during a last illness, your choices can be respected, and you can relieve at least some of the burden from your loved ones. If you put this off until the crisis comes, it may be too late."

A Maryland law called the Health Care Decisions Act says that residents can do health care planning through "advance directives."

An advance directive can be used to name a health care agent, that is, someone you trust to make health care decisions for you if you cannot. An advance directive can also be used to say what your treatment preferences are, especially about treatments that might be used to sustain your life.

The Health Care Decisions Act sets out two optional forms: The shorter one is titled "Living Will," longer one is titled "Advance Directive" and it has two parts. Both forms can be completed without going to a lawyer, but if there is anything you do not understand about this important subject you may want to speak with an attorney. Two witnesses are needed, but not a notary. Once you have completed an advance directive it remains in effect unless you revoke it. It does not expire. The document should be reviewed every few years to make certain that it still reflects what you want.

The optional forms are available for free through Attorney General Curran's web site at oag.state.md.us or by calling the office at 410-576-7000. Curran said that, as a result of press coverage of the tragic Terri Schiavo case, requests for these documents have increased dramatically.

"If you decide to do an advance directive," Curran said, "be sure to talk about your decisions with your family or others close to you. The legal document is important, but even more important is giving those who will be there for you a clear sense of how you want end-of-life medical issues to be handled."

FOOD CITY 500 REVIEW

Happy day for HARVICK

Childress driver leaves field and bad luck behind at Bristol

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Bristol, Tenn.

If ever a group needed something to brag about, it was Richard Childress' race team. Dominant in the days when the late Dale Earnhardt was behind the wheel of its No. 3 Chevrolet, the three-driver team has been battered in recent months, be it for an inability to win or for cheating in qualifying last month at Las Vegas.

But Kevin Harvick and his No. 29 Chevrolet signaled his team is back on the right track as it roared from the rear of the pack to a runaway win in the Food City 500 at Bristol Motor Speedway on Sunday.

It was the first Cup victory for Harvick since a Brickyard 400 triumph in August 2003 — 55 races ago — and the first for Childress since former driver Robby Gordon won at Watkins Glen the week after Harvick's victory.

"Now it's zero [since the last win]," an ecstatic Harvick said. "With all the adversity we've been through, it's good to be in Victory Lane."

Afterward, Harvick and Childress didn't try to hide the fact that their team was weary from their victory drought and from the negative publicity that came with a 25-point penalty and four-race suspension of the team's crew chief.

Todd Berrier missed the win at Bristol because he was caught in a fuel-tank violation at Las Vegas that made Harvick's car appear full of gasoline when it held only a few gallons.

"Sponsors start to look at you and say, 'Why aren't you winning?' " Harvick said. "You start to look at each other and say, 'What do we have to do?' "

Said Childress: "This sport can humble you as quick as anything, but [adversity] makes you stronger."

Harvick and Childress said Sunday's win, Harvick's first at the track in the Cup series and Childress' eighth, said more about their team and its turnaround than either of them could.

"It's a huge statement made by our race team," Harvick said. "You really don't have to say anything else."

Childress made a statement of his own during the race by occupying his old race-day perch on top of the team's pit box, something he hasn't done in the past three seasons.

"I just wanted to show that I support the whole organization," he said.

Pole-sitter Elliott Sadler finished in second place, ahead of Tony Stewart, Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Dale Jarrett.

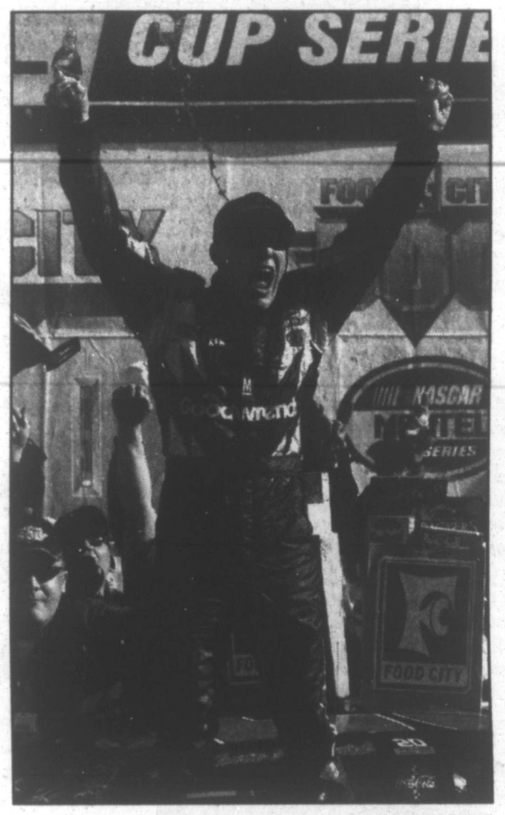
Sadler said his No. 38 Ford was no match for Harvick.

"They had a great race car," he said. "It seemed like every time he got in trouble, he would always come back through the pack."

Sunday didn't start out like a winning effort for Harvick, who led three times for 109 laps. His crew found a power-steering leak, and the resulting repairs meant he'd have to start from the rear of the pack due to NASCAR's new procedures for impounding cars after qualifying.

"In light of everything that has happened the last couple of weeks, I hoped it was the end of the bad luck," he said.

Bad luck could best describe the fortunes of Greg Biffle, who looked to have one of the few cars capable of running with Harvick after Rusty Wallace, who led a race-high 157 laps, fell back with tire problems and then a crash.



NASCAR

Kevin Harvick celebrates after his victory in Sunday's Food City 500 at Bristol. Harvick led three times for 109 laps in the winning effort.

Biffle led 91 laps and was in front when the caution flag flew at Lap 414, but he was left a sitting duck when his crew opted not to pit for fresh tires.

He was no match for those with fresh rubber and held the lead for just 16 laps before Harvick sped past him.

"We made the decision to stay out," said Biffle, who finished ninth. "It was stupid."

RACE NOTEBOOK

Two wrecks take toll on the field

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Bristol, Tenn.

Bristol Motor Speedway produced two crashes midway through the Food City 500 that looked more like superspeedway smash-ups than short-track incidents.

When the smoke cleared from a Lap 332 crash, 14 drivers, eight of them still in contention to win at that point, were sitting in cars too battered to be competitive again.

The trouble started when Bobby Hamilton Jr. ran into Ken Schrader on the backstretch after a restart two laps before.

Among those involved was Rusty Wallace, who appeared to have the fastest car and had led four times for 157 laps before a flat tire put him in the middle of the pack.

Others in the wreck were Dave Blaney, Kurt Busch, Jeff Gordon, Bobby Labonte, Sterling Marlin, Ricky Rudd and Jamie McMurray.

The hardest hit of the race occurred 30 laps later, when Jeff Burton was spun around by Jimmie Johnson and bounced off the wall into the path of Kurt Busch.

The crash ended Busch's string of Food City 500 victories at three, but neither driver was injured.

After climbing from his car, Burton had harsh words for Johnson.

"He's got to be better than that," Burton said. "I know he didn't do it on purpose, but we're responsible for driving these cars, and when something happens behind the wheel and it's his fault, I won't tolerate a lot of that."

Petty finishes eighth

Kyle Petty steered his No. 45 Dodge to an eighth-place finish, his best since finishing seventh at Homestead, Fla., in November 1999.

PETTY

He gave most of the credit to his new crew chief Paul Andrews.

"He came over [to Petty Enterprises] and calmed everybody down," Petty said. "I didn't really do a lot except ride around and keep the car out of trouble."

Edwards struggles

Carl Edwards, who entered the race third in points, salvaged a 26th-place finish Sunday and lost just one spot in the standings despite wrecking in qualifying and on the race's second lap.

He spent nearly 50 laps in the pits while his crew replaced his radiator.

COMMENTARY

Diversity efforts don't yield overnight results

By JEFF GLUCK
Cox News Service

Rocky Mount, N.C.

In the new comedy film "Guess Who?" starring Ashton Kutcher and Bernie Mac, Kutcher's character has the difficult task of trying to impress his future father-in-law.

Kutcher is white. Bernie Mac and Kutcher's fiancée are black.

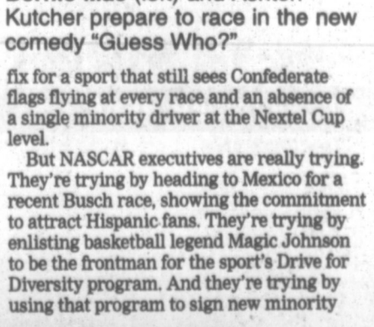
In the film, Mac berates Kutcher for not playing sports in high school or college. Kutcher responds by saying he used to be a NASCAR driver. It's a bold lie, but he thinks he can get away with it because it's the "whitest sport" he knows.

As it turns out, Mac's character is a huge NASCAR fan and loves Jeff Gordon. He has a basement full of Gordon memorabilia and a framed picture of the two together.

An embarrassed Kutcher explains to his fiancée about his reasoning. After all, he says, African-Americans are oblivious to NASCAR.

"Not anymore!" she replies.

At this point, minority race fans are still more of a Hollywood fantasy than a reality. NASCAR is doing everything it can to attract a new audience, but there's no quick fix for a sport that still sees Confederate flags flying at every race and an absence of a single minority driver at the Nextel Cup level.



Columbia Pictures / Regency Enterprises

But NASCAR executives are really trying. They're trying by heading to Mexico for a recent Busch race, showing the commitment to attract Hispanic fans. They're trying by enlisting basketball legend Magic Johnson to be the frontman for the sport's Drive for Diversity program. And they're trying by using that program to sign new minority drivers who are currently learning the sport in racing's minor-league levels.

These initiatives still haven't satisfied a group called the National Association for Minority Race Fans, which has staged demonstrations and threatened a revealing documentary last year before severing ties with the film company.

Currently, NAMRF's Web site features a countdown clock that recently went inside the 30-day mark. There's no indication of what the NAMRF plans to do in 30 days, but the clock is counting nevertheless.

Organizations like NAMRF clearly aren't the solution. Progress can't be measured in 30 days, or even 30 weeks.

Opening up a historically good-ol'-boys sport to new fans is more of a long-term process. Two years from now, we might see the first graduates of the Drive for Diversity program racing on the Nextel Cup circuit. And as Tiger Woods' presence did for golf, minority fans might begin paying more attention to the sport.

But until then, most African-Americans who love NASCAR will be seen on the movie screen, rather than at the race track.

Harvick completes Bristol sweep

Cox News Service

Bristol, Tenn.

Kevin Harvick pulled off a Bristol Motor Speedway sweep Monday by winning the rescheduled Busch Series race.

Harvick, who won Sunday's Nextel Cup race at the track, beat Jeff Burton by 0.159 seconds to win the Sharpie Professional 250. The race was rescheduled after rain on Saturday postponed the event.

Rookie Reed Sorenson finished third, followed by Matt Kenseth, Sterling Marlin, Jeremy Mayfield, Carl Edwards, Ashton Lewis Jr., Denny Hamlin and Greg Biffle.

Harvick became the second driver to complete a weekend sweep in 2005. Carl Edwards won both the Busch and Nextel Cup races at Atlanta.

McMurray: NASCAR needs to get a grip

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Bristol, Tenn.

Jamie McMurray, who is 15th in the Nextel Cup standings after a 24th-place finish at Bristol, has adapted as well as anyone to the new tires and shorter rear spoiler that NASCAR mandated for this year, but that doesn't mean he likes the new package.

"The cars are not really fun to drive anymore," he said. "I get back in my Busch car, and it's more fun to drive because it has more grip."

He said the new package, which was created to enable more passing on the track, isn't achieving the desired results.

"It's harder to pass," he said. "I hope we look back at that and make some changes before next year or at some point this year."

His ultimate solution is to limit the travel of the front ends of the cars by mandating stiffer front springs.

"Slow 'em down that way," he said.

Ask The Everyday Scientist

Global Warming Controversy

Thomas Sheahen's response to the question of whether people cause global warming, which was posed in "Ask The Everyday Scientist" on March 17, 2005, contained a number of significant errors. I am a scientist who studies the interaction of the ocean with the climate system. A relative in Garrett County sent me the column and asked for my thoughts on it.

Three prominent groups of scientists would disagree with Dr. Sheahen's statement that there is not scientific consensus on the causes of global warming. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), a United Nations organization, assembles hundreds of climate experts worldwide to summarize the state of climate science every five years or so. In their 2001 report, the IPCC wrote, "Most of the observed warming over the last 50 years is likely to have been due to the increase in greenhouse gas concentrations." Similar statements were issued by the Committee on the Science of Climate Change of the National Research Council (NRC) and by the Council of the American Geophysical Union (AGU). These groups do not completely rule out the role of natural variability in the global temperature trend, but the likelihood that it has been significant is low. These groups are also not "media-hungry" types, as Dr. Sheahen suggests, but rather top scientists in their fields of study who are committed to communicating the state of climate science to the general public. The IPCC, AGU and NRC statements are supported by computer simulations that capture the observed variations in the Earth's mean surface temperature over the past 100 years, which contradicts Dr. Sheahen's contention that this has not been done successfully.

Dr. Sheahen also states erroneously that clouds are not included in computer models of the climate system. Including the impacts of clouds in climate models is indeed difficult because computer limitations do not allow individual clouds to be represented. But the large-scale features of cloudiness are modeled successfully. Otherwise, climate models would not be able to credibly simulate many observed features of the climate system, such as the average spatial structure of temperature in the atmosphere and ocean, seasonal variations, and the El Niño phenomenon.

Finally, the "hockey-stick" diagram, which is a reconstruction of mean Northern Hemisphere temperature over the past 1,000 years, has not been recently discredited, in contrast to Dr. Sheahen's claim. A corrigendum was written by the authors of the reconstruction in the journal Nature, but it was small and did not change the bottom line that the warming of the past 100 years is unusually large.

Certainly there is much work to be done to reduce uncertainty in our understanding of the climate system so that the most accurate projections of future climate can be provided to policy makers. But much hard work has already been accomplished by climate scientists over the past few decades, with one of the results being that global warming is likely human induced, in stark contrast to Dr. Sheahen's contention that "nobody knows the answer" and that the "question is wide open."

Raymond Najjar
Associate Professor of Meteorology and Geosciences
The Pennsylvania State University

by Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen

To most readers of this column, the following excursion into scientific controversy is probably a lot more than you wanted to know about this subject. Nevertheless, it is interesting and valuable to understand the way in which scientists argue their points. This kind of exchange is what real science is all about.

The commentary discussed below by Professor Raymond Najjar illustrates the controversy over global warming. In writing my column of March 17, I tried to balance a variety of factors, notably including the need to retain the interest of the non-specialist reader, and steering a medium course between opposing sides in the global warming debate. My major concluding statement was that there is not a consensus as to whether or not mankind is to blame for the global warming that is taking place; that would be called anthropomorphic global warming (AGW). Najjar asserts that there definitely is a consensus.

Prof. Najjar makes three statements: (a) many important people have said global warming is mankind's fault; (b) clouds are represented well in the computer models; and (c) the "hockey stick" diagram is valid.

Regarding point (a), we must all remember that scientific truth is not determined by popular vote. The IPCC is severely tainted by politics. The true climatologists on the panel wrote a cautious and tentative report that stressed the uncertainties, but then political types wrote a "summary for policy makers" that distorted their conclusions. Ever since, the media coverage (by people who never read beyond the summary) has restated again and again that mankind is to blame. I agree with Najjar that the NRC and the AGU are honest and meritorious, and I wasn't referring to them with the term "media-hungry types." However, the very reason that reputable scientific organizations like the NRC and AGU write cautiously is that they really don't know whether all the other natural factors influencing climate (solar wind, ultraviolet radiation, etc.) are less important than mankind's contribution.

To go deeper takes us beyond the normal realm of newspaper columns: The British Royal Society recently issued "A Guide to Facts and Fictions about Climate Change," wherein they cited 12 points of contention, and explained their interpretation of each. A subsequent rebuttal went through each of the 12 and refuted the Royal Society's paper, citing 15 references from the professional scientific literature, including the AGU's Journal of Geophysical Research. Simply put, there is a controversy, not a consensus.

The biggest outstanding problem that has never been resolved is that satellite measurements of global temperature don't agree with measurements made locally at the surface. Without agreement among data sources, what is a computer modeler to do? The major calculations about the earth are known as General Circulation Models (GCMs). Computer models really aren't all that good, and this brings us to Najjar's point (b) about modeling of clouds. The rebuttal to the Royal Society says in part:

"Evidently, they all omit some important negative feedbacks that reduce the warming effects of the added greenhouse gases. This negative feedback is likely due to clouds or to the altitude and latitude distribution of water vapor, the most important atmospheric greenhouse gas."

Again: "A computer-modeling exercise demonstrated that climate sensitivity can vary between 1.9 and 11.5 C (for a doubling of atmospheric CO_2 concentration) by just changing slightly any of a half-dozen parameters dealing with clouds."

It is the failure to handle water vapor correctly that creates most of the uncertainty and disagreement among the various models.

Najjar's point (c), reasserting the validity of the "hockey stick" diagram, is behind time. The article I mentioned in the March 17 column which discredits the hockey stick diagram is quite recent; here it is: [S. McIntyre and R. McKitrick, "Hockey sticks, principal components, and spurious significance," Geophysical Research Letters 32, L03710, doi:1029/2004GL021750 (12 Feb 2005).] The methodology was flawed: When totally random data was put in, still it gave a "hockey-stick" temperature curve. Indeed, "the hockey stick is broken." Without that, the 1000-year temperature history can't be blamed on mankind.

No one disputes that the Earth has been warming over the last 150 years. The controversy is over whether it's natural or anthropogenic (AGW). As I said originally, given the observations of temperature variations during the 20th century, "It's very difficult to make the case that mankind caused such erratic temperature swings."

The search for a yes" or "no" answer is very elusive. There are very capable people on both sides of the question, and in the middle.

Where do I personally fall in this spectrum? Well, my concluding thought of March 17, "... it's a wise precaution to avoid producing additional CO_2...," is definitely influencing my choices: My professional work is associated with "the hydrogen economy" of the future: a time when cars will run on hydrogen, and fossil fuels will be no more.

Dr. Sheahen is a physicist who was educated at MIT. He lives at Deep Creek Lake and has taught physics at Garrett College. Persons wishing to submit questions for this column may e-mail them to newsroom@therepublicannews.com.

'Cold Case' warms its viewers with a song

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Kathryn Morris

Q: Who sang the unusual version of "Over the Rainbow" during the final scene of the March 6 episode of "Cold Case"? I believe it also was used in the "ER" episode in which Dr. Mark Greene passed away. –Thomas C. Rizzo Jr., Largo, Fla.

A: We received an absolute slew of mail on this. The version recently featured on Kathryn Morris' CBS mystery series was by the late Hawaiian singer Israel Kamakawiwo'ole. And yes, it also has been heard on "ER," as well as in such movies as "Finding Forrester" and "Meet Joe Black."

Q: Drew Carey had a show loosely based on "Whose Line Is It Anyway?" called "Drew Carey's Green Screen." I saw the show a few times, but I haven't found it on lately. What happened? –Jon Overturf, Omaha, Neb.

A: The "Screen" came down quickly. The WB Network gave the show only a couple of airings, then pulled the plug. Carey still turns up on television occasionally, including his recent appearance on NBC's "Tonight Show" to tell Michael Jackson-related material when host Jay Leno was still under a gag order on the subject.

Q: I recently watched the new series "Jake in Progress" and saw that Rick Hoffman was in it. He also was on a law show with Kim Delaney, and I have no clue what the title of that show was. I hope you can help me out. –Kim Lehman, Brady Lake, Ohio.

A: It was "Philly," the 2001-02 ABC drama that executive producer Steven Bochco tailored to Delaney after she worked for him on "NYPD Blue" for a number of seasons. It was set in – you guessed it – Philadelphia. Delaney is a native of that city.

Q: What ever happened to the series "Everwood"? They left us high and dry. I want to know what happened. –E. Berger, Plainview, N.Y.

A: Stay tuned; you will soon. The WB Network show is slated to return Monday, April 18, picking up right where its various plots left off when the series went on a temporary hiatus toward the end of February. Relatively few new "Everwood" episodes are left for this season, so WB programmers decided to give the slot to "Summerland" for a couple of months.

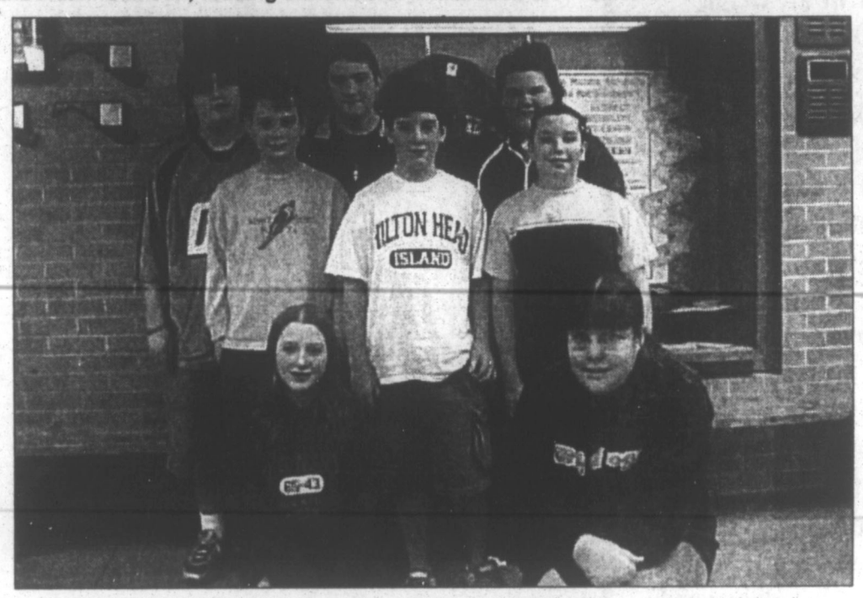
Garrett College Advisor Named "Coach Of Year"

Wendy Mopsik, a student advisor at Garrett College, recently received the Merlin Award at the annual Coaches' Forum at Franklin University in Columbus, Ohio. The award recognizes Mopsik as Franklin's academic Coach of the Year for her mentoring relationship with a student at the university. Mopsik is coaching Connie Meyers, coordinator of the Student Assistance Center at Garrett College, as Meyers continues to pursue her master of business administration (MBA) degree from Franklin.

"Wendy is the quintessence of the word 'coach,'" said Meyers. "I truly value her caring, compassionate support as I attain my MBA. While many students select coaches with business backgrounds, I selected Wendy Mopsik because I value her love for learning and her capacity to offer a supportive, savvy, reflective perspective on assignments requiring the coaching element of each course.,"

The Franklin University MBA program requires that all students select and interact with a coach throughout the program. Students can express appreciation to a coach for exceptional performance by writing an essay nominating him or her for the Coach of the Year award.

HONORED AT SOUTHERN MIDDLE SCHOOL – Students of the Month for February were recently honored at Southern Middle School. Above are the sixth grade honorees. In the front, from the left, are Ayla Fulmer, science; and Paige Fitzwater, math. In the middle are Erin Paugh, Most Improved; Claire Wilkinson, physical education; and Gina Stuck, social studies. In the back are Megan Stolbom, reading enrichment; Codie Browning, related arts; and Josh Everett, language arts. The seventh graders are pictured below. In the front are Jennifer Brown, related arts; and Melanie Custer, physical education. In the middle are Seth Lewis, language arts; Justin Weeks, math; and Adam Calhoun, reading enrichment. In the back are Charlie Sliger, science; Nick Wilt, social studies; and Tiffany Callis, Most Improved. At the right are the eighth grade recipients. In the front are Alayna Gaither, Most Improved; and Jackie Noble, science. In the middle are Brandy Kitzmiller, music; Brittany Slagle, math; and Brooke Baier, language arts. In the back are Alysha Friend, related arts; Katie Harvey, reading enrichment; and Shane Knotts, social studies.



The award is known as the Merlin Award because the fictional wizard is considered the model of a successful coach. The award – a rock with a sword in it - was presented to Mopsik by a costumed wizard along with a coaches' whistle.

"We were absolutely thrilled to learn that Wendy was, indeed, honored with the award of "Franklin Coach of the Year 2005," said Meyers. "I was asked to read a summary of my originally submitted essay."

"I am sure I learned more than she did," said Mopsik. "It is definitely a two way street between a coach and student. Connie is a self-motivated, disciplined and enthusiastic student. I would [also] encourage anybody to take advantage of online institutions," she said. Also, others should consider being coaches, offering personal support and encouragement to students.

Meyers will attain her MBA in December.

Divine Gravity

"What goes up...must come down??"

You might just question the punctuation at the end of the preceding sentence. "Isn't this Isaac Newton's indisputable law of gravity? Who are you to question this? You must be...well, kidding, I hope!"

We are not questioning Mr. Newton's law. As the title says, this subject is one of "divine gravity". This concept does not depend on earthly laws of physics. It depends upon our spiritual attitude.

Situations and events in our earthly experience do not have to determine whether we are feeling "up" or "down". Of course, as humans, we have normal reactions of happiness and sadness, but when we have faith in God's wisdom and the accomplishment of His will in our lives, our spirits continue to soar, not bound by earthly events.

We read in the first lines of Psalm 121... "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence my help comes...from God who made the heavens and the earth." Won't you offer up your soul to God's divine power in worship this week? Your spirit will soar when you give your heart to your Heavenly Father...and all of earth's concerns will not get you down.

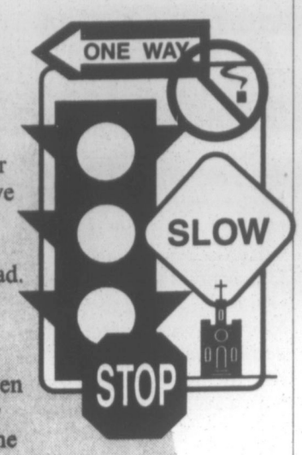
Obeying Laws



Every time we get into our car to drive somewhere, we are obligated to obey the various laws that we encounter while on the road. We should stop at the red lights, not speed, and we shouldn't tailgate or drive too fast for conditions. Even if we do not drive a motor vehicle, we should obey the laws that pertain to pedestrians whenever we are walking on public roadways.For example, we should not jaywalk, or cross when the signal shows "don't cross" at busy intersections. Generally, these man-made laws are beneficial and are enacted to protect everyone. God's laws are also made to protect everyone. Whenever we are unkind, untruthful, or dishonest, we are breaking God's laws and this may be harmful to us or someone else. Regrettably, it oftentimes seems easier to break the law than to do the right thing. Being late for an appointment, we may drive faster than we should, or telling someone a lie may be easier than admitting that we did something wrong. However, most often it is not as easy to be forgiven by simply telling a law officer that we are sorry for having broken the law. Fortunately, when we break one of God's laws, it is easier to be forgiven, than when we get caught speeding, or going through a red light. Our Heavenly Father knows that we are prone to make mistakes and His loving kindness is always there when we are repentant and ask for His forgiveness.

The law of the LORD is perfect, reviving the soul; the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple.

Salacia Oblonga Tested For Possible Diabetes Role

Salacia oblonga is the name of an herbal extract native to regions in Sri Lanka and India. The extract is widely distributed in Japan to aid in the treatment of diabetes. Salacia oblonga binds to enzymes in the intestine that break down carbohydrates. Two prescription antidiabetic medications work in the same manner, and are effective in loweirng blood glucose in diabetic patients.

In a recent study published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association, healthy subjects drank liquid nutritional supplements containing salacia oblonga extract. Their blood sugar levels and insulin levels were measured two hours after the meal. There was a trend toward a lower post-meal blood sugar level in those whose supplements contained 1000mg of the extract versus those whose supplements contained no extract. This study represents an important step in the evaluation of salacia oblonga. More research is needed, how-ever, to evaluate the long-term safety and efficacy of this extract, especially in people with diatetes.

Dogs and Children

Q. I've read some troubling items in the news lately regarding children being attacked by their family's pet. Why would a dog injure a member of his or her family? And what about the study I read regarding dogs and swings? Please give me more information. — Tamara N., Teaneck, N.J.

A. There are numerous reasons why a trusted family dog might harm a child — even if the dog "knows" the children. Sometimes the dog feels jealous or threatened by a new arrival; sometimes a toddler will inadvertently hurt or frighten the pet.

In addition, a recent study found that some dogs will attack baby swings, suggesting that the motion of the swing triggers the dog's instinct to chase prey (in much the same way that they chase cars or tennis balls). This is certainly a cause for concern, and it underscores the need to control interaction between pets (cats, fish and small pets like hamsters included) and children.

Controlling interaction means limiting contact between the pet and the child to supervised times and areas. For example, a newborn's nursery should be inaccessible to the dog (either by closing the door or installing a gate). Toddlers should not roam in the same areas as a pet. Older children should be instructed in how to treat and interact with the pet and be given responsibilities in accordance with their age.

Pets also need time to adjust to new members of the household. Dogs see the family in terms of a "pecking order," and new additions upset that order for a time. It can take months for a dog to accept the new baby in the house, and some dogs never really adjust to the change. Always be aware of this possibility.

If a pet presents a danger to your child (whether it be a dog's attack, a hamster's bite or a transmissible illness) that can't be minimized, the pet may have to be removed from the house.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It's still not known who made this wise observation: "Every family has a choice of keeping up with the neighbors or the creditors."

• The longest novel in the English language, "A Dance to the Music of Time," was written by Anthony Powell. With a final count of more than a million words, the book was published in 12 volumes. The subject that required such a voluminous outpouring of effort (for both the reader and the author, I imagine) was a group of ordinary British men. From their early school days, through World War II and after, Powell chronicles 50 years of these men's lives.

• In a related note, have you ever heard of "graphospasm"? Anthony Powell probably suffered from it. It's the scientific word for ordinary writer's cramp.

• The first woman ever elected to the United States House of Representatives was Jeannette Rankin, a Republican from Montana. This may seem like just another dull factoid, but you need to take into account that she was elected in 1916. Women weren't allowed to vote until 1920.

• It's been estimated that it takes 10 to 15 minutes to sew a regulation Major League baseball.

• I think we can all be grateful that Ben and Jerry — the gentlemen of ice-cream fame — didn't follow through with their original business idea: running a bagel store.

• Those who study such things — whoever they may be — have discovered that, under certain laboratory conditions, a tick can live for up to 18 years without food. Imagine how much money you'd save if you didn't have to feed your kids until after they graduated from high school.

DSS Staffers Take Disaster Response Class

Garrett County Department of Social Services staff members recently completed Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) training at Garrett College. The two-day training was coordinated by Garrett County Emergency Management in cooperation with the Continuing Education Division of Garrett College.

The CERT program is designed to help communities prepare for effective disaster response through training and planning designed to help ordinary citizens cope with a disaster. The training program includes disaster preparedness, fire safety, medical operations, light search and rescue, disaster psychology, and terrorism modules. CERT is not designed for certified fire and EMS providers.

CERT training focuses on preparing individuals to help themselves, their families, and their neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. "While emergency services personnel are the best trained and equipped to handle emergencies, they may be overextended in the event of a major disaster, and may not be able to help everyone immediately," a spokesperson said.

"CERT is entry level training which covers basic skills that are important to know in a disaster situation when emergency services are not immediately available. The training teaches skills to enable volunteers to do the greatest good for the greatest number of victims after a disaster, and to reduce their emergency needs and manage their existing resources until professional assistance becomes available.

"In the event of a catastrophic disaster, government, volunteer groups, private businesses, schools, community groups and individual volunteers will be a valuable resource to emergency response personnel. With effective training, citizens will be capable of performing many of the emergency functions needed in the immediate post-disaster period," the spokesperson concluded.

Any individuals or groups interested in more information about CERT training may call the office of Emergency Management at 301-334-7619.

PREPARED TO DEAL WITH DISASTER These staff members of the Garrett County Department of Social Services have recently completed Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) training, which prepares citizens across a wide strata of a community to plan for and respond to anticipated disruptions and potential hazards following a disaster. "Individuals can prepare their homes and families to cope during this critical period," a spokesperson said. "Through pre-event planning, neighborhoods and worksites can also work together to help reduce injuries, loss of lives, and property damage." Pictured seated from the left are Jay Stewart and Linda Heatherman. Standing are Tom Rosser, Millie O'Haver, Dora Hanlin, Dana Mason, Carma White, and Shirley Coleman. See story.

HELP NEEDED TO BATTLE "BOTANICAL BULLIES"

By Liz McDowell and Ron Boyer

Volunteers are needed to help control an exotic invasive species in the Bear Pen Run area of Savage River State Forest from 9 a.m. to noon on Friday, April 15, and Friday, July 22.

According to a Presidential Executive Order signed on Feb. 3, 1999, invasive species are "alien species whose introduction does or is likely to cause economic or environmental harm or harm to human health." In 2000, roughly $2 million was spent on exotic invasive species control in Maryland alone. Most people are already familiar with some invasive species, including viruses (West Nile virus), fungi (chestnut blight), plants (multiflora rose), and insects (gypsy moth). Unfortunately there are many more on the horizon. Currently in western Maryland a variety of native animals and plants are threatened by exotic invasive species such as stiltgrass, purple loosestrife, Japanese barberry, butterfly bush, and hemlock wooly adelgid.

Bear Pen Run is designated as a Type 1 Wildland according to the Maryland Wildlands Act. Like other natural areas around the state, it is threatened by a variety of exotic invasive species. Ed Thompson, Maryland Wildlife and Heritage Service ecologist, recommended the removal of Japanese spiraea from Bear Pen as a high priority project. First introduced as an ornamental in the late 1800s, this perennial, deciduous shrub is still sold by many nursery centers. Dan Boone, Conservation chairman for the Sierra Club's Maryland Chapter, describes the Japanese spiraea in Bear Pen as a "mess." It forms dense colonies, displacing and reducing populations of many native plants.

Kerrie Kyde, invasive plant specialist with the Maryland Wildlife and Heritage Service, is providing technical support for what will be the first volunteer effort to control invasive species on state forests in Maryland. Volunteers will try to reduce the infestation using mechanical control methods, including pulling by hand, four-prong spading fork, and/or a weed wrench. The effectiveness of these various techniques will be monitored.

BEATING BACK THE INVADERS – A Japanese spiraea is no match for a volunteer willing to take on this and other invasive plant species. Additional volunteers are sought to help control an exotic invasive species outbreak in the Bear Pen Run area of Savage River State Forest in weeding, pulling, and digging days set from 9 a.m. to noon on Friday, April 15, and Friday, July 22. Snacks and drinks will be provided, and free camping will be available the night before at New Germany State Park for any out-of-town volunteers. Adults interested in volunteering are asked to register by calling Ron Boyer at 301-895-3686 or e-mailing him at info@elkridgenatureworks.com. Photo courtesy of Elk Ridge NatureWorks.

Peter Skylstad, Jim Allen, and Kevin Dodge, professors at Garrett College, may also use this site as a real-life GPS (global positioning system) and GIS (geographic information system) project for their students, by having them create a baseline map of current Japanese spiraea locations as a reference tool for future control efforts.

Mike Gregory, Savage River Complex manager, is providing free camping the night before at New Germany State Park for any out-of-town volunteers. Ron Boyer and Liz McDowell. Elk Ridge NatureWorks, are coordinating the project and providing snacks and drinks for volunteers. Adults interested in volunteering for this important effort are asked to register in advance by calling Ron Boyer at 301-895-3686 or e-mailing him at info@elkridgenatureworks.com.

Free Marriage Seminar Slated At Local Church

A marriage enrichment seminar, "Toward a Growing Marriage," will be held on April 23 and 24 at the Mountaintop Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 16335 Garrett Highway, from 1:30 until 5 p.m. Registration will be held on Saturday at 1 p.m. There is no charge for the event, but free-will offerings will be accepted.

Facilitated by local residents Jim and Cheryl Iden and John and Renata Rodeheaver, the seven-session event will be based on the book and video seminar Toward a Growing Marriage by Dr. Gary Chapman. The seminar will also touch upon The Five Love Languages, another Chapman book that addresses various types of relationships, including those between family members and co-workers.

Though he will not be at the local seminar, Chapman recently met with the Idens and Rodeheavers in January and endorsed their effort to bring his video seminar to the Oakland area, according to Renata Rodeheaver.

"With biblical advice and a healthy dose of laughter, Dr. Chapman will give you valuable tips to break unhealthy patterns and to choose steps to develop a God-honoring, happy marriage," she said. The seminar is for couples in various stages of their relationship, including those who are engaged.

Topics addressed will be "communication differences," "dealing with criticism," "understanding love 'languages,'" "making sex mutually fulfilling," "dealing with criticism," "finances," "the 'nagging' wife," and "when you're not in love anymore."

Sessions one through three will be held on Saturday, with sessions four through seven scheduled for Sunday. Each class is individualized, so participants need not attend both days to benefit from the seminar, noted Rodeheaver.

Following the publication of Toward a Growing Marriage in 1979, Chapman launched seminars by the same name. Since then, he has written more than 15 books and developed two study guides, four video programs, and a daily radio program called "A Growing Marriage" that can be heard on more than 100 radio stations across the United States, according to the author's web site.

Chapman is a senior associate pastor at Calvary Baptist Church in Winston-Salem, N.C., where he has served for more than 30 years. He received M.R.E. and Ph.D. degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and has completed postgraduate work at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and Duke University.

To preregister, persons may call Renata at 301-334-8223 or Cheryl at 301-387-9151.

Farming On The Mountaintop

Marketing Plans Helpful To Building Farm Profitability

by Cheryl DeBerry, Agriculture Marketing Specialist

Farm marketing today means knowing what the customer needs and providing the products and services customers want, not just presenting what we have and hoping they will buy.

The traditional viewpoint in agriculture has been, "I am a beef cattle farmer. How can I get people to eat more of my beef?" This tendency to focus on our product as the reason we exist does not work with today's savvy customer. We must recognize that we are in business to serve our customers' needs, and let the customers dictate the type and form of our products.

To ensure that we are running our farm in a customer-oriented fashion, it is a good idea to have a marketing plan for our farm and farm products. A marketing plan does not have to be long or complicated, but it does need to include some key elements.

The first thing you need is information, and you get it by doing marketing research. You need to know who your customers are, where they live, what they buy, how they buy, when they buy, and who influences their purchases. You should also know about customer needs that are not being met.

How do you get this information? Simply ask questions of the people who buy your products.

Once you know what your customers want, you need to plan on how to give it to them. Marketing planning is key to your farm business success. Finding your niche in the market means finding customers who have needs that you can satisfy better than anyone else. It means building a relationship with those customers in which they perceive you to be especially qualified or equipped to satisfy their unique demands.

The actual contents of your farm's marketing plan will probably include:

(1) Situation Analysis: Where are you now?

(2) Objectives: Where are you going?

(3) Strategies: How will you get there?

(4) Budget: What are the costs and returns?

(5) Action Plan: When will you do the recommended strategies?

(6) Measurement of Progress: Have you achieved your objectives?

Your marketing plan will help guide your operation to increased profitability. Just as your business changes to meet new challenges, the marketing plan should be revised and revisited often to change with the times.

For more information or to discuss your farm marketing plan, persons may contact me, Cheryl DeBerry, at 301-334-6960.

Spring Planting Is Delayed By Heavy Rains

Many Maryland farmers experienced heavy rains last week. On average, farmers received between 3 to 4 inches of rain. Rain delayed progress on planting green peas, potatoes, snap beans, sweet corn, watermelons, tomatoes, and cantaloupes. Planting of spring crops is behind normal by about two weeks because of rain and cooler than normal temperatures.

Small grains were beginning to develop and were reported in fair to good condition. Barley was rated 10 percent excellent, 55 percent good, 31 percent fair, and 4 percent poor. Winter wheat was rated 10 percent excellent, 59 percent good, 27 percent fair, and 4 percent poor. Wet field conditions made it difficult to apply fertilizer applications to small grains.

Pasture was rated 21 percent excellent, 37 percent good, 12 percent fair, 23 percent poor, and 7 percent very poor. Hay supplies were rated 3 percent surplus, 63 percent adequate, 24 percent short, and 10 percent very short.

Maryland farmers have received more precipitation than normal, with topsoil moisture rated 71 percent surplus and 29 percent adequate. Subsoil moisture was rated 52 percent surplus and 48 percent adequate.

Preston County Farm Service Agency Reports

Eric M. McCartney, County Executive Director
Preston County FSA Office
425 E. Main St., Suite 420, Kingwood, WV 26537-1793

FARM STORAGE FACILITY LOANS AVAILABLE THROUGH FARM SERVICE AGENCY

Eric McCartney, executive director of the Preston County Farm Service Agency, reminds farmers of the availability of Farm Storage Facility Loans.

The Farm Service Agency is offering seven-year, low-cost loans to producers of corn, grain sorghum, oats, wheat, and barley for structures to store and handle dry grain, as well as structures to store these commodities when they are harvested as other than whole grain. However, flat storage structures to store commodities as dry hay are not eligible for loan.

Interest rates are subject to change monthly; however, the interest rate in effect at the time of loan approval is the rate in effect for the term of the loan. The interest rate for loans approved in April is 4.25 percent.

The maximum loan amount shall not exceed 85 percent of the net cost of the applicant's needed storage or handling equipment not to exceed $100,000 per loan, even for independent borrowers obtaining loans on joint structures.

Crop insurance is required for all insurable crops produced on the farm that is considered to be of economic significance. Such crops include any insurable crop that contributes 10 percent or more of the total value of all crops grown by the loan applicant. Multi-peril insurance is also required on the structure for the term of the loan.

Eligible storage and handling equipment includes new structures that are upright, bunker-type, horizontal, or open silo structures designed for whole grain storage, or other than whole grain storage structures having a useful life of 10 years.

Also eligible for loans are remanufactured oxygen-limiting storage structures built to the original manufacturer's design specifications using original manufacturer's "rebuild kits" designed for whole grain storage or other than whole grain storage, also having a useful life of at least 10 years.

Also eligible under the Farm Storage Facility Loan Program are loans for renovating existing storage without an increase in storage capacity and the purchase of safety equipment as required by Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) and meeting Occupational and Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) requirements such as lighting, and inside and outside ladders.

To obtain a Farm Storage Facility Loan or further information regarding loans, persons may visit the Farm Service Agency located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza or telephone (304) 329-1923.

PRESTON COUNTY PRODUCERS REMINDED OF 2005 DCP ENROLLMENT DEADLINE

Eric M. McCartney, executive director of USDA's Farm Service Agency in Preston County, reminds producers that sign-up for the 2005 Direct and Counter-Cyclical Payment Program (DCP) is under way through June 1, 2005.

Producers may choose to enroll electronically in DCP. The service allows producers to choose 2005 DCP payment options, assign crop shares, and sign and submit their contracts electronically from any computer with Internet access. Participants are not required to visit the FSA office to complete these tasks and can view and print out submitted contract options at any time.

The electronic service is available online at http://www.fsa.usda.gov/egov/edcp_default.htm. To access the service, eligible producers must have an active USDA eAuthentication Level 2 account, which requires filling out an online registration form at http://www.eauth.egov.usda.gov, followed by a visit to the FSA office for identity verification.

FSA will accept late-filed applications through September 30, 2005, if accompanied by a $100 late fee. Producers must sign contracts annually under DCP and can opt out of participating in the program in any year.

In addition to the new electronic DCP service, FSA is providing expanded service for producers who choose to travel to the FSA office to complete their 2005 DCP contract. These producers now have the option to visit any FSA office, in addition to their administratively assigned office as required in previous years.

For all years, refunds to FSA will be due if there is a violation of eligibility requirements or, in the case of counter-cyclical payments, if the advance payments exceed the final payment rate.

More information on DCP is available at the Farm Service Agency and on FSA's web site at: www.fsa.usda.gov.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Let's start with an important announcement. The Bittinger 4-H Club will sponsor a spring "all-you-can-eat" buckwheat and pancake dinner with all the trimmings this coming Friday from 4:30 to 7 p.m. at the Bittinger fire hall. Cost of the dinner is $5 for adults and there is a lower rate for children. Come and enjoy some great raised buckwheat cakes, or if you prefer pancakes, enjoy them too. They have also scheduled an additional dinner for Friday, April 29, same time and same place. So place these two dates on your calendar.

Last Friday evening the Western Maryland Science Exposition was held at Frostburg State University. Our kids did pick up more than their share of honors. Darryl Glotfelty nudged out his twin brother Elliot to take the top honor in the Environmental Science category, and his prize included a $1500 scholarship. John Maxim won reserve champion in the overall categories, and Mariel Hady placed in the most popular category, Botany.

Blakely Glotfelty attended a program for high school student government officers in Ocean City. This was a great chance to meet other high-quality kids from the rest of the state.

Matt Bass was the third grandchild of Ruth DiPaolo to win the Spirit Award at the Garrett County 4-H Achievement Night last Saturday evening. Winner of the Dr. Scott Glotfelty Humanity Award was Lacie Berkebile from Accident.

I am sure that I missed some awards that our Bittinger kids picked up recently, but all I can say is our Bittinger kids are the greatest.

I wonder if there is any place except in the polar region that gets a howling blizzard in April except in Bittinger. We are just a few miles south of the Mason Dixon line, and I would hate to see what appeared in the north. The wind slammed the snow against my windows, and it was a total whiteout Sunday morning, resulting in the cancellation of our church services. I hope that everyone turned their clock forward an hour and that many did not venture out in the terrible blizzard. If this is spring, I would hate to see winter here again.

Is there really any other place besides Bittinger that has church cancellations due to the winter storms? I believe this is our robin snow, and I did actually see my first robin a few days ago at the intersection of Rock Lodge Road and Rt. 495.

I don't know what it is about Leora Yaste's residence that is so attractive to the first robins coming back home to Garrett County, but almost every year I see the first robins in Bittinger around her house. It is hard to see one on our farm today with the blowing snow and also to possibly catch a glance of our white albino deer who might come out of hiding. No one around here has seen him in 2005. My painting of him and his ordinary mate was sold almost on the first day when it was on display in the gallery in Oakland.

I heard from my correspondents in Accident and McHenry, and they noted that they also had wintry weather, so guess it did spread around more than I knew. I did find out that some areas were without electricity. Now let's look at the bright side in that tomorrow (Monday) is opening day for our Pittsburgh Pirates, and the weather forecast in Pittsburgh predicts good weather for it. I did hear that they lost their game, but there is nothing better than watching a baseball game on television. I am a little sick of basketball now, and the only team close to my heart that still is alive in playoffs is the Northern Middle School eighth grade girls' squad, including Emma Bass and Megan Voekl. Their tournament is double-elimination. They won their first game and lost their second, which means they still have another loss before their season is finished. Unlike the Terps, Mountaineers, and Northern Huskies, they are still hanging in there.

Cabin fever is really bad in April, especially in my case with my never-ending cold still going strong. It is hard to believe that an April winter storm could actually shake my brick house, but it did all day long Sunday. I thought that in the morning it could not get any worse, but about 3:30 p.m. it did just that. Of course, I had another lane drifted about shut. However, I was able to take my two girls to meet the school bus on Monday morning, which was the first school day with the new time. It is "spring forward" with our new Daylight Saving Time.

It is hard to spring forward when your body tells you it is 6 a.m. and the clock says 7 a.m. When darkness falls now about 7:30 p.m. it is somewhat early, but not as ridiculous as 6:30. The same goes with my wake-up time.

I treasure the weekends when I have Caitlin and Meredith home with me. I realized while I was busy tidying up my living room after a weekend with them what odd creatures are young teenage girls. The floor was littered with a strange mixture of nail polish and tissues stained with nail polish and dozens of crayons. A while ago I suggested in this column that stressed-out people should try a little coloring. I took my own advice and did several crayon pieces of art. I kept pretty busy cranking out age-appropriate drawings for them to color – prom scenes, design of gowns, other romantic themes including flowers, horse drawn carriages, castles, etc., and landscapes. It does make me feel warm and cozy to see them revisiting their too-brief childhood.

I am sure I heard the first spring peepers sometime last week during our prolonged warm spell. But last weekend's blizzard shut them up. It is still pretty chilly as the sun is setting. Maybe I imagine their song. I spotted the first robin on my property today. Mine was searching the clear ground for worms. I wonder what happens to earthworms during an arctic blast like last weekend. Could they still be able to burrow deeper in the ground to escape a frosty death!?

As I drove around Bittinger today I saw many branches on the ground, not just dead ones but all sizes and ages. The most startling evidence of how hard the wind blew was in the woods across from Brenneman's Grove where a middle-aged, hardy hemlock was snapped about three feet above the ground level. I can't remember seeing that before in all the years that I roamed here and there through the woods on horseback in all seasons. Today's seasonable weather is especially sweet after a sharp reminder of how brutal winter can be.

Sixteen years ago my family received a special blessing with a pair of beautiful twin boys. Darryl and Elliot Glotfelty turned 16 years old today, April 5. They are not supposed to be identical twins, but close enough that very few can tell them apart. Most of the time I cannot. It is also Lea Stanton Pochet's birthday. I forget that little detail until the date approached.

As the world was in the deathbed vigil for Pope John Paul, a memory floated to surface in my mind. I remember a similar vigil when I was a child when I remembered the death of the Pope during the time J.F. Kennedy was president. It is funny what a mind stores up and then unfiles details of its owner's life. A few weeks ago I mentioned my struggle to remember an English novelist. The answer just floated up when I was thinking about something else.

I see our crocus are blooming and the daffodils are at least up, but not yet budding. It is a miracle how they can push up through frozen and snowy ground. Now it is time for the earliest spring flowers. Thank God!

I prayed to God to spare the life of the finest Pope that I can remember, but it was time for John Paul to go to his Father. I often wondered why I didn't die in April 1994, but now I have concluded that it was because my soul was not ready to meet the final judgment, unlike my little brother Scott or Pope John Paul II. Now 11 years later I am still not good enough to live again, but that is the judgment of people in my life and myself. I wish I would be brave enough to limit my prayers to "Thy will be done." That is the biggest struggle to have enough faith in God that he will make things come out right. I don't know why his will was that I become a cripple or that my marriage died or people I pray to get well do not. I know that I can't see the "big picture" or how bad things might turn into good things. It is hard to want for something good to return to my life, but just when I glimpse some ray of hope it disappears without a trace.

Just got some exciting news of the birth of a red-headed baby girl in Bittinger. Patty and Steve Diehlman became the parents of Rebecca today, April 5. Rebecca was born at Ruby Memorial Hospital in Morgantown.

A reader of my column told me that I was "the voice of Garrett County." I think she might be wrong, as most of the people in Garrett County do not much care about nature, events, or psychology.

A word of apology to the reader who wrote a letter to me and which I never did get a reply to them. It does mean a lot to me when readers tell me how much they enjoy this column. Pardon the inner part of my train of thought, but I get distracted by some bird songs. At last I can figure what I can do this Tuesday to make my life worth living. Should I paint a painting or go to the grocery store, finish that book, house work, or what? What I can't do is nothing. That is my biggest challenge these days. I can't stand to do nothing. If I could do what I really want, I would dig up some soil to plant some onion sets or tulip bulbs. But I can't do that.

The first wildflower is here! The humble coltsfoots are making our roadsides spring-like. In case you do not know your wild flowers, coltsfoots are the smaller version of dandelions which always grow on the sides of the roads and never on lawns or in fields.

Margaret Hershberger-Wagner is hospitalized at Monongahalia Hospital in Morgantown. She underwent surgery on Wednesday. Ruth Dipaolo underwent heart testing at Morgantown on Wednesday.

SENIORS IN THE CHILD CARE II CLASS at Northern High School listen as Janet Otto, branch manager of the Ruth Enlow Library in Accident, talks about the importance of reading to young children. At the March 31 class, Otto presented information on brain development in children, read and discussed stories, and used interactive CDs with the students. Barbara Law teaches the NHS class. The students pictured in the front row, left to right, are Janine Beachy, Tiffany Doerr, Christa Uphold, and Cynthia Brenneman. In the back row are Shanon Livengood, Amanda Friend, Miranda Bageant, Sandra Beachy, and Megan Ross.

A BETTER PLACE FOR YOUR MONEY!

If you think that buying a second home is a luxury only the Donald Trumps of the world can enjoy, think again. Recent statistics reveal that second-home sales increased nearly 25% in just the two years between 2001 and 2003. The primary buyers are baby boomers reaching the peak of their income earning years and investors (sometimes one and the same).

There are three great reasons to buy a second home: as a vacation home, as a retirement destination, and as an investment. Thinking ahead to retirement, a home is an excellent asset that ranks up there with IRAs, mutual funds and CDs. Very few stocks or bonds offer the return that you'll enjoy on the investment toward your retirement home.

You can enjoy a nice tax break by downsizing now, avoiding capital gains taxes on the sale, and using your equity to purchase your retirement home. Then there's the income when you're ready to retire and can sell your current primary residence!

A second home is a great investment at our low interest rates. Many investors are taking money out of the sluggish stock market and moving it into real estate, enjoying record appreciation. You don't have to be an investment wiz to maximize your dollars in a second home. You just need a little guidance from your local financial and real estate professionals!

If you'd like to buy a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call at the office, or on my cell phone at 301-501-DALE

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

Mtn. Lake Park Water System
Did Not Meet Treatment Requirements

Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this was not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we did to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor your water for turbidity (cloudiness). Normal turbidity levels at our plant are .2 to .5 units. A water sample taken 3/29/05 showed levels of > 5 units. This was above the standard of 5 units. Because of these high levels of turbidity, there is an increased chance that the water may contain disease-causing organisms.

What should I do?
You do not need to boil your water or take other actions. We do not know of any contamination, and none of our testing has shown disease-causing organisms in the drinking water.
People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

What does this mean?
Turbidity has no health effects. However, turbidity can interfere with disinfection and provide a medium for microbial growth. Turbidity may indicate the presence of disease causing organisms. These organisms include bacteria, viruses, and parasites, which can cause symptoms such as nausea, cramps, diarrhea, and associated headaches. These symptoms are not caused only by organisms in drinking water. If you experience any of these symptoms and they persist, you may want to seek medical advice.

What happened and what was done?
A problem occurred with the treatment system at the water plant. Immediate action taken was:
1) sampled for bacteria at point of entry
2) sampled for bacteria throughout distribution system
3) maintain 1.6 chlorine residual in finished water

Long range plans include:
1) explore for wells or alternate source water sites to eliminate springs
2) build filtration plant.

For more Information, please contact the Dept. of Public Utilities at 301-334-6983.

Please share this information with those who drink this water but may not have access to this notice.

Southern GOP Women's Club Meets Cohorts

The Southern Garrett County Republican Women's Club (SGCRWC) participated in a regional meeting of the Western Maryland Republican Women's Clubs at Rocky Gap State Park recently. Approximately 40 members from six clubs representing Garrett, Allegany, and Frederick counties were in attendance.

Western Region chairperson and local club member Ruth Umbel presided at the meeting, where Sen. Roscoe Bartlett was the featured guest speaker.

Bartlett told the gathering that the United States' need for oil is a top issue of the 21st century. He shared his knowledge of the history of oil production, price fluctuations over the years, and theories of how oil reached its current record price level. He reminded listeners that while there are around 5 million oil wells in the world, the U.S. uses about ¼ of the world's oil production and that decreasing our demand should be of highest priority.

Members selected Umble and Greater Frederick Club member Jennifer Perkins as representatives for the Western Region on the statewide officers' nominating committee. Melissa Bartlett of the Middletown Valley Club was elected regional chair for the upcoming 2006-07 term, and Kristie Poehler of the Greater Frederick Club was elected vice chair. These new officers will be installed at the State Republican Women's Clubs Fall Convention, slated for the last weekend in October. The Western Region clubs will host the event at the Holiday Inn in Cumberland.

For further information about activities and membership in the SGCRWC, persons may call 301-387-6399.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN HOST BARTLETT – A regional meeting of the Western Maryland Republican Women's Clubs recently featured a guest speaker's appearance by Sen. Roscoe Bartlett. Six clubs were represented at the event, including the Southern Garrett County Republican Women's Club (SGCRWC). Pictured from the left are SGCRWC member and Western Region chairperson Ruth Umbel, club treasurer Arzella Parsons, Sen. Bartlett and his wife Ellen Bartlett, and club president Ann Rebele. Insley Named An Achievement Academy Winner

The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Tori Insley has been named a United States National Award Winner in band.

Miss Insley, a student at Southern High School, was nominated for the honor by Richard Clever, director of the band. Her name will be published in the USAA Official Yearbook, published nationally.

The USAA winners are selected upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors, and other qualified sponsors, and upon the standards of selection set forth by the USAA. The criteria for selection includes a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve, and dependability, among other characteristics.

Tori is the daughter of David and Victoria Insley, Mtn. Lake Park. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Insley Sr., Ocean City, N.J., and Robert Johnson and Clara Friend, Oakland.

Weight Loss Tips:

Lose weight slowly. If you want it to stay off, set small, realistic goals. Aim to lose 1-2 lbs per week. If you lose weight any faster than that, then you are likely to gain it all back.

Add weight (resistance) training. This will build muscle. A vigorous workout will temporarily boost your metabolism, which will burn extra calories.

Eat smaller portion sizes. Eat five or six small meals a day instead of three large meals. Also try serving meals on salad plates instead of dinner plates so you can clean your plate without feeling guilty.

Keep a food & exercise journal. This will help you realize what is going into your body for fuel and how much fuel you are using by exercising. Schedule your workouts into your calendar just as you would any other important appointment or meeting.

Find a program that works for you and stick with it. There is no perfect formula for weight loss success. Everyone is different. It is about finding lifestyle changes that you can live with to help you to live a long and healthy life.

Indulge — a little. Nearly all foods can fit into a healthy diet, so if you are craving something unhealthy, have a small portion and enjoy it. Then get back on track with your healthy eating habits.

Don't get down on yourself. If you have had a bad day, look ahead and see how you can do better next time. Stick with it. You cannot change the past, but you can change your future. Start making healthy choices.

Eat more slowly. Research has shown that it takes 20 minutes for your body to realize that you are full after eating a meal.

Watch liquid calories. Juice, soda, and alcoholic beverages are loaded with calories. Try switching to water. It will help you feel full and has no calories. Try for six to eight 8-oz. servings a day.

The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland hereby gives notice that it will hold a public hearing on Monday, May 2, 2005 at 7 p.m. at the Oakland Town Council meeting room, 15 South Third Street, Oakland, Maryland, to receive public comment regarding proposed Ordinance O2005-01 and Ordinance O2005-02. These proposed ordinances have been introduced before the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland. A fair summary of Ordinances follows:

Ordinance O2005-01, FISCAL YEAR 2006 BUDGET ORDINANCE

AN ORDINANCE OF THE MAYOR AND TOWN COUNCIL OF OAKLAND SETTING FORTH THE GUIDELINES FOR THE PROPOSED BUDGET FOR THE UPCOMING FISCAL YEAR AND SETTING THE TAX RATE FOR THE UPCOMING YEAR. THE FOLLOWING SHOWS THE BALANCED PROJECTED SUBTOTALS FOR EACH INDIVIDUAL FUND:

WATER RECEIPTS/EXPENDITURES	$ 764,000
SEWER RECEIPTS/EXPENDITURES	$ 543,000

TENTATIVE DETERMINATION TO RE-ISSUE
General Permit for Discharges from Surface Coal Mines and Related Facilities

The Department proposes to reissue a State/NPDES (National Pollution Discharge Elimination System) general permit for discharges from surface coal mines and related facilities for the next five years.

General Discharge Permit No. 06CM for Surface Coal Mines in Maryland is necessary to meet federal requirements and to protect water quality. The permit replaces one issued in February 2001, and contains the same discharge limitations and other conditions as that permit.

Specifically, for active mining areas, there are limits on turbidity (50 NTU monthly avg., 100 NTU daily max.), total iron (3 mg/l monthly avg., 6 mg/l daily max.), total manganese (2 mg/l monthly avg., 4 mg/l daily max), total suspended solids. (45 mg/l daily max.), and pH range (6.0 to 9.0). For reclamation areas, there are limits on settleable solids (0.5 ml/l daily max.) and pH range (6.0 to 9.0).

The permit authorizes discharges of storm water runoff and ground water seepage to surface waters of the State from surface coal mines, access roads, reclamation areas, and associated coal storage and loading areas. It does not authorize discharges from acid mine drainage, deep mines, or reclamation areas, which may be covered by individual discharge permits.

The Department will hold a public hearing concerning the tentative determination on Friday, May 20, 2005, at 10:30 a.m. at Allegany College, Continuing Education Building, Room 8, Cumberland, Maryland. Any hearing impaired person may request an interpreter at the hearing by contacting Ms. Deanna Miles-Brown at 410-537-3173 at least five working days prior to the scheduled hearing date.

All information supporting this tentative determination, including the draft permit, may be reviewed by contacting Patsy Allen at the Maryland Department of the Environment, Water Management Administration, at pallen@mde.state.md.us, at the above address, or by telephone at 410-537-3625 to make an appointment during the hours from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Copies of the document may be obtained at a cost of $0.34 per page. The draft permit can also be viewed on MDE's website at mde.state.md.us.

Written comments concerning the tentative determination will also be considered in the preparation of a final determination if received by Patsy Allen at the above address, on or before 8 a.m., Friday, May 27, 2005.

PAW PRINTS "PLAY HARD, LIVE CLEAN" "This group knows how to 'Play Hard, Live Clean" without the use of tobacco, alcohol, and other drugs," said a Garrett County Health Department spokesperson about the Paw Prints, a Community Planning Group from the Crellin, Hutton, and Underwood Road areas. The youth earned backpacks by participating in the Snowflake Challenge, answering questions about alcohol prevention during a recent bowling event at Par-Matt Lanes, Mtn. Lake Park. "Play Hard, Live Clean" is a campaign to combat underage drinking and promote positive lifestyles among youth. It is sponsored by the Garrett County Combating Underage Drinking Committee through a grant from the Governor's Office of Crime Control and Prevention through the Garrett County Partnership for Children and Families Inc./Local Management Board and the Garrett County Health Department. Pictured in the front row, left to right, are Britney McCrobie, David Albert, Michelle Baker, Breanna Baker, and Cody LaRue. In the back row are Josh LaRue, Cindy White, Valerie Baker, Melissa Albert, and Ashley Williams. Community Planning Group activities are supported in part by funds from the Health Department to help prevent alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use, as well as teen pregnancy. Plane Crashes This Morning At Garrett Airport

An airplane crashed on or near the runway of the Garrett County Airport, McHenry, at about 7:20 a.m. today, according to reports. Responding to the scene were the Deep Creek Volunteer Fire Company, Accident Volunteer Fire Department, Northern Garrett Rescue Squad, and the Maryland State Police, according to a report from Garrett County Emergency Management.

Because the scene must be inspected by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) before details can be released to the public, only sketchy information was available at press time. Photographer John McEwen responded to the scene for The Republican, but was not permitted to photograph the crash site pending the FAA officials' arrival.

According to Emergency Management, two patients were flown by the Trooper 5 Medevac helicopter to Cumberland Memorial, although they reportedly walked away from the crash with minor injuries. No deaths were reported.

The airport was closed for a short time, reopening at 10:30 a.m., a spokesperson said.

The plane apparently burned as a result of the crash, and was nearly unrecognizable as an aircraft, according to a bystander at the scene.

As for the cause, the type of plane, whether or not it was landing or taking off, or other details, no official information was available by press time. However, according to an eyewitness

A RIDE FOR ELVA'S BIRTHDAY – Garrett Countian Elva Tasker celebrated her birthday on Tuesday this week, chalking up no fewer than 105 years of living so far. To celebrate her big day, family friends John and Katherine Michaels arranged for a special wagon trip with Ray Miller's Pleasant Valley Dream Rides. It was a chilly jaunt, as the wind kicked up for Elva's birthday. But she bundled up and went anyway, with Miller in the driver's seat and Mrs. Michaels beside her. Born in 1900, Mrs. Tasker remembers a time when a bowl of oatmeal cost 5 cents, and also recalls the age when cars first came out. There were no roads, she said, so the vehicles were constantly getting mired in the mud. Mrs. Tasker served as the secretary/treasurer of her church, the Walnut Bottom Assembly of God, for 60 years. She worked as a caretaker of others in their homes for over 30 years. She was still working at age 94, but has since retired. She is a lucid and clear-minded 105-year-old. "We love her dearly," said Mr. Michaels. Happy 105th, Mrs. Tasker! Photos by John McEwen.

N.Y. Resident To Spend 4½ Years In DOC

A Bronx, N.Y., man pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to possession with intent to distribute cocaine. Judge Jim Sherbin sentenced Steven Jacob Young to 15 years in the Division of Corrections. All of that was suspended except for 4½ years. A $10,000 fine was also imposed.

Young, 46, was charged by Maryland State Police in November after the car he was driving was stopped along I-68 for a speeding violation. The trooper smelled the odor of marijuana, and a search revealed flakes of marijuana and a large quantity of cash, on which a drug-detection dog alerted to the presence of CDS.

While Young's vehicle was stopped, a second car with a female driver also stopped at the scene. It was determined that the first vehicle Young was driving was rented in the name of the female. The drug-de-

GC Tax Office Discontinuing MVA Service

Effective May 1, the Garrett County Tax Office will no longer be an issuing agent for the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration. The Board of Garrett County Commissioners took this cost-efficient measure.

Standard renewal stickers for vehicles may be purchased at any MVA office. The Oakland branch is located beside Browning's Foodland, Rt. 135 and Weber Road, and is open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. It also offers driver's license services and tag and title drop-off, but no driver road tests are given.

Tag renewals can also be done by mail or online at marylandmva.com.

Lawmakers Deem Gen. Assembly Session "Healthy," Despite Setbacks

Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS — The 2005 legislative session may be remembered by health care advocates for what did not happen after the failure of several ambitious policies. But it was a productive session, lawmakers said, pointing to measures enacted to reduce the number of uninsured Marylanders, make medications more affordable, and ease the state's financial health insurance burden.

Lawmakers kicked off the session in January trumpeting plans to import prescription drugs from Canada, launch state funding for stem cell research, and make more changes to medical malpractice laws. All of them failed. Instead the General Assembly approved measures that are not as sexy but may be just as important.

"I'm very proud," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Thomas Middleton, D-Charles. "I think it's one of the best sessions we've had" addressing health care.

Middleton Delegate Peter Hammen, D-Baltimore, co-introduced a plan to help Maryland seniors adjust to the termination of a popular state program when a federal program begins in 2006, calling for state subsidies to help provide seniors cost relief for prescription drugs. Gov. Robert Ehrlich supports the measure and has promised $14 million in general funds for 2006 to finance it.

The Assembly also voted to establish the Maryland Rx Program to grant Medicaid-discounted prices on medications to many low-income citizens who are ineligible for Medicaid or Medicare.

The Rx plan, sponsored by David Rudolph, D-Cecil, combines state employers, businesses, and others in a purchasing pool to negotiate lower costs on drug plans — and Ehrlich supports it.

"I think it's going to have a significant impact," Middleton said.

Lawmakers also passed a measure to reduce the state's liability in caring for the 740,000 uninsured Marylanders — which they hope will reduce that number, too — by requiring em-

Task Force Busts Alleged Heroin Distribution Ring

Two Baltimore residents were arrested and charged with conspiracy to distribute heroin and various other drug charges, according to Garrett County Sheriff Dick Sanders, spokesperson for the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force.

The charges were a result of a two-week investigation with the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force in which investigators learned of a heroin distribution network linked to Garrett County.

Authorities arrested Lisa Miller, 49, and Brian Wright, 31, and recovered heroin with a street value of

Edwards, Hafer Bills Signed By Governor Ehrlich

Two local bills sponsored by Del. George Edwards and Senator John Hafer were signed into law on Tuesday by Gov. Robert Ehrlich. Several other bills with local implication recently passed the General Assembly and now await Ehrlich's approval.

HB 584 will give the Garrett County commissioners and sheriff the authority to establish and administer a home-detention program and other alternative sentencing options. The bill becomes effective Oct. 1.

The county estimates that fees charged to certain nonviolent offenders for participation in the program would offset any annual program costs beyond the existing resources of the Sheriff's Office. County officials estimate the FY 2006 revenues from the fees at $2,990.

The extent to which a program could produce an eventual savings for the county in incarceration costs cannot be reliably estimated, notes the General Assembly's Department Legislative Services.

The second bill signed by the governor, HB 468, allows the commissioners to require any person seeking to a hold a special event in the county to obtain a permit from the clerk of the Garrett County Circuit

GC Residents Ask Commissioners To Reduce The Property Tax Rate

Eleven Garrett County residents asked the county commissioners to lower taxes as much as possible during a constant yield tax rate hearing this week at the courthouse. The current real property tax rate is $1.000 per $100 of assessment. No one spoke in favor of keeping that rate during the standing-room only hearing.

"I plead with you guys to hold our rate down," retired Swanton area resident Ernie Kessell told the commissioners.

The constant yield represents the real property tax rate for the coming fiscal year that will generate the same amount of revenue that was realized during the current tax year. The Maryland Department of Assessments and Taxation estimates that the county's constant yield rate should be $.937 in FY 2006, said Wendy Yoder, director of Garrett County Department of Financial Services.

The commissioners are proposing to decrease the property tax from its current rate to $1 per $100 of assessment, which is 6.7 percent higher than the constant yield tax rate, but 3.5 percent lower than the current rate, according to Yoder.

Fred Thayer, representing the more than 1,300 members of the Deep Creek Lake Property Owners Association, asked the commissioners to reconsider the proposed $1 tax rate and use the constant yield rate. He noted that property taxes from higher assessments had increased throughout the county in recent years, by as much as 125 percent in District 18, burdening resident tax payers.

Thayer said there is a perception that District 18 is peopled by wealthy nonresidents, but many medium- and lower-income residents live year-round at the lake.

He noted that many lake residents can afford the taxes, but there are also many who cannot. "We hear a lot about the necessity of selling," Thayer said about the POA.

Gibson Earns U.S. Air Force Pilot's Wings

Garrett County resident Todd R. Gibson completed his U.S. Air Force pilot's training recently, and received several honors as he was awarded his wings during ceremonies at Columbus Air Force Base in Columbus, Miss.

2nd Lt. Gibson was one of 25 USAF officers who successfully completed the one-year training course, and at the graduation ceremony he received the Air Force Association Award, which was presented to a graduate in each flight who excelled in his or her training. He also received Top Gun awards for aerobatics, formation, and low level flight.

Primary training was conducted in the sub-sonic T-37 Tweete, and advanced training followed in the T-38 Talon, a tandem seat, twin engine supersonic jet. T-38 training emphasizes formation, advanced aerobatics, and navigation.

After graduation, Gibson was assigned to fighter fun-

Virginia Man Sentenced For Drug Offenses

A Fredericksburg, Va., man pleaded not guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to various drug offenses. Rather than stand trial, Ari Jefferson Rothman – through his attorney, William Saltysiak – stipulated to an agreed statement of facts.

After the facts were presented by State's Attorney Lisa Thayer Welch, both sides argued their respective postitions, and Rothman was found guilty of possession with intent to distribute marijuana, possession of marijuana, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Rothman, 24, was the passenger in a vehicle stopped along I-68 last August during a drug-interdiction project of the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force and the Garrett County Sheriff's Office. After a drug-detection dog alerted to the presence of drugs, the vehicle was searched, and nine baggies containing various quantities of marijuana were located in the trunk, along with a scale containing marijuana residue.

Rothman acknowledged that the marijuana and scale were his, said the state's attorney.

After finding Rothman guilty, Judge Jim Sherbin then granted him probation before judgment for the possession with intent charge and placed him on probation. For the possession charge, Rothman was given one year in the Garrett County Jail, with all of that suspended except for 30 days. After serving the 30 days, Rothman will be on supervised probation, with conditions including completion of a residential drug treatment program, said the state's attorney.

THE TSUNAMI RELIEF TEAM of Faith Evangelical Free Church will present a program and slide show on its recent efforts in Sri Lanka on Sunday, April 17, at 7 p.m. at the church, located off Rt. 135 in Mtn. Lake Park. The public is welcome to attend. The 12-member team provided labor for the construction of two cottages for orphans from the Dec. 26, 2004, tsunami and civil war in northern Sri Lanka which has plagued the island nation for more than two decades. The team also delivered clothing, toys, and medicine and dental supplies that they brought with them from Garrett and Preston (W.Va.) counties, and distributed food that had been purchased with funds donated by Faith Evangelical. Many individuals in this area supported the trip, mostly through anonymous contributions. In the picture above, team members lay blocks on the central building of a children's home for orphaned boys in Ape Kadila. Team members from left to right are Ken Gotsch, Joe Shaffer, Linda Stephens, John Diller, and Steven Diller with his back to the camera. Team member Mary-Ann Whitehair, left, a nurse practitioner at Cornerstone Family Medicine in Mtn. Lake Park, is pictured below discussing medical needs with the coordinator of an emergency medical clinic in Peraliya, Sri Lanka. Housed in a badly damaged school building, the clinic is less than 100 yards from a major disaster site – a train carrying more than 2,000 passengers was swept away by the tsunami. More than 700 train passengers and an unknown number of nearby villagers lost their lives. A mass grave with more than 1,000 bodies is near the site. Just prior to the picture being snapped, Whitehair and other team members delivered several thousand dollars worth of medical supplies to the clinic. Not pictured: Eli Helbig, Pastor Steve Sauder of Gortner Union Church, Pastor Dave Martin of Faith Evangelical, Joe Couchenour, Bob Stephens, and Ron Welling.

Meeting Set For Youghiogheny River Association

The Youghiogheny River Watershed Association (YRWA) will hold its next meeting at Garrett College in the Center for Outdoor Studies building on April 26 at 7 p.m. The YRWA is "a local organization of environmentally conscious people striving to promote, enhance, and restore the watersheds of Garrett County for all aspects of life."

YRWA membership is free and open to all interested persons. Meetings are held every other month. At the last meeting, bylaws as a nonprofit organization were adopted. The election of officers and directors will take place soon. A member needs to attend only two meetings to be eligible to vote.

At the upcoming meeting, special guests will include a group of Crellin Elementary School children who will give a presentation on the history of Crellin and the Crellin Tipple AMD project that is helping to improve water quality and wetlands in the center of their community. When the project is completed, the site will serve as an outdoor classroom to educate students on such environmental issues as acid mine drainage.

The YRWA was begun in 2000 by a group of people whose goal was to "keep the Youghiogheny River healthy and beautiful." The group is led by Edgar Harman, the retired director of environmental health for Garrett County, who also serves as a board member of the Western Maryland Resource Conservation Council and on the Bureau of Mines' Land Reclamation Committee.

"I noticed that there were numerous opportunities to obtain grant funding for restoration and enhancement projects such as Hoyes Run, but to quality you had to be an origination," said Harman.

The group has been involved with five acid mine drainage remediation projects and one stream bank stabilization project. They have also assisted in obtaining five major grants for stream improvements in Garrett County. Other YRWA activities include litter pick-up days, public education, tree plantings, and paddling trips.

The YRWA is in the process of expanding its goals and identifying issues, concerns, and threats to river values. The group encourages new members. Bird, Flower Project Now In Final Stages

The Swan Meadow School third, fourth, and fifth grade classes are in the final stages of their project to select a Garrett County bird and wildflower. The students started this project last fall.

They worked with Jon Boone using the decision matrix they developed to narrow their choices from 25 to four birds. Liz McDowell taught them about county wildflowers, and the school voted to select the top four. Then the students researched the four birds and wildflowers to develop a fact sheet on each which corresponds to the decision matrix.

Swan Meadow students presented their project to the Garrett County Board of Education to get permission for students across Garrett County to vote to select one bird and wildflower which represent the county. Next, they presented their project to the county commissioners to get their approval. Currently, each school in Garrett County has received the informational packets and decision matrixes for students to vote.

The first school to return their results was Route 40. Their totals were: Birds – Black Capped Chickadee (990), Eastern Bluebird (850), Golden-Crowned Kinglet (668), and the Rose Breasted Grosbeak (530). Flowers – Jack-In-The Pulpit (458), Painted Trillium (809), Pink Lady Slipper (679), and the Wild Columbine (1,087).

The students are anxiously awaiting totals from the other schools to know the winners, said Arlene Lantz, teacher.

The students' goal for this project is to increase awareness of the birds and wildflowers in Garrett County, she added. "The students encourage you to provide and protect their food and habitats," said Lantz.

To learn more about these birds and wildflowers, persons may visit the Garrett County Board of Education's web site at www.ga.k12.md.us, and click on Swan Meadow.

Gov. Promises To Save Terminated Office For Children, Youth, Families

by Deitrich Curry
Capital News Service

ANNAPOLIS - Gov. Robert Ehrlich promised Tuesday to issue an executive order to extend his Office for Children, Youth and Families for a year, after bills to continue or alter the agency failed at the end of the General Assembly Monday.

Even if he does extend the agency, the local managing boards and local coordinating councils — the meat of the agency — may still be in jeopardy, said Children, Youth, and Families Special Secretary M. Teresa Garland.

Because the councils are authorized through the Maryland Constitution, it's possible an executive order may not be able to reestablish them, she said. Reestablishment of the boards would be up to local jurisdictions.

"It is quite a disappointment that the Democrats in the House of Delegates were not forward-thinking enough to understand the implications to children in dissolving this office," said Garland.

The office, created in 1978, was set to expire in July, but the governor wanted to continue the office and sponsored legislation in the House and Senate to elevate it to a Cabinet-level agency as part of his "children first" initiative in what he dubbed "the year of the child."

The Senate wanted to continue the office another year so legislators could decide whether to terminate the office or restructure it. The House wanted to cut the office immediately and parcel its duties out to other state agencies.

All efforts failed by the Legislature's midnight adjournment Monday, leaving the agency subject to termination, or sunsetting, in July.

"We are very disappointed that the House and the Senate could not reach a compromise before midnight," said Jann Jackson, executive director of Advocates for Children and Youth. "Neither side blinked."

Lt. Gov. Michael Steele said what happened to the office is one of the disappointments of the session and it amounts to what he calls "cynicism."

"Just imagine if the governor of this state had come at the beginning of this session and proposed the elimination or the downsizing of the Governor's Office of Children, Youth and Families," Steele said. "What would the outcry be from (the Legislature)?"

The office's job is to coordinate the state's agencies dealing with children and to oversee budgets for local children's programs. Lawmakers in both chambers complained the office was not effective.

Delegate Tawanna Gaines, D-Prince George's, said that the children's office had a history of ineffectiveness in collaborating on children's issues. In addition, lawmakers were unaware what the administration's plans were to prepare for the expiration of the office, so House members came up with their own solution.

"We don't believe in blaming (the governor) for what was inherited, but we expect him to have a vision," she said. "And he hasn't been able to articulate it."

Ehrlich said in an interview last week that the House was "playing with fire" by moving programs of the office to other agencies and said that the House was dismantling the office and basically saying, "Here. You put it back together."

But it was the governor who first started transferring programs out of the children's office, said Delegate Salima Siler Marriott, D-Baltimore. He transferred school-based health centers, the governor's Council on Adolescent Pregnancy, and the infant mortality prevention program to other agencies.

The House only decided to move programs of the children's office to other agencies after the governor did, Marriott said. The House appropriated enough money to save local managing boards, which they thought was the best-functioning part of the agency, she said. Now, she said the governor can do whatever he wants with the rest of the children's office.

"It's in the governor's court," said Marriott. "Locals have to act on the local managing boards. The money is there."

Court.

Effective Oct. 1, the bill defines a special event as a gathering that is open to the public, is expected to have an attendance of at least 250 persons, is not held on a regular basis, and includes the sale of food or beverage for public consumption. Permit fees and fines for not obtaining a permit are also outlined in the legislation.

Local bills recently passed by the General Assembly and are awaiting the governor's signature include the following:

•HB 466/SB 376 would allow the county to increase the gross maximum weight limit for vehicles traveling on Table Rock and Wilson Run roads. The limit cannot exceed 87,000 pounds.

•HB 1407/SB 922 would allow wine festival sales to be held on Sunday in the two county districts in which alcohol sales are allowed on that day.

•HB 754/SB 655 outline regulations for gaming events, paper gaming, and bingo in Garrett County. It also allows the commissioners to impose certain taxes, which will be used to establish a Special Gaming Fund to benefit fire and rescue services.

•SB 404 would remove Garrett from the list of counties in which one-half of fines imposed for violations of alcoholic beverages provisions are required to be used for the Circuit Court law library.

•SB 378 would allow the commissioners to adopt, amend, and enforce a "reasonable" charge for disconnecting and reconnecting water service to Sanitary District customers.

Bills requesting state funding for the Salem Children's Trust School, the proposed Adventure Sports Center, and the proposed Garrett College Athletic and Community Center received unfavorable reports from the House Appropriations Committee.

A bill initiated by "Mountain Maryland" supporters also failed to win committee approval. The proposed legislation would have allowed the Motor Vehicle Administration to develop and issue special vehicle registration plates bearing emblems of non-profit organizations promoting Maryland. A similar bill was defeated last year.

The governor's next scheduled bill signing day is April 26.

Wild, and Maybe Crazy...

For the first time in many years the Garrett County Board of Commissioners has elected to reduce the county property tax rate. Of course, while the new rate is about 3½ cents less than that of last year, assessments have continued to rise substantially. The rate could be cut by 10 cents (to the constant yield rate) and the county would take just as much money in property taxes this year as last.

Generally, the new rate seems reasonable. Yes, the county will collect more in actual dollars, but with state and federal program cuts, jurisdictions are likely going to have to provide more local funds to support needed programs. Garrett County is also no longer considered as "impoverished" as it once was, which means that the formulas used by the state and federal governments to determine the allocation of dollars will no longer work in our favor. The county needs to be ready for that in terms of having some surplus cash on hand.

There is, however, one group of Garrett County citizens who are being, in a sense, penalized by the assessment/tax situation. They are the families who have resided at or near Deep Creek Lake for several generations, and who have seen their property assessments go through the roof, primarily just in the past five years. When these families purchased their land it was dirt cheap compared to today's prices. But now they are being nailed with huge tax bills which is forcing some to have to consider selling out, a prospect that most, understandably, don't want to do. These are their homes, and have been for many decades.

The county commissioners have the authority to set the tax rate, but they have virtually no control over property assessment — or perceived value — which is totally market driven. There are many wealthy people who are willing to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for lake property (just land; no house), and certainly there are willing sellers for that kind of money. Those transactions are what determine property values in that area.

Here is a wild, and maybe crazy, idea: Would it be possible, would it be plausible, would it make any sense at all, to set a lower tax rate for lake watershed property owners? Some would immediately react with the comment that "those rich folks at the lake can afford to pay those high taxes!" But again, what about those long-time, full-time residents whose wealth is not in their bank accounts, but entirely in their property, and who are struggling to pay their tax bills? Plus, even with a lower rate, the owner of a $600,000 house at the lake is still going to pay much more in real tax dollars than, say, a Mountain Lake Park resident whose home is assessed at $100,000 and pays at a higher rate.

Perhaps it's worth considering.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the Editor must not exceed 400 words.

To the Editor:

It's April 1, 2005, and this evening I did something very good that everybody should do in the spring. I picked up enough litter/trash to fill up a Wal-Mart bag. I know that's not a lot, but it was only ¼ mile that I walked. (Most of it was cigarettes and beer cans.) I had to keep stuffing the trash in the bag so it would fit. I didn't want to carry any of it 'cause it was gross! I had on vinyl gloves, though.

I also want to mention Robert Vagnetti in this for caring so much about littering. I think that on Earth Day everybody should come out of their houses and pick up all the litter that there is, at least within ¼ mile of their house.

Before I end this, I want to say, how would you like it if you had piles of garbage in your front yard in spring?

Editor's Note: The writer of this letter to Governor Robert Ehrlich requested that it appear in this column.

Dear Governor Erhlich,

As a charter member of the Oakland Elks Lodge #2481 and as appointed to the government affairs position, I formally request a veto of HB 754, Garrett County paper gaming bill. This bill is intended to create a fund for volunteer fire departments and rescue squads by "raking the pot" of non-profit organizations such as the two American Legion posts in our county, one VFW post, and the Oakland Elks Lodge. These organizations make considerable contributions to the various civic organizations, which include the fire and rescue squads. The impact of this bill will seriously affect the amount of funds available for others. Instead, the county will establish a bureaucracy to administer the program.

Also, the paper gaming will be done in direct competition with state gaming such as Keno, Big Game, and other lottery ticket sales.

There are other means of raising money for volunteer fire depts. and rescue squads, and that is to raise the fire tax already on the books for Garrett County since 1959. This tax was .05¢ per $100 property assessment. This, however, has been reduced to .02¢ per $100 property tax because of the truth in assessments law recently enacted. I'm confident the people of Garrett County would not object to this increase if the general property tax were reduced accordingly so as not to reflect a tax increase. This, instead of our county government going into the gambling business.

Very truly yours,
DeCorsey Bolden

To the Editor:

The children of St. Mark's Lutheran Church Sunday School gathered on Sunday afternoon for an impromptu cleaning-up party along the Glades walking path in Oakland. We donned gloves and grabbed garbage bags, and together gathered up all the broken beer bottles, whisky bottles, smashed cans, empty bags, tossed cups, and other bits of refuse. When we were finished, the path looked a lot better.

I'm writing because the whole time we were working, I kept thinking about the letter to the editor last week that made the claim that there is no point to cleaning up the planet (specifically the Chesapeake Bay) because Jesus is coming back anyway.

Holey socks, Batman. What a destructive and depressing stance to take. This planet is ours to live on, and we are stewards of it, according to the Bible, and frankly, according to mon Sense. It does if Jesus is coming afternoon, we st responsibility to t God's world e we are livin pete's sake, ous?

To the Editor:

Thank you for the article on the effects of continued state budget cuts on the local mental health programs. Glenn Tolbert did an excellent job of highlighting the Garrett County programs that will suffer and how our neighbors in the community will be hurt. We don't often think about the suicide rate in Garrett County or the incidence of mental illness in our children or clinical depression in our senior citizens. These are painful images, but we must look at them and know what is happening.

To the Editor:

Thank you for your recent story about state cuts to local health services. It was very enlightening.

Another similar story is the one about recent cuts made to the DNR forest and park staffs and budgets here in the county. Many people don't know about the cutbacks. They threaten to severely impact local jobs and the tourism economy if they go ahead with their plans.

There have been no public meetings on the matter. As I understand it, local DNR people have been forced to plan ways to reduce park hours, campground seasons, lifeguards at their beaches, and to plan for other cutbacks in service. There has also been a drastic reduction in the number of people working in the DNR offices.

It seems that all of the rangers have been transferred to a police department, leaving just a handful of employees behind to do the job. In some parks, the cutbacks have been on the order of 50% to 75% less employees!

Think about that. No more rangers to help run the park at Herrington Manor or at Deep Creek Lake. No rangers at Rocky Gap or New Germany. I have reports that there is nobody left behind at Herrington Manor except for a secretary and a couple of maintenance employees. That park had over eight full-time employees a few years ago!

Perhaps our elected officials have been a little too cozy with the governor to speak out against these cuts. Maybe they are counting on the governor to shift all of the those health and DNR funds that he cut to support that pork barrel up on the Wisp.

Thank you again, and please report on these events too. Our state forests and parks belong to us, not the DNR. We should know what they are doing and what things they think we can do without after the state politicians get done moving our tax dollars around down there in Annapolis.

Sincerely,

happy to see more ing sent in about dmills; I believe arrett County citi- uld keep informed natters, as the deci- de about this alter- gy fuel will affect lso want to thank felty for sharing and encourage the same. ver, believe the are a horrible s county, and I present here some information I have found about wind power that others might find interesting. It all came from the U.S. Department of Energy, and I encourage everyone to search for the same information to keep informed on such an important topic.

Sure, wind energy is a clean source of energy that produces no waste, unlike nuclear power. But it is also not at all profitable; at least not yet. Currently, wind power generates only 2 percent of the total energy produced in the U.S. This is probably not going to change in the future either, since less than 1 percent of the total land use in the U.S. is good for wind power, given moderate restrictions. Wind power is also highly inefficient, and the maximum power we can generate from the wind is about 35% of its total potential. It should also be noted that the wind can be a very unpredictable medium for creating energy. That's why wind farms are only used to generate 10 to 15 percent of the total energy production for the companies that use them.

As for saving trees and protecting our local environment by using cleaner energy technologies, the trees will be cut down anyway, due to the rapid development of the county today. That's why we have state and national forests to regulate our logging practices.

In addition, there are three reasons I know of why people out West favor energy production using windmills: one, nobody lives remotely close to them; secondly, the power potential for wind power in the West is over twice what it is here, and the winds in the desert are much more regular and reliable; and thirdly, they have many more times the land area for windmill construction as we do here in the county.

To the Editor:

In the past several months, there have been more than three suicides and a few suicide attempts in this area. Why? What are we, as fellow human beings, missing in the lives of those people who feel they have no other way to solve their problems other than death? How often do we meet a person who seems to be a loner, odder than we, dirty, or poor, and do our best to ignore them in hopes they don't speak to us or bother us with some problem? How often do we miss the signs of the otherwise "normal" person who takes his/her life?

Suicide is looked upon as the most selfish act a person can commit, and often people will say the person who has committed such as act was "weak," or just plain "nuts." Not so – that person is suffering beyond measure since it is the very core of human existence to preserve our own lives no matter what the cost. Where are we missing the signs? In our schools, cutting and self mutilation are becoming rampant, which only leads to further destruction. Yet, we continue to keep these thoughts and actions "secret." Why?

A co-worker of mine said it best – "the mentality today is that it is not important unless it affects you personally." Suicides and suicide attempts in this area do affect us all personally. It is time that we begin opening our eyes to the plight of our neighbors and coworkers; to remove our eyes from the material desires and wants of this world and look closer at what is really important – our fellow humans. We have heard it said, "I am not my brother's keeper." Yes, we are. We are all guilty of not taking the time for one another, even among our closest loved ones, hurrying to gain that which can be lost in a blink of an eye. Material things come and go; they last not. A FUNNY THING

A funny thing happened on the way to learning French; I learned German. It is a long story, but there is time enough to tell it. One has a lifetime if necessary, never more.

Strolling across the Luxembourg Gardens last weekend I noticed that the lawns had been mown for the first time this season. The grass had that intense emerald hue which comes in the flourish of spring. The leaves were out, but not quite fully opened. The very first flowers were fading, and the tulips stood tall and bold.

It was not quite like that, learning German on the way to French, but there are parallels both geographical and metaphorical.

On my way to classes here in the city of Paris I walk either by or through the Luxembourg Gardens. After I had been making that trek for a few months, I realized one day that opposite the Gardens is the Goethe Institute, the German cultural center.

Its being there surprised me first. Then I was surprised that I had not seen it before. It was a little like finally finding the vacuum sweeper after stepping over it in the middle of the living room several times.

At another Goethe Institute in the sleepy town of Arolsen in the heart of Germany, I learned much of my German during the summer of A.D. 1974. But I have gotten ahead of myself.

Even before high school I wanted to learn German. Theology was already in my present at that time, and was clearly in my future. In the '60s and '70s, German was the pre-eminent language for Protestant theology, and, therefore, I needed to learn it.

My high school did not offer German, so I took French instead. Someone might be tempted to correct me by saying, "So, really, a funny thing happened on the way to German; you learned French." The argumentation is sound, but its content is not: I did not learn French, though I did take two years of it.

My high school then hired a German teacher, so after two years of not learning French, I took a year of German, in every respect, a much happier endeavor.

I then continued my study of German in college. In fact, it became my major subject. In my senior year, my adviser revealed a secret to me. During my first semester he had thought my best course of action would have been to have taken a grade of "incomplete," and to have pursued subjects more suitable to my abilities.

The two months at the Goethe Institute in Arolsen prepared me for my junior year at the University of Hamburg. Upon my return to the states, the same professor who had expressed anxiety over my freshman well-being awarded me high honors on my senior thesis.

After college, German never dropped below the horizon, but it did move toward the horizon.

Fast forward to A.D. 2002 and acceptance to graduate school. Both French and German re-emerged as necessities. I had to pass two exams in each language. Even though my study of French was in ascent and my knowledge of German was in decline, I easily passed the two German exams, and just passed the two in French.

In the intervening generation between my first and second lives as a student, I made a remarkable discovery. John Calvin, who stands at the head of the Presbyterian tradition in which I live and work as a Minister of Word and Sacrament, was a Frenchman.

Calvin, in turn, sent me to another Frenchman, the 12th-century abbot St. Bernard of Clairvaux. It seems a nonsense to me now, but I spent literally years studying the works of Calvin and St. Bernard without ever having thought of their being French.

The realization of their Frenchness led to a successful grant application for two summers of travel and reflection in French monasteries, which, in turn, led to a renewed study of the French language.

In the way of life, one thing led to another. The two summers in France led to this year of study in Paris. Until I set foot here at the beginning of this academic year, learning French had begun to seem a natural endeavor. I expected it to continue thus. Alas, alack, it was not to be.

What I had mistaken for the French language was merely the first, short alley in the linguistic labyrinth which the French inhabit. Then something completely unexpected happened as I wrestled with French both at my desk and in the street: I began to remember German. I would try to think how to say something in French, and the equivalent German expression would come, unbidden, to mind.

This return of German has felt to me like the trees remembering to leaf, the grass remembering to green, the lumpy subterranean bulbs remembering to launch willowy stalks and flauntings of color.

After seven months in Paris, I still have not learned French. And my German? Well, it's not so bad.

Planning Commission Studying DCL Study Recommendations

The Garrett County Planning Commission, which meets the first Wednesday afternoon of each month in the county courthouse, is engaged in an ongoing review of the recommendations put forth in the Deep Creek Watershed Economic Growth and Planning Analysis.

"The board of county commissioners referred the study to the Planning Commission for its review, and has asked the commission to prepare an advisory opinion on the ERM recommendations," Planning Office director John Nelson explained. "The Planning Commission is not on a set time table, however, we anticipate its members will complete their review at the May 4 meeting and provide their written advisory opinion to the county commissioners by mid- May. Once this opinion is forwarded to the county commissioners, they will decide which recommendations in the ERM report will be pursued."

Completed in December, that comprehensive study by the private consulting firm Environmental Resource Management (ERM) resulted in nine major recommendations and an additional seven other recommendations for the county commissioners to take under consideration as they address significant issues concerning land use, growth and development, environmental quality, and management in the Deep Creek Lake watershed "for the next 25 years and beyond," according to the consultants. The recommendations are based on four ERM studies, together with input from a series of citizens' task force discussions and public workshops.

The 40-page ERM document outlining the recommendations is available for public review on the web site of the county's Planning and Land Development office at www.garrettcounty.org/pandz/dclstudy.htm, and copies can also be obtained at the office itself.

The ERM recommendations are listed below.

Major Recommendations:

1. Develop a master land use and development plan for the Deep Creek Lake Area.
2. Protect the scenic quality of the mountains at Deep Creek Lake.
3. Adopt a more proactive stance on the part of county government toward management and enforcement.
4. Ensure that new residential construction is compatible in size and scale with nearby homes.
5. Develop improvement plans for McHenry and Thayerville.
6. Create an advisory committee for the Deep Creek Watershed to assist County boards and commissions.
7. Adopt site design and architectural review for commercial development in the Deep Creek Watershed.
8. Encourage the continued viability of traditional waterfront businesses.
9. Increase public and private-quasi-public access in selected locations in and around Deep Creek Lake.

Additional Recommendations:

10. Make changes to the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning and the County Subdivision and Sensitive Area ordinances.
11. Review the regulations for grandfathered lots.
12. Require new development to mitigate for the effects of additional traffic on roadways and intersections.
13. Create incentives for business development in the existing Town Center zoned area north of Thayerville.
14. Support state and federal efforts to enforce the Clean Air Act to reduce mercury contamination from air emissions from outside the watershed.
15. Improve conditions for pedestrians and bicyclists.
16. Adjust the sign regulations to encourage signage more in keeping with the mountain resort atmosphere.

Beginning next week The Republican will commence with a series spanning several weeks that will outline the Planning Commission's discussions of the recommendations.

ACCIDENT MATH-A-THON RAISES FUNDS FOR ST. JUDE'S – Thirty-three students in grades first through fifth at Accident Elementary School recently participated in a Math-A-Thon, raising $1,789 to benefit St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital. Students raising at least $35 received a T-shirt, and those raising at least $75 received a St. Jude's sports bag. Caitlin Stanton, second grader, raised the most money and received a CD player, courtesy of St. Jude's. Each participant also received a certificate and discount coupon for admission to Six Flags theme parks. Coordinating the program were math resource teachers Christine Ashby and Maxine Miller. Two Sentenced In Theft, Drug Investigation

Two persons entered pleas in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to charges resulting from an investigation in November. Allejandro Jose Stanford, 20, Laurel, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit theft and to possession with intent to distribute marijuana.

Judge Jim Sherbin sentenced him to 18 months for the conspiracy charge and to two years for the drug charge. The sentences run concurrently and will be served in the Division of Corrections.

Jennifer Amanda Blake, 21, Hyattsville, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to possess marijuana in sufficient quantity to indicate intent to distribute. She was sentenced to 30 days in the Garrett County Jail. Currency totaling $650 found with the marijuana was also forfeited.

Stanford was charged by officers with the Garrett Bureau of Investigation and the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force, who investigated a local drug dealer's report that he was robbed, said the state's attorney.

After Sanford and others were identified as the thieves, officers obtained search and seizure warrants for two apartments in the McHenry area. Among the items found in one of the apartments was a large quantity of marijuana and other evidence establishing that Stanford and Blake were occupants of the apartment.

Charges are pending in Circuit Court against a third co-defendant, and an arrest warrant remains outstanding against a fourth codefendant, noted the state's attorney.

Kepple To Speak At GOP Meeting

Local attorney Cristine Kepple will present a program at the next meeting of the Southern Garrett County Republican Women's Club on "Living Wills" and related matters. The meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 20, at 7 p.m. at the Mt. Glade Adult Day Care on Pythian Avenue, Oakland. A short business meeting will precede the program.

Kepple, a partner in the firm of Eiswert, Janes & Kepple, has been an attorney since 1994. In addition to matters related to wills, trusts, and estates, her general practice of law concentrates on business and real estate.

Lisa Thayer Welch, program chair, emphasized, "I am sure persons who watched news broadcasts concerning the Schiavo case in Florida now realize the importance of thinking about these issues, making decisions and memorializing their desires in a way that leaves no doubt as to their desires."

The Southern Garrett Republican Women's Club invites any interested person to attend and learn more about the programs/projects of the club and this timely issue.

Lawmakers Deem

ployers with 10,000 or more employers in Maryland to spend at least 8 percent of their payroll on employee health benefits.

The bill immediately affects only Wal-Mart. Ehrlich has promised a veto, but the measure passed both chambers with enough support that proponents are confident they can override it.

Maryland is the first state to force companies to contribute to fixing the uninsured problem, Middleton said, but he doubts it will be the last. The conflict, he said, is states want to cut the number of uninsured with declining health care budgets.

"Is there any doubt that government's getting involved in the business side of health care?" he said. "I don't know if the bill that we passed is a good one, but I think it's a plan."

The Legislature also passed a technical measure making it easier for the Maryland Insurance Administration to apply a malpractice reform law enacted just before the session. But that was as far as the Senate went with malpractice during the session.

The House approved a plan to make it more difficult for health insurers to increase premiums, require neutral experts to testify in court cases, and protect physicians' private apologies.

But the bill died in the Senate Rules Committee because leading senators, including President Thomas V. Mike Miller, Jr., D-Calvert, favored allowing the new law time to take effect alone.

House Speaker Michael E. Busch, D-Anne Arundel, who initially favored further malpractice reform, on Tuesday said he agreed with Miller.

House Majority leader Kumar Barve and Ehrlich did not. Barve, who sponsored bills that became part of the House's doomed malpractice plan, promised to introduce them next year.

"I was really disappointed," at the failures, Barve said. "You have to be persistent and keep working at it. I'm not giving up and I expect one day we will succeed."

Two other policies that generated attention but failed this session, stem cell research and the importation of cheaper Canadian drugs, are also likely to make comebacks, according to their sponsors.

The House passed a measure to allocate $23 million in state funds annually to embryonic stem cell research. The money is needed, proponents said, because the federal government only funds less effective adult stem cell research.

But the Senate never voted on the plan because of a threatened filibuster by opponents, many of whom consider embryonic research to be morally wrong — which frustrated Miller.

"I'm only concerned in the sense that a majority of two committees ruled in favor of the bill and it didn't get a (Senate) vote," Miller said. "I believe in a majority."

In an interview last week, Ehrlich said he supports stem cell research and on the radio stated that his support includes embryonic research, but noted he has not committed to the idea of state funding.

"The technical aspects worry me," he said. "Is the state the right place to park this?"

Still, with Ehrlich's support, Busch expects the issue to be at the top of the Legislature's agenda next year.

"The debate took place," Busch said, "which we think is very important."

Despite the setbacks, advocates were excited about the overall package of health care measures enacted by the Legislature.

Lawmakers, said one leading advocate, seem to be coming around to the notion that the state needs to fix a fractured health care system.

"I think it's been fantastic year," said Glenn Schneider, executive director of the Health Care For All coalition. "I hope it's the beginning of a long and wonderful health care reform process."

Annual Children's Literature Fest Slated At Frostburg State

The 2005 Spring Festival of Children's Literature will be held Friday, April 29, and Saturday, April 30, on the campus of Frostburg State University. In its 23rd year, the festival will again feature a well-known group of award-winning authors and illustrators, including Laurie Halse Anderson, Keiko Kasza, David Harrison and Walter Wick.

Halse Anderson is an author of young-adult books, as well as picture books. She says that her experience with animals has been very important to her life.

Kasza, a former graphic designer, is now an author and illustrator, who says that the work of Arnold Lobel has influenced her the most.

She has written several books, including "My Lucky Day", "A Mother for Choco," "The Wolf's Chicken Stew," "Dorothy and Mikey," and "When the Elephants Walk."

Harrison is one of Missouri's most successful and famous authors. He has received numerous Children's Choice Awards and nominations for Best Books for Young Adults.

His books are often educational (drawing on his science background) and are always "wildly entertaining." Some of his titles include "Volcano: Nature's Incredible Fireworks," "The Alligator in the Closet and Other Poems Around the House," "Dylan, the Eagle Hearted Chicken," and others.

Wick is a photographer fascinated with science and visual perceptions. He became a children's author when a photo of various odds and ends sparked the idea for the first "I Spy" book.

His earlier photographic puzzles have been featured in "Psychology Today," "Discover," "Games," and "Let's Find Out." As a child, he said he loved to tinker and build, and even made a skateboard out of roller skates that he fastened to pieces of plywood.

Some of his titles include "A Drop of Water: A Book of Science and Wonder," "Walter Wick's Optical Tricks," "Can You See What I See?," "Dream Machine," and an "I Spy" book series, as well as many others.

Each year, approximately 350 librarians, educators, parents, and students come to FSU to share their love of children's literature and to learn more about successful ways to share that love with children, according to a festival spokesperson.

"The Literature Festival provides an opportunity for its participants to interact first-hand with the featured authors and illustrators, who bring characters to life and [illegible] with [illegible] authors and [illegible] Shakespeare [illegible] the festival [illegible] large-group presentations by the featured authors and illustrators, offered on a personal and relaxed environment, as well as informative small group sessions. Topics range from selecting quality children's books for a classroom to keeping social studies alive with historical fiction. An extensive book selection is available for purchase and autographing opportunities.

Admission to the festival is by registration only and is limited in number. Pre-registrations are encouraged, and pre-orders are available for books that will be featured at the festival.

To register or for more information, persons may call the FSU Children's Literature Centre at 301-687-4420 or visit the web site at www.frostburg.edu/projects/clc/of the crash who spoke with a reporter from The Republican, the pilot was apparently attempting to land the craft, but was coming in too fast. As the pilot tried to go back up for a second try, the plane, according to the bystander, clipped the tops of trees and came down. Apparently the crosswinds were heavy this morning, information that is also unsubstantiated but was reported by the bystander, who was not connected to the airport but was nearby at the time.

A complete and official report will be published in next week's issue of The Republican.

Joan Schelling presented a petition with 38 signatures requesting the commissioners adopt the constant yield rate.

"With these increases, we don't see what we're getting back," she said. "You're not working well with what you have now, and yet you want more."

Vickie Stone said most Garrett County residents could not afford the taxes because of low-paying jobs. She asked the county to scale back the budget.

"Spending has gotten completely out of control in the last few years," Swanton area resident Melvin Sweitzer told the commissioners. He noted that county employee salaries had increased much more than Social Security payments had, unnecessary road work had been completed, an exhibit hall will be built, and numerous sanitary projects are proposed.

Bittinger resident Anthony Don Moss said he decided to retire here from Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1990 and intended never to move again. But after getting his last tax bill, he thought, "we're going to have to leave."

"Go back and look at your numbers," he asked the commissioners.

It is estimated that the county's assessable base will increase by 10.6 percent – from about $2.219 billion in FY '05 to an estimated $2.453 billion in FY '06. In order to offset this increase, the state calculated that the tax rate for FY '06 should be $0.937 per $100 of assessment.

The current tax rate is expected to yield nearly $23 million in revenue for the county for FY '05. Keeping that rate and not reducing it to the constant yield tax rate will result in a 10.6 increase in revenue amounting to $2,428,321, Yoder noted.

Yoder said the $1 rate would generate $1,545,428 in additional property tax revenue over that of the constant yield, excluding Oakland's and Mtn. Lake Park's tax differentials.

Commission board chairman Ernie Gregg thanked the residents for their input and said the tax rate would be set on June 14 at 10 a.m. in the commissioners' meeting room. The county's FY '06 operating and capital budget will be presented at that time as well.

The process of establishing the FY '06 capital and operating budget began several weeks ago. County Administrator Monty Pagenhardt said the budget was projected at about $56 million, based on a tax rate of $1. County departments, however, have submitted preliminary budget requests totaling more than $67 million. Pagenhardt said department heads were instructed last Friday to take their budgets back and reduce their requests.

FY '06 begins July 1, 2005.

Fleeing, Eluding Case Heard In GC Circuit Court

A McHenry man pleaded guilty in Garrett County Circuit Court last week to fleeing from and eluding police. Related traffic charges against Guy Paul Beitzel were dismissed upon his plea.

Judge Jim Sherbin sentenced Beitzel to six months in the Garrett County Jail, with all of that suspended. He was placed on supervised probation, with conditions that include substance abuse treatment and payment of a $750 fine.

Beitzel, 20, was arrested in September after Maryland State Police attempted to stop the vehicle he was driving after it was observed speeding across the parking lot of a McHenry business and failing to stop before entering onto Garrett Highway.

The vehicle continued southbound at increasing speed and turned into another parking lot, where the driver fled on foot. Several hours later, Beitzel was located and arrested.

In other Circuit Court news, John Wayne Strawser Jr., 27, Swanton, pleaded guilty last week to harassment and reckless driving. For the harassment charge, Strawser was sentenced to 90 days in the Garrett County and was fined $500. The jail sentence was suspended, and he was placed on probation.

For the reckless driving charge, a $500 fine was imposed but $300 was suspended, and probation was imposed. Conditions of probation include having no contact with the victims and payment of the fines.

He was charged last June after an Oakland area resident reported that Strawser pursued the vehicle in which he and his family were traveling in the Crellin area. Strawser reportedly followed the vehicle closely, pulled beside it, yelled at the occupants, and caused the victim to speed to avoid him. As the victims turned from Hutton Road onto Dilly Road, Strawser – traveling at a high rate of speed – wrecked his vehicle when he was unable to make the turn.

In other court news, David Wayne Welch, 42, Terra Alta, W.Va., pleaded guilty this week to driving while his license and privilege were revoked. The judge sentenced him to six months in the Garrett County Jail, with the sentence to run consecutively to an 18-month sentence he is currently serving for other traffic violations.

Welch was arrested and charged by Garrett County sheriff's deputies in July after he was seen driving in the Mtn. Lake Park area by an officer who had prior knowledge that Welch's privilege was revoked.

THE FIRST FULL-COLOR CALENDAR of events is now available from the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce. Made possible with sponsorship from Long & Foster Real Estate Sales and Resort Rentals, the slick brochure lists events throughout the county for the spring and summer of 2005. The publication is available at various locations around the county, including the Visitors Center in McHenry and the 1885 Train Station in Oakland.

Letters

day gets passed to someone else upon your death, but the love you give away today goes on for generations to come.

Finally, take time to find forgiveness for one another, releasing hidden anger and hatred. It only destroys the person carrying the pain, not the one aimed at. Pray for one another, taking your eyes off yourself, and you will be surprised at the relief you will find.

To the Editor:

The citizens of Western Maryland should be outraged that the Maryland Forest industry (MFA) was able to defeat the bill designed to protect the largest old-growth forest left in the state. The Crabtree Wildlands bill was designed to do this. Supposedly, this land belongs to the public, but the forest industry seems able to control how public lands are used and preserved.

Any old-growth forest remaining in Maryland is a precious asset to the community. Thousands of people are willing to travel each year to see remnant old-growth forests, and the community derives the benefits from these visitors.

The Crabtree bill was amended by the House of Delegates to protect only 250 acres of the old-growth forest rather than the 3,000 acres originally proposed. This amended bill would have protected only a portion of the old growth forest, and given it no protective buffers. Even the amended bill was opposed by the MFA.

The Crabtree bill was supported by 28 environmental organizations across Maryland that represent more than 200,000 individuals. MFA factually stated the bill was designed by "downstate delegates." Something is wrong when western Maryland legislators support only legislation approved by MFA.

In 1917, when Herrington Manor was given to the public, it contained over 400 acres of "virgin hardwoods." This precious old-growth forest was managed into oblivion by DNR and the forest industry. Why should the public trust these groups to do a better job protecting Crabtree?

The annual work plans for public forests are now available for public comment. Commenting on these plans never seems to change their outcome, but it's an opportunity to tell DNR that public forests should be managed for the public good, and not for themselves and forest industry.

DNR gets to keep most of the money that comes from logging public forests. It's no wonder they continue to insist public forests be logged. Until this incentive program is changed, there is little likelihood that DNR will change. How can we expect forests to be managed for the public good when we reward our responsible state agency for cutting them down?

To the Editor:

Please allow me to share a recent correspondence that sheds light on the effects of high mountain wind power facilities on local residents:

"I live in Tucker County approximately 1.5 miles from the Backbone Mountain wind turbines and have tried everything to get used to them. A brief visit to one of the viewing areas certainly gives no true impression of what it is like to be forced to live with them. We have now suffered for three long years under their hideous shadows. They have taken over the entire landscape and are in our sight no matter where we go day or night, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"The movement is impossible to ignore no matter how hard we try, and the noise they make travels miles and miles down the mountains and hollows disturbing people who cannot even see them from their homes. I compare the noise to Chinese water torture or fingernails on a chalkboard or water dripping in a pan. Even on the calmest summer nights the endless drumming goes on; windows closed, pillows over the head, it is still inescapable.

"While we were led to believe this would be a clean, quiet, pristine, and environmentally friendly way to address energy problems and give a huge boost to our ailing economy, I feel we have been tricked. There appears to be no recourse or plan to compensate us for property value losses, erosion of our quality of life, or mental anguish. Besides these 44 wind turbines, thousands more are in the pipeline! God help us!"

I would never sentence anyone to such an existence no matter where they live. And I cannot believe our Public Service Commission or legislators want to either.

Indeed, we have to face up to our energy situations in the U.S./W.Va., but is creating more suffering the way we want to go? Surely, national leadership for conservation during a transition period of incented research and expedited engineering equal to space travel, biomedical, and communication technology is preferable. West Virginia has and continues to give more than its share. I think it is time to clean up our act (creating new jobs in the process), protect what little we have left, and perhaps insist on a few sacrifices, if necessary, somewhere else.

Rams Cage Wildcats, Defeat Campers Twice, Lead Huskies

The varsity baseball team of Southern High School continued to have success in Western Maryland Interscholastic League games this past week, as the Rams edged host Allegany on Saturday, 8-7, currently hold a 14-8 lead over host Northern in a game that had to be suspended in the ninth inning because of darkness on Monday, and handed Allegany another defeat last evening in the Rams' home opener, 8-0.

The Rams are now 5-1 overall and 4-0 in the WMIL, with the Northern contest yet undetermined.

It was reported in last week's issue of The Republican that the Rams also edged host Westmar last Wednesday, 6-5, but details of the game were not received until Friday.

Highlights of that game for the Rams and their fans were a three-run, first-inning homer by Nick Gregg for the Rams, and a game-winning, RBI triple by Tyler Graham in the top of the seventh inning.

After the Rams took a 4-0 lead, the Wildcats rallied for two runs in the bottom of the first. Southern put another run on the board in the second, but by the bottom of the fourth, the home team had knotted the score at 5-5.

After scoreless fifth and sixth innings, Matt Davis led off the Rams' half of the seventh with a walk. He moved to second on a sacrifice by Brad Reese and then scored the game-winner on Graham's two-out triple.

Bret DeWitt pitched the first six innings for the Rams, and Aaron Louden came on in the seventh to record two strike-outs and get the save.

The Rams' eight-hit performance was led by Cory Bosley, who hit a triple and a single for two RBI, and Louden, who rapped a pair of doubles.

Recording two doubles for the Wildcats was Jamie Stowell, while Trent Morris and Josiah Dawson each hit two singles. Dawson also had two RBI.

The Southern junior varsity also played the Westmar jayvees, handing them a 12-0 defeat.

Reese had an excellent game at the plate against Allegany, going 4-for-5 with a first-inning home run, a double, and two singles, while Scott Wildesen ripped a grand slam in the Rams' five-run third inning.

Southern held a 7-0 lead after 2½ innings, but the Campers rallied for two runs in the bottom of the third, one each in the fourth and fifth, and two in the sixth to cut the Rams' lead to 7-6.

An unearned run in the top of the seventh for the Rams, giving them an 8-6 advantage, would prove to be the game-winner.

Louden pitched into the seventh inning for Southern before giving way to Wildesen, who gave up back-to-back singles to Hunter Files and Tim Lease. A double steal allowed Files to come home, cutting Southern's lead to a single run, and Lease advanced to second with just one out.

But the senior hurler struck out the next two batters to end the game and earn a save. Louden finished with seven strike-outs.

Getting three singles for the Rams was Anthony Schrock, while Graham hit two.

Pacing the Campers' effort at the plate were Aaron Kline with two singles and an RBI, Files with two singles, and Jordan Shipe with a two-run single.

Zach Braithwaite, who took over for Allegany starter Kyle Roberts in the fourth, gave up only one unearned run over the final four innings.

The clash with county-rival Northern on Monday was a barnburner all the way, with the score tied at 5-5 going into the seventh inning, the Rams taking an 8-5 lead with three runs in the top of the eighth, but the Huskies coming right back with three of their own runs in the bottom of the frame to make it 8-8, forcing a ninth inning.

Then the Rams erupted for six runs in the top of the ninth on four consecutive two-out hits to give themselves a commanding 14-8 lead, but that's when the game had to be suspended because of darkness. It will be completed at a later date.

A solo home run by Cory Bosley gave the Rams an early 1-0 lead, and they made it 5-0 with four runs in the third behind an RBI single by Wildesen and a two-run single by Gregg.

The Huskies responded with four runs in the bottom of the third, as Trevor Butler led off with a single, advanced to second on a single by Preston Sisler, and scored on a single by Greg Beachy. Corey Carr followed with a three-run homer to cut the Rams' lead to 5-4.

The next 2½ innings were scoreless, but the Huskies tied it at 5-5 with a run in the bottom of the sixth.

It appeared that the Rams would end it in the top of the eighth when Reese singled, Bosley followed with his second home run of the day, and Graham came home on a sacrifice fly by Louden to put Southern up 8-5.

However, the home team was not ready to concede, as Michael Bergstrom rapped a two-run double for the Huskies and later came home on a single by Michael Wolf to tie it at 8-8.

The Rams' six runs in the ninth were scored on RBI singles by Bosley, Schrock, and Louden, and a two-run double by Graham.

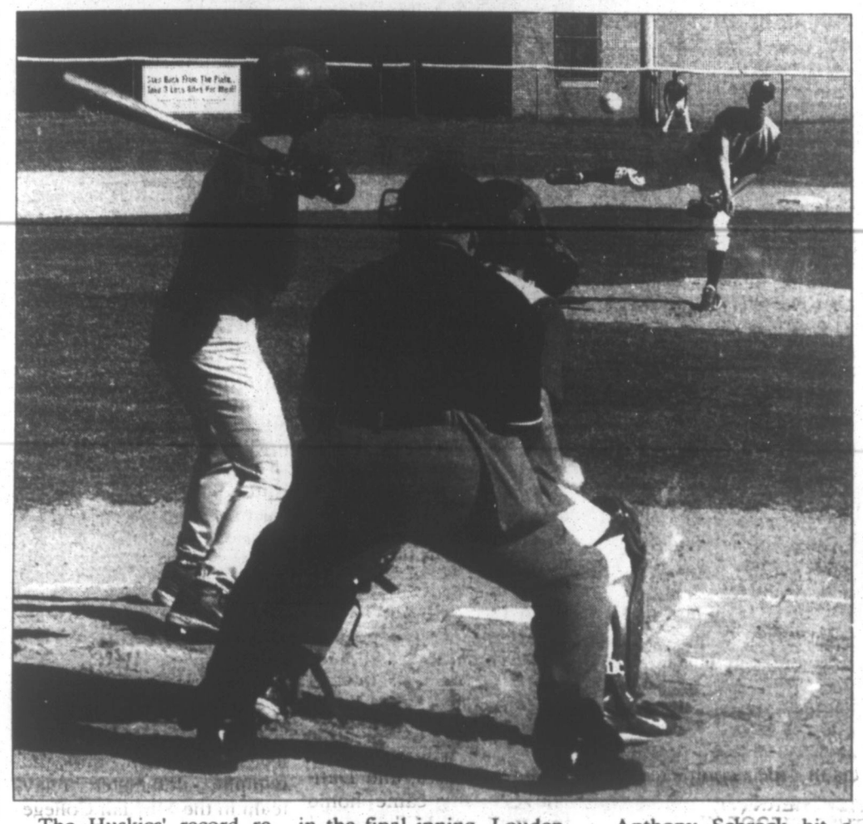
HOMER IN THE MAKING — Staff photographer John McEwen captured this ball mid-flight off the bat of Southern High School senior Cory Bosley, seconds before the ball soared over the Northern High School fence for a home run. It would be the first of two homers hit by Bosley in the game, which has still not been completed. The contest went into extra innings and was finally suspended because of darkness, with the Rams leading the Huskies by a 14-8 margin. Pictured below is Northern pitcher Greg Beachy firing one into Southern's Brad Reese. The contest will be completed at a later date. See story.



The Huskies' record remained at 5-1.

Aaron Louden gave up only three singles last night in the Rams' 8-0 win over Allegany, with Bret DeWitt taking the mound in relief in the final inning. Louden had five strike-outs.

Three Alco pitchers gave up only five hits, but allowed six crucial walks. A key error also led to unearned runs.

Anthony Schrock hit a two-run double in the Rams' three-run first inning, and then scored himself on a single by Louden. Brad Reese smacked a solo homer in the fourth.

The loss dropped the Campers to 2-8 overall and 2-4 in the WMIL.

Southern will host Keyser this Friday, travel to Preston for a noon game on Saturday, entertain Beall next Monday and host Westmar next Wednesday. All three of the home games will begin at 4:30 p.m.

Northern JVs Batter Beall, Down Alco

The Northern High School junior varsity baseball squad has gotten off to a 2-0 start after wins this week over Beall and Allegany.

The JV Huskies beat Beall Friday by a 13-9 tally, scoring nine runs in the first inning during the home field contest. Dom DiRienzo blasted a grand slam during the first-inning flurry, and added a fifth RBI later in the contest. Brock Glotfelty stroked four singles and had one RBI, and Neil Kamp punched out a pair of singles. Matt Sisler earned credit for the win after tossing the first five innings.

Yesterday's 6-1 win over visiting Allegany featured six strong innings of work by winning pitcher Glotfelty, who gave up just three singles while recording four strikeouts.

Glotfelty ripped an RBI double and added a single, Tyler Southerly had a double and an RBI single, and Scott Bass belted an RBI double.

Northern will play today at Bishop Walsh, and host a Saturday 11 a.m. twinbill vs. Westmar. On Tuesday the Huskies visit Beall.

NHS Takes Hancock Tourney; Battles SHS, Slays Turkeyfoot

The Northern High School varsity baseball team had a busy four-game slate this week, and took wins over Broadfording Academy (of Potomac Park), Hancock, and Turkeyfoot, while a home field showdown with Southern was suspended because of darkness. The Huskies (6-1) triumphed in both of their Hancock Easter Tournament appearances Saturday, opening with a 9-1 win over Broadfording before downing host Hancock 17-2, and Monday were down by a 14-8 margin of the visiting Rams when darkness fell (see SHS account for details). Yesterday NHS crushed its Turkeyfoot guest 11-1.

"We've been playing real well all the way around," Husky coach Phil Carr commented. "Our pitching staff has really surprised me, in the absence of Preston Sisler the other guys have stepped up and done a great job. They're not striking out a lot of batters, but instead are creating outs and letting the defense do its job.

"Our hitting has been real good as well, except for the Beall game. Against Southern we got some big hits and scraped together some runs off one of the area's top pitchers, Scott Wildesen. We're really pleased with that."

NHS pitcher Mark Logsdon, the Huskies' lone southpaw, tossed the first six innings of the Broadfording win in his first career varsity start. The junior whiffed seven batters while giving up just two hits and no walks en route to earning the win. Senior Eric Johnson held the opponents hitless in two innings of relief duty to claim a save.

Northern scored twice in the first inning, once in the third, twice in the fifth, and four times in the sixth.

Johnson paced NHS's nine-hit attack with two home run blasts. The Huskies committed just one fielding error.

Northern hammered Hancock early in the second game, and never let up. After scoring once in the first stanza, NHS scored four times in the second, seven runs in the third, and five runs in the fourth.

It was another impressive mound performance by the NHS staff, as seniors Darrick Lowdermilk and Johnson combined to hold Hancock to just one hit. Lowdermilk pitched the first four innings to get the victory, giving up a third-inning single along the way. Lowdermilk had two strikeouts and two walks; Johnson struck out the side in his one inning of relief work.

Senior outfielder Michael Bergstrom blasted an RBI double and two singles to lead Northern's 14-hit attack. Senior first baseman Trevor Butler drove in two runs with a double and single, junior shortstop Greg Beachy had a double and an RBI single, sophomore catcher Corey Carr hit two RBI singles, senior second baseman Preston Sisler singled twice, and junior Jason Shapiro contributed an RBI double.

Yesterday's throttling of Turkeyfoot featured a three-hitter by Lowdermilk, while Northern scored in every stanza. The Huskies started off with one run in the first and four in the second, then exploded for a seven-run third inning and a five-run fourth.

Lowdermilk held the Rams to just three singles while whiffing four batters and issuing just one walk to claim the complete-game victory.

NHS had 10 hits overall, as Carr rapped out four singles, including one that drove home two runs. Michael Wolf had two singles, including a two-run single. Lowdermilk ripped an RBI double, and Logsdon stroked an RBI single.

The Huskies host Allegany tomorrow and Westmar Monday in a 4:30 p.m. contest, then travel to Bishop Walsh for a Wednesday road game. On Thursday, April 21, NHS visits Mapletown for a make-up game.

Huskies Bag Elks For First Win Of Year

The Northern High School varsity softball team took its first win of the season in convincing fashion Friday, as the Huskies demolished host Salisbury by a 15-4 margin.

Senior NHS pitcher Jayme Miller gave up just four singles, and recorded three strikouts and six walks in a complete-game victory. Junior catcher Kayla Kipp belted two home runs, a double, and a single to send five runs across the plate. Freshman Kasie Fratz ripped a triple, double, and single, and senior Sarah Masters and sophomores Kerri Harding and Emily Sisler each stroked a double to help round out Northern's 14-hit offensive output.

The Huskies scored once in the first inning when Kipp scampered home from third on a sacrifice fly by Miller. In the second inning, Fratz scored from third on a groundout, then four straight walks put another run across the plate before Masters drove home two runs with a double to make the score 5-0.

Salisbury scored all four of its runs in the fourth inning, which included a two run single by Amy Thomas.

NHS scored four times in the following stanza, which opened with a Kipp home run. The Huskies then loaded the bases, and Danielle Glotfelty came home on a walk and Miller scored on when a batter was hit by a pitch. The fourth run scored when Masters scooted home on a fielder's choice.

Northern matched that four-run tally in the sixth stanza. After Esther Schmuck scored on a double by Sisler, a Husky was hit by a pitch to put runners on first and second. Kipp cleared the bases with her second round-tripper, a three-run shot that launched the Huskies to a 14-4 lead.

NHS scored two more runs in the seventh as Schmuck singled home Harding and Kipp singled home Schmuck.

The Huskies (1-4) are slated to host Beall in a 4:30 p.m. contest today, then face off in a home field twinbill with the Southern Rams at noon on Saturday. NHS travels to Fort Hill on Tuesday.

Lander's Team Wins In Relay

Former Northern High School athletic standout Kristin Lander, now a student at Elizabethtown College, was a member of the winning 400-meter relay team in the Messiah College Invitational, held Saturday at Grantham, Pa.

Lander's team recorded a time of 50.50 seconds to help Elizabethtown place fifth among 17 teams in the meet.

Lander also finished seventh in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 17.52 seconds, and was eighth in the 400 hurdles with a time of 1:11.18.

Rams Nipped By Fort Hill Rally; Blasted By Beall

The Southern High School varsity softball squad let a victory escape last Thursday, April 7, when Fort Hill rallied from a deficit to take a 6-5 win over the Rams in Cumberland. Southern lost its second outing of the week in a Tuesday game to visiting Beall by a resounding 15-0 margin, and now stands at 1-3 on the year.

The Rams started off strong against Fort Hill, scoring four runs in the top of the first inning. Anna Lucas got things going with a lead-off double, then scampered home on Ashley Metcalfe's RBI single. Stephanie Brenneman drew a walk to put two runners aboard before Sarah Bittinger singled Metcalfe home. Emily Bowman then cracked a two-run single to make the score 4-0 before the Sentinels got a turn at the plate.

Fort Hill scored a run on a sacrifice fly in the bottom half of the first.

Southern got its fifth and final run in the second inning. Kayla Nazelrod reached base on a Sentinel error, and eventually sped home from second when Metcalfe ripped a run-scoring double.

Fort Hill loaded the bases in the bottom of the fourth inning before scoring once on a passed ball. The Sentinels also got a two-run single before the inning closed, making the score 5-4.

Southern threatened in the top of the seventh when Amber Plank reached third with two outs, but an infield pop-up shut down the scoring opportunity.

Down 5-4 entering the bottom of the stanza, Fort Hill was able to capitalize on Ram mistakes to score twice and take the contest. An SHS defensive meltdown handed the Sentinels a pair of basehits, three wild pitches, a passed ball, an error, and a walk to allow the hosts to score twice and take the win.

Southern's batters tallied seven hits off FH's Cari Reed, the area's top pitcher, in one of the best showings any opponent has had against the senior righthander, a surefire college prospect, according to Ram coach Chris Metcalfe. In addition to the basehits mentioned above, SHS got a double from Nazelrod.

Fort Hill improved to 6-0 with the win.

Beall proved an inhospitable guest Tuesday in Oakland, as the Mounties exploded for six runs in the first inning and never looked back. While the Rams were held scoreless throughout the contest, Beall went on to score twice in the second, five times in the fourth, and twice in the fifth en route to a 15-0 shutout win.

Winning pitcher Kate Rephann held the Rams to just one hit, a first-inning single by Nazelrod. Fellow Mountie Kacey Kahl had two hits and drove in two runs for Beall (4-2).

The Rams travel to Northern Saturday for a noon doubleheader with the Huskies, then visit Petersburg on Tuesday.

Lakers Swept By Southern Maryland, Fall To Frederick

One of three losses on the baseball diamond this past week for the Garrett College team featured a score that would make one believe that the sport was football, as the Lakers dropped the second game of a doubleheader to the College of Southern Maryland on Sunday by the score of 28-26.

Garrett was also edged in the opening game by a far more usual score, 4-3, and then fell to host Frederick CC on Tuesday, 6-4.

The trio of defeats dropped the Lakers' overall record to 9-11.

The Lakers should have won Sunday's first game against Southern Maryland, as they finished with a 10-2 advantage in hits. Meanwhile, all four of the Hawks' runs were unearned. Garrett's David Rosario went the distance, struck out 11, and gave up just two hits, but had to absorb the loss.

Tyler Boshart hit a pair of singles for the Lakers and had two RBI. Jeff Romberger and Burt Comerford also had two singles apiece.

The second game ended with a total of 54 runs scored on 37 hits, 15 errors committed, five lead changes, three extra innings, two grand slams, and the appearance of a dozen pitchers. Rosario would ultimately have to take his second loss of the day on the mound for Garrett.

The score was knotted at 22-22 at the end of seven innings, and 26-26 after eight innings of play.

After a scoreless ninth inning, the Hawks put two more runs on the board. Garrett tried to rally in the bottom of the 10th, and appeared to have a triple to right with two outs, but the base runner was called out when he apparently missed touching first base.

Rapping a grand slam and a single for Garrett was Luke Hardwick, while pitcher Craig Canfield ripped a grand slam in his first college at-bat, which tied the score at 26-26.

Recording three hits each for the Lakers were Romberger and Danny Flores, and Joel Chavez provided a three-run homer in the first inning, plus a single later on.

It was déjà vu all over again for the Lakers in their Maryland JUCO game with Frederick on Tuesday, as they once again allowed four unearned runs.

The Cougars took a 4-1 lead in the first inning, and were all but shut down the rest of the way by Garrett's Dan Vagnetti and reliever Aaron Harper, with the exception of John Kellinger, who hit two solo homers.

Romberger stroked a two-run triple for the Lakers in the third inning, and also had a single, while Boshart and Aaron Harper each hit two singles in the Lakers' nine-hit attack.

Frederick pitchers Nate Miller and John Keravich had 12 strikeouts between them.

The Lakers are scheduled to host Frederick in a doubleheader this Friday, with the first game to begin at 1 p.m. They will then entertain Harford CC in a noon twinbill on Saturday, and travel to Montgomery Rockville for a single game next Tuesday.

GOING FOR A PICKOFF in a game between Garrett College and the College of Southern Maryland on Sunday was Laker pitcher David Rosario to his first baseman Burt Comerford. In the background at left is GC coach Eric Hallenbeck and, at right, third baseman Darren Freme. Despite the fact that Rosario struck out 11 batters and allowed only two hits in going the distance, the Lakers lost the game, 4-3. The second game of the doubleheader was a laugher, with the Lakers being edged by a whopping 28-26. See story for details. Photo by John McEwen.

Spring Turkey Hunting Season Arrives April 18

An excellent harvest is predicted for Maryland's statewide spring turkey hunting season, which begins Monday, April 18, and continues through Monday, May 23.

A one-day Junior Turkey Hunt is set for Saturday, April 16. The Junior Hunt allows hunters 16 years of age or younger to hunt wild turkeys when accompanied by an unarmed adult of at least 21 years of age. Both hunters must possess a valid hunting license unless exempt from Maryland hunting license requirements.

After two consecutive years of poor reproduction, the Department of Natural Resources' annual brood survey suggests that last summer was a banner year for turkey poult production throughout much of the state. This means that young gobblers, known as jakes, should be exceptionally abundant this spring, a DNR spokesperson said.

Although turkey-hunting accidents are rare in Maryland, the National Wild Turkey Federation, in conjunction with the DNR, urges all turkey hunters to practice safe and ethical hunting this spring. All targets must be positively identified as a bearded turkey, and hunters should eliminate the colors of a gobbler's head (red, blue and white) from their clothing. Hunters are also encouraged to wear a fluorescent orange cap while moving and tie an orange ribbon, string, or piece of cloth around a nearby tree while calling.

For additional information concerning Maryland turkey hunting regulations and public land opportunities, persons can consult the DNR publication Hunting and Trapping in Maryland 2004-05 that is issued to hunters when they purchase a hunting license. The guides are also available at all DNR Service Centers and through DNR's web site at www.dnr.maryland.gov.

Northern All-Stars Take Silver Hoops Classic At Fort Hill

The Northern All-Stars sixth grade girls' basketball team shook off an opening-round loss to eventually win the championship of the Silver Hoops Classic basketball tournament, which was held recently at Fort Hill High School in Cumberland. After losing their first outing by a narrow 23-22 margin to Wharton's Construction, the Huskies were shifted into the "losers'" bracket, where they went on a six-game winning streak to take the tourney's title

After that initial one-point loss to Wharton's, Northern roared back to crush Blankenship 36-8. The Huskies' next win was a 22-16 triumph over the Southern All-Stars sixth grade squad. Northern went on from there to down Frostburg 34-14, earning the right to a rematch with Wharton's Construction for the classic's crown.

The Huskies opened the best-of-three championship round with a convincing 25-11 win. The following day, just one win away from the title, Northern came out on fire to take an early 10-0 first-quarter lead and went up 18-5 at the half. Wharton's mounted a ferocious second-half comeback, outscoring the Huskies 10-6, but Northern staved off the rally to take the contest by a 24-15 tally.

"We really concentrated on our defensive press, and it paid off as our opponents had a difficult time bringing the ball up the floor," Northern coach Steve Fratz said.

Northern's Kaitlynn Fratz was named the Silver Hoops Classic Most Valuable Player, and fellow Huskies Morgan Brosnihan and Terra McKenzie were named to the All-Tournament Team.

SMC Members Advance In Reg. Championships

Five members of the Southern Mat Club placed among the top four in their divisions at the Western Regional Championships, held Saturday in Shippensburg, Pa.

Winning the 86-pound, age 10-11 division was Bubba Scheffel, while Lex Ozias (70 pounds, age 12-13) and Coy Ozias (65, 8-9) each won runner-up honors. Placing third was Ryan Bennett (130, 10-11), and finishing fourth was Scott Cooper (85, 8-9).

SMC members who were awarded participation medals were Tanner Massey, Travis Newton, Austin Shaffer, Garrett Campbell, Brutus Scheffel, Jesse McComas, Nick Brant, and Jordan Skipper.

The club will now be represented at the 38th Eastern National Middle Atlantic Wrestling Association Championships, to be held at Penn State University. Of over 12,000 youth wrestlers who began in 29 different district tournaments, there are now just over 1,400 eligible for the Middle Atlantic tourney.

Glucose Testing Important For Gestational Diabetes

Seven months into her pregnancy, a woman is told by her doctor that she has gestational diabetes. Should she be concerned? Absolutely. Affecting about 4% of pregnant women in the late stages of pregnancy, gestational diabetes can hurt the unborn child if left untreated or poorly controlled. Too much blood glucose gets to the body causing increased insulin production and consequently fat storage. Macrosomia (also known as "fat body") can lead to shoulder damage during birth and breathing problems. In addition, the baby will often have trouble in the transition from the sugar-rich environment of the womb to the outside world. Very low blood sugar results are found in newborn babies because they have become accustomed to dealing with large amounts of sugar daily.

Treatment involves keeping your blood sugar as close to that of pregnant women without gestational diabetes. Daily glucose testing and insulin injections are equally as important as a special meal plans and scheduled physical activity. Talk to your pharmacist about daily glucose testing and insulin injections if you or a family member has questions about this condition.

Then in the Border Clash relays at Preston on Saturday, the combined Ram squads earned 123 points to place third among six teams.

The Rams then hosted the Garrett County championship meet last evening with Northern, with the Southern girls and the Northern boys being victorious (see separate story).

Meeting Slated To Discuss Proposed Fishing Changes

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources has scheduled a series of public meetings across the state to discuss and hear comments on proposed regulations being considered for inland fisheries for 2006. The western Maryland session is slated for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 26, in the Leake Room of the Cordt Physical Education Center at Frostburg State University.

The only proposal specific solely to a Garrett County waterway would add the Snowy Creek mainstem to the list of put-and-take trout fishing areas.

Among the other proposals is an amendment that would affect the entire state. That amendment would change the closure dates for put-and-take trout fishing areas for 2006 and 2007 (the number refers to the specific closure period):

•2 – March 19-25, 2006; March 25-31, 2007.

•3 – April 9-15, 2006; April 15-21, 2007.

•4 – April 16-22, 2006; April 22-28, 2007.

DNR is also proposing to add a statewide regulation to prohibit the culling of trout while fishing.

Additionally, the Inland Fisheries Division is seeking public participation in a discussion of restrictions on fish and other organisms that can be used as live bait. Bait restrictions are being considered for the future to protect the fish resources of the state from damage by introduced and invasive species.

All interested parties are invited to attend and give their views. Sign language interpreters and other appropriate accommodations for individuals with disabilities will be provided upon request. One-week advance notice is requested.

DNR Inland Fisheries Division management activities are supported by the Sportfish Restoration Program (Dingell-Johnson/Wallop-Breaux) funds, and by fees from the sale of freshwater fishing licenses and trout stamps.

For further information, persons may contact the Western Maryland Fisheries Service office at Mt. Nebo at 301-334-8218.

Schedule Noted For 3-D Archery Range Activities

The 3-D archery range at Potomac-Garrett State Forest opened for public use on April 1 for the 2005 season, according to the Maryland Department of Natural Resources. The range has 30 International Bowhunters Association-sanctioned targets, providing shooting opportunities for archers of all ages and skill levels. The fee to use the range is $5 per round. Proceeds from shooting fees go toward the maintenance and upkeep of the 3-D archery range.

The Potomac-Garrett 3-D Archery League will open at the range on Monday, April 25, and close on Monday, July 18. During the 12-week period, a league shooter must log eight rounds to qualify for final scoring in the league. League participants may use the range at any point during the league season.

The eighth annual Potomac-Garrett 3-D Archery Tournament is scheduled for Friday, July 24, at the range. The tourney will consist of one 30-shot round, and different classes will be provided for all ages of competitors. Trophies will be awarded.

The 3-D archery range is situated behind the Potomac Resource Center, which is located off Bethlehem Road at 1431 Potomac Camp Road, southeast of Loch Lynn. For further information, persons may call the forest office at 301-334-4157.

Soccer Coaches' Clinic Scheduled In Grantsville

A free youth soccer coaches' clinic has been slated from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday, April 17, at the Grantsville Elementary School soccer field. Presented by the Virginia-based Soccer Academy, and sponsored by the Northern Garrett Soccer Club, the clinic is open to all youth soccer coaches in the tri-state region.

A coaches-only session will take place from 10 a.m. to noon. Coaches will be expected to participate in the session and wear athletic gear. From 1 to 3 p.m., Northern Garrett Soccer Club players will join the coaches to help demonstrate how to integrate players into coaching sessions.

Soccer Academy director of soccer education and Training Paul Ellis will facilitate the clinic, which will be modeled on sessions conducted at National Team training camps and state coaching clinics.

Ellis was a scout for the gold-medal winning U.S. Women's National Team at the recent Summer Olympics. He has extensive experience coaching elite and recreational level players and has taught U.S. Soccer Federation (USSF) coaching courses in Virginia.

Ellis holds a USSF "A" license and National Soccer Coaches Association of America "premier" license. He has been a Region 1 staff coach, and has coached youth teams throughout the world.

For more information, persons may contact Jeff Graham of the Northern Garrett Soccer Club by calling 301-895-3307 or via e-mail at jeffgraham@verizon.net, or Dave Ungrady of the Soccer Academy at 703-385-0150 or djungrady-@soccer-academy.com.

Red Run Lodge Wins PAWS Pet Challenge

Red Run Lodge was recently announced as winner of the first Passion for Pets Challenge sponsored by the local animal group Partners for Animal Welfare and Safety (PAWS). The Challenge, which ran from Feb. 11-28, encouraged 25 participating local businesses to see who could raise the most funds for PAWS spay/neuter programs in the county by selling $1 paper hearts.

A total of $3,287.83 was raised during the challenge, a PAWS spokesperson reported. Red Run Lodge emerged as winner of the competition, having raised $435.23 with the help of Long & Foster Real Estate.

Employees from Long & Foster helped promote the challenge at Red Run one evening. In addition to selling donation hearts, Red Run donated $1 to PAWS for each entree sold that night.

Long & Foster employees helping during that event were Stephanie Shaffer, Judy Day, Ed King, Betsy Spiker, and Randy Ruhl. A total of $350 was raised at Red Run that evening.

Other participating establishments and volunteers included Jody and Linda Taylor, who hosted an evening for employees of Railey Realty at JG's Pub, raising a total of $280.05 for the challenge. Jody Taylor also served as guest bartender at Pine Lodge Steakhouse for an evening, during which $288.15 was raised. Manager Chris Allison designated $1 from every entree sold that evening, as well as during a wrap-up party in March, to go to PAWS.

Pam Trickett, WKHJ, and her sister, Kim Trickett, owner of Yellow Snow Dog Sled Adventures, served as guest bartenders at the Black Bear Tavern one evening for the cause. They helped the tavern raise $181.79.

Other top fundraisers for the challenge were Pineview Animal Hospital and Deep Creek Foodland Fresh.

PAWS members expressed thanks to all the businesses that participated in the fundraiser and to the individuals who sent in contributions. Those wishing to further support the PAWS Big Fix or Help for Homeless Cats spay/neuter programs may send their tax deductible contributions to PAWS, P.O. Box 745, McHenry, MD 21541.

For further information, or to request assistance through either spay/neuter program, persons may visit PAWS web site at www.garrettpaws.org or call 301-334-2699.

MAYOR AND TOWN COUNCIL OF OAKLAND
NOTICE OF A PROPOSED REAL ESTATE TAX INCREASE

The Mayor and Town Council of the Town of Oakland proposes to increase real estate property taxes.

1. For the tax year beginning July 1, 2005, the estimated real property assessable base will increase by 23.4% from $97,698,125 to $102,599,573.

2. If the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland maintains the current tax rate of $.48 per $100 of assessment, real property tax revenues will increase by 5.0% resulting in $23,527 of new real property tax revenues.

3. In order to fully offset the effect of increasing assessments, the real property tax rate should be reduced to $.457, the constant yield tax rate.

4. The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland is considering not reducing its real property tax rate enough to fully offset increasing assessments. The Mayor and Town Council of Oakland proposes to adopt a real property tax rate of $.48 per $100 of assessment. This tax rate is 5% higher than the constant yield tax rate and will generate $23,527 in additional property tax revenues.

A public hearing on the proposed real property tax rate increase will be held at 7:30 p.m. on May 2, 2005, at the Oakland Town Council meeting room at 15 South Third Street, Oakland, Maryland 21550.

The hearing is open to the public, and public testimony is encouraged. Persons with questions regarding this hearing may call Oakland City Hall at 301-334-2691 for further information.

ADVANCE AUTO PARTS 500 REVIEW

A victory filled with EMOTION

Gordon's win has 'extra meaning' as memories of '04 crash remain

By JEFF GLUCK
Cox News Service

Martinsville, Va.

With his voice trembling, Rick Hendrick stuck his head in Jeff Gordon's car and uttered the only two words he could say.

"Thank you," the emotional Hendrick said. "Thank you, thank you."

Gordon won Sunday's Nextel Cup race at Martinsville Speedway, brightening car owner Hendrick's first trip to the Virginia track since a tragic plane crash in October.

Hendrick wasn't feeling well that day, and skipped the race. The plane he would have taken to Martinsville crashed, killing 10 people, including his son, brother and two nieces.

"Driving the car, you get so caught up in the race," Gordon said. "When he poked his head in, (the meaning) hit me like a ton of bricks."

Gordon came from three laps down to win his sixth career race at Martinsville, marking the biggest comeback of his career. He made a pass with 35 laps to go and held off Kasey Kahne at the finish.

The race came down to the final three laps, thanks to a blown engine that brought out the 16th caution flag of the day. Gordon's several-second advantage was eliminated, and Kahne had a chance at his first career win on the restart.

But Gordon, who had been as far back as 40th place early in the race because of a loose wheel, didn't let Kahne or third-place Mark Martin get close.

"(The plane crash) was definitely on our minds coming in here," Gordon said. "Those memories are never going to go away. There's just some extra meaning to Martinsville now, every time we come here."

Gordon won his 71st career race, moving him within five victories of the late Dale Earnhardt on the all-time victories list.

"That's unbelievable when I think about that," Gordon said. "It's been such a whirlwind and it seems like it's happened overnight."

Kahne is still looking for his first career win, finishing in second place for the sixth time in his two-year career.

Still, the top-five finish was welcome considering how last year's top rookie has struggled through the first few races in 2005.

One reporter asked Kahne if placing second was getting old.

"Well, not this year," Kahne replied. "These races are tough to win. You need everything to go right.

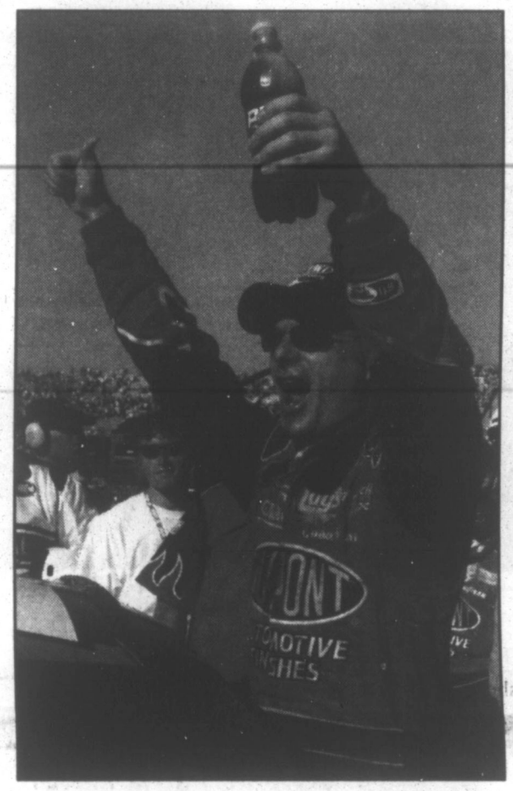
"(A win) will happen. I can promise you that," he added. "It should happen pretty soon, I hope."

Tony Stewart led the most laps, but lost a wheel with 67 laps remaining. Entering Turn 1, Stewart's tire assembly came off and bounced around the turn and rolled down the backstretch.

Stewart ended up in 26th place, with the tire problem ruining what would have been at least a top-five finish.

"I can't even describe it right now," Stewart said. "I guess the thing I am proud of is that I am handling it the way I am handling it right now."

Kurt Busch also lost a top-five finish when Gordon spun him out with 53 laps to go. Gordon later apologized.



NASCAR

Jeff Gordon celebrates in Victory Lane after winning Sunday's Advance Auto Parts 500 at Martinsville Speedway. It was his 71st victory.

Other drivers also experienced a frustrating day.

Bobby Labonte ran in the top five for 400 laps, then blew an engine with less than 100 laps to go. Kevin Harvick finished 32nd after winning the previous week at Bristol, the other short track on the NASCAR circuit.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. was never a factor, finishing 13th and breaking into the top 10 just once during the day.

After starting in the 37th position, Jimmie Johnson finished eighth to remain the Nextel Cup points leader.

RACE NOTEBOOK

Once hot Edwards cooling quickly

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Martinsville, Va.

Since his back-to-back wins three weeks ago at Atlanta Motor Speedway, Carl Edwards hasn't finished worth a flip.

After celebrating his career first Busch and Nextel Cup victories at AMS with his celebrated back flips, he's struggled in two Cup races in a row. He finished 26th after an early wreck last week at Bristol, then on Sunday he tangled with Dale Jarrett on Lap 58 of Sunday's Advance Auto Parts 500 at Martinsville Speedway. Eleven laps later he spun in the second turn and was hit head-on by Hermie Sadler.

"Something was locked up, because when I turned the wheel the steering was locked," Edwards said. "I couldn't turn it either way, so I just spun it around. I was sitting there and a couple of seconds later [Sadler] drove right into me."

Edwards returned to the race after sitting in the garage for 175 laps while repairs were made to his No. 99 Ford.

He was credited with 38th place but fell seven spots to 11th in the points standings.

Bad day for Riggs

Pole sitter Scott Riggs wasn't able to duplicate his qualifying success in the race. He lost the lead at the drop of the green flag and never led a lap. He was a lap down by the midpoint of the race, limping along with a crippled engine due to a burned plug wire. He finished 21st, two laps in arrears.

"We learned a lot, and when we come back in the fall we'll be a lot better," he said.

'No loyalty' at Ganassi

Sterling Marlin said he's looking for a new ride next season after getting the indication that he is losing his seat in the Chip Ganassi-owned No. 40 Dodge at the end of this season.

"Chip hasn't told me anything, but I've heard it other ways," Marlin said, adding that he's especially disappointed to lose the ride he has had since 1998 because he stuck with Ganassi last season even though he had an offer of a three-year deal from another multi-car team owner.

"I was going to be loyal and stay where I was, but I guess there's no loyalty there," he said.

Ganassi issued a statement indicating nothing has been finalized, but many in the garage say they believe Busch Series driver David Stremme will move to one of Ganassi's three Cup cars, possibly the No. 40, next year.

"At this time no plans have been finalized in regard to the No. 40 car for 2006 and beyond," Ganassi said.

Safety initiatives improve viewing pleasure

By JEFF GLUCK
Cox News Service

"It's sure fun to see wreck after wreck and not have to hold your breath while wondering if anyone escaped unhurt."

Rocky Mount, N.C.

It sounds morbid, but there was a get-the-stretcher-ready wreck during the Food City 500 at Bristol Motor Speedway that no one had any business surviving.

Veteran driver Jeff Burton was spun by Jimmie Johnson, and Burton's car bounced off the inside wall at Bristol and launched itself back up the track. When the car stopped, it was facing directly into traffic heading toward Burton at 100-plus mph.

Kurt Busch was the first to arrive. At the moment Burton's car ended its spin, Busch smashed head-on into Burton in a sickening crash.

It didn't matter what angle from which you saw the wreck: each time Fox showed a replay, the reaction was "OOOF!" or "OUCH!"

Fortunately, that's all Busch or Burton felt. Both drivers walked away from the wreck slightly shaken, but uninjured.

That's a common occurrence in today's Nextel Cup Series. The safety equipment has improved so much, it's turned TV viewing into a guilt-free pleasure.

Enhancements such the head-and-neck safety (HANS) device and soft walls have made the mandatory trip to the infield care center into an annoyance instead of a necessity. The doctors show up to the race, get set up in the medical center and go home without doing much of anything.

NASCAR ends up paying the doctors in the care center to be bored, and track officials love every minute of it. NASCAR's Chief Executive Officer Brian France surely enjoys watching race after race without losing any stars to injury.

The last serious incident involved driver Jerry Nadeau, who suffered a brain injury when he crashed into a wall at Richmond that was not equipped with a SAFER barrier in May 2003. Since Dover finished installation on its SAFER barrier earlier this year, all NASCAR tracks now have the soft walls.

Racing at up to 200 mph is still dangerous, and injuries are not extinct. But it's sure fun to see wreck after wreck and not have to hold your breath while wondering if anyone escaped unhurt.

As a wise NASCAR fan told me recently, "There's nothing more boring in NASCAR than a long green-flag run."

He's right. When the cars are going around in a circle without incident for 70 to 100 laps, it's time for most fans to go get a beer or take a quick nap.

It might as well be a caution. At the track, the only reason to stay in the stands during a long green-flag run is to wait for the next wreck.

We want huge collisions, massive pile-ups and short tempers. We want drivers accusing each other of being idiots, a little shoving among pit crews and the occasional stern lecture to a hot-headed youngster, like Dale Jarrett did to Shane Hmiel in the previous Busch Series race.

More often, it seems we can get all that without having to worry about the drivers being seriously injured.

Labonte pulls hat 'Trick'

Karma seemed to be on the side of Bobby Labonte's truck Saturday — literally.

After country music group Trick Pony sang the national anthem for Saturday's Craftsman Truck Series race at Martinsville Speedway, Labonte drove the music group-sponsored truck to Victory Lane in the Kroger 250.

Bobby Labonte

In doing so, Labonte achieved a historic trick of his own. He became the first driver in NASCAR history to win a race at the same track in all three national series.

Labonte also added his name to the growing list of drivers who have won a race in the Nextel Cup Series, Busch Series and Craftsman Truck Series — becoming the 12th driver to pull a personal triple crown.

"It's just incredible to be able to win in all three divisions here," Labonte said. "Every win here has been awesome, and today was no different."

The win came after he held off Ricky Craven, who was also seeking the series trifecta. The end result, determined by 0.257 seconds, was the closest finish in the 10-year history of truck racing at Martinsville.

The members of Trick Pony were certainly pleased. They gleefully posed with Labonte in Victory Lane, right next to the truck with the group's photos plastered all over it.

"We had a lot of photos after the race in Victory Lane and they were pretty pumped up," Labonte said. "I think they just had a downright good time. Maybe they'll come back. They brought us some good luck today."

TV PIPELINE

Two reporters take it on the Chen ... er, chin

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Julie Chen

Q: My wife would like to know if Julie Chin of "The Early Show" and CBS reporter Joie Chin are sisters. –Nick Nickles, La Mirada, Calif.

A: Well, for starters, the last name of both women is Chen. Julie is now the wife of Leslie Moonves, the co-CEO of Viacom, which owns CBS, and she isn't related to Joie, who previously was a CNN anchor-reporter.

Q: I was wondering if "life as we know it" is coming back on the air anytime soon. –Kristin Gerdin, Oak Creek, Wis.

A: We've had a lot of mail on this, so our answer is going to disappoint a good number of people ... but keep in mind it was ABC's call, not ours. The show is gone for good, not a huge surprise to TV insiders who knew it would have a tough time holding its own against Thursday competition such as "Survivor" on CBS, "The O.C." on Fox and the NBC comedy lineup. ABC actually took "life" off the air for a while to give it a relaunch, but ultimately it failed.

Q: I recently saw the movie "Mr. Holland's Opus" and was impressed with the voice of the young lady who sang the Gershwin songs in the movie. Her name was Jean Louisa Kelly, and I am wondering why I have not heard about her or her career. She has such a beautiful voice. –Mike Visca, Valrico, Fla.

A: Well, she has continued to use it, if not necessarily for singing. For the past several years, Kelly has been playing Kim Warner on the CBS sitcom "Yes, Dear," which recently marked its 100th episode. Between "Opus" and the start of the series, she made several TV movies including "Harvest of Fire," "Stolen Women, Captured Hearts" and "Ruby Bridges."

Q: In the 1970s, there was a TV movie called "Divorce His/Divorce Hers" with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. The first evening, they showed the divorce from his perspective and the second night, from hers. I've never seen this movie shown anywhere since. Is it available anywhere? –Mary Cook, Madison, Wis.

A: That film, which was a big deal for ABC since such Hollywood royalty starred in it, has been available on DVD – and for a pretty low price – for quite some time. Shop around at stores' DVD bargain bins, or type the title into an Internet search engine and see what comes up.

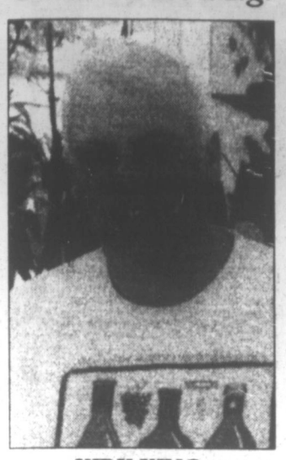
Orchid Program Slated At Next Garden Club Mtg.



KIRK KING

The Mountain Laurel Garden Club will meet Tuesday, April 19, at Red Run, Deep Creek Lake, beginning at 10:30 a.m. Following a business meeting, Kirk King will present "The Culture of Commonly Available Orchids." Lunch will be served after the program.

"Mr. King's goal is to educate owners and would-be owners of orchids about proper watering, fertilizing, light requirements, and repotting techniques," said a club spokesperson. "Information will be shared to ensure the orchid owner of having an enjoyable and rewarding experience."

Anyone who has orchids is asked to bring one to the meeting for King to demonstrate repotting or diagnose any growing problems.

The guest speaker has a B.S. degree from the University of Maryland in biology. He is a retired health physicist with the U.S. government. As a member and past president of the National Capital Orchid Society and member of the American Orchid Society, King has been growing orchids as a hobby for the past 20 years. He and his wife live near Friendsville.

Guests are welcome to the meeting, and the club is open to membership to both men and women. For more information about the Mtn. Laurel Garden Club or to make reservations for lunch, persons may call Karen Ewing at 301-387-6180 or Norma Hesen at 301-387-4384.

The club is a member of the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland and the National Clubs Inc.

Turkeyfoot Valley Historical Society To Host Speaker

The Turkeyfoot Valley Historical Society, Confluence, Pa., will host a presentation by David Taylor, a specialist in historic preservation, on Thursday, April 28, at the Confluence Lutheran Parish Hall, 7 p.m.

Taylor will discuss historic preservation and its connection to successful economic development in older business districts.

The presentation is a program of the Pennsylvania Humanities Council, supported in part by a grant from the Pa. Historical and Museum Commission, and sponsored by the Turkeyfoot Valley Historical Society.

For more information, persons may e-mail the society at tfvhs@tfvhs.com.

Historical Lecture On Braddock's March Scheduled

The Old Petersburg-Addison Historical Society will begin it annual speaker series with a program on the French and Indian War campaign of General Braddock at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, April 19, at the Addison (Pa.) United Methodist Church.

Author and historian Robert Adamovich will deliver the lecture, which will note the 250th anniversary of Braddock's march through western Maryland and into nearby Pennsylvania.

Refreshments will be served.

Open House, Program Slated For Springs Store

An open house will be held Monday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the Folk Meeting House, Springs, Pa., featuring a program titled "The Old and the New" presented by Richard Yoder.

Refreshments will then be served at the Springs Store. The public is invited to attend.

The Springs Store was opened in 1896, and has recently been expanded and remodeled. Many mementos of the store's extensive history will be on display. The original store building was just 16'x20' with six feet partitioned off for a "wareroom." The entire store has now been expanded, as well as the parking lot.

The store now features a larger bakery and deli area, larger display cases for baked goods, and new freezers and refrigerator cases for groceries. The store is also now wheelchair accessible.

According to owners Laban and Julia (Beitzel) Ties and Owen and Twila Guengerich, the store symbolizes a tie to the community that provides more than food by also offering nourishment for the soul.

Springs is located on Route 669 between Salisbury, Pa., and Grantsville.

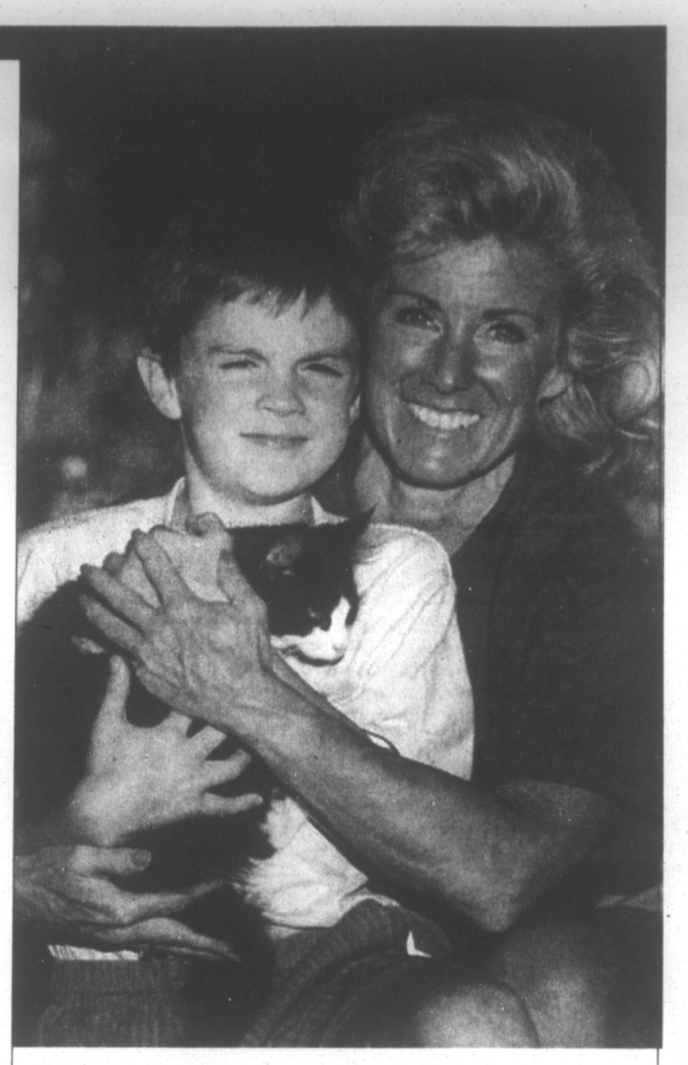
Would it not be ideal if each of us was joyful and smiling each day? Since we are imperfect humans living in an imperfect world, this, of course, is not possible. However, here is a thought to ponder...

On the days we are feeling especially happy, perhaps we could challenge ourselves to share a smile with someone who has none. It is easy to smile at a cheerful person, but how much greater the blessing to try to cheer one who is sad or discouraged or even just angry at the world. Paul writes in his letter to the Romans 1:11-12... For I long to see you, that I may impart to you some spiritual gift to strengthen you, that is, that we may be mutually encouraged by each other s faith, both yours and mine.

Won t you share your joy with others at your local church or synagogue this week? God will smile upon you.



That We May Be Mutually Encouraged...

Tell People What You Think

There are many situations when it can be difficult to tell others what we really think. Sometimes we may fear that the truth will hurt their feelings, or we may simply fear their angry response, and at other times, we may just be inclined to tell people what we think they want to hear. Whatever the reason, honesty is usually the best policy, especially since it is impossible to accurately predict how others will react to what we might say. In this regard, one of the hardest things to learn is how to speak the truth openly, yet with a gentle spirit. If someone has hurt your feelings, why not say, "Ouch! That hurt my feelings," in much the same way that we would say, "Ouch! That hurt," if someone were to step on our toes? This sort of response is surely preferable to letting resentment build up or responding in a hurtful manner to others. Another instance when it can be difficult to speak truthfully may occur when we are interacting with someone who is in a position of authority. And although our integrity may suffer when we withhold or whitewash the truth to suit others, we should remember that the truth can at times be painful. So, we should choose our words very carefully and speak the truth in a spirit of love and gentleness.

Hear, for I will speak noble things, and from my lips will come what is right; for my mouth will utter truth; wickedness is an abomination to my lips.
R.S.V. Proverbs 8:6-7

Lycopene Evaluated For Oral Lesions

Leukoplakia is the most common type of precancerous lesion in the mouth. It is highly associated with smoking and chewing tobacco. Treatment of leukoplakia typically involves smoking cessation, and often requires surgical removal of lesions. Tobacco smoke leads to leukoplakia and oral cancer through the formation of free radicals which damage tissues in the mouth. Lycopene, a natural antioxidant that is found in tomatoes, watermelons, guava, several other fruits, destroys free radicals and protects cells against damage.

In a recent study, fifty-eight individuals with oral leukoplakia were given daily supplements of lycopene or placebo for three months. Eighty percent of those who received 8mg per day of lycopene showed improvement in their condition. In comparison, the placebo group, only 12.5% showed improvement. No side effects were reported during the study. More studies are needed to evaluate the role of lycopene supplementation for the treatment of oral leukoplakia. At this time, it is unknown whether dietary sources of lycopene improve oral leukoplakia.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• Trying to get into the Guinness Book of Records can be a dangerous business. In Frankfurt, Germany, 650 people were involved in an attempt to set the world record for the biggest tug-of-war match. Unfortunately, the organizers didn't take into account the pressures that so many people would place on the thick nylon rope that was used. When the rope snapped, it whipped back so violently that the teams collapsed. In the ensuing mayhem, a 9-year-old Boy Scout was killed; a few days later, another Boy Scout, this one 10 years old, died from injuries sustained during the tragic incident.

• It's still not known who made this sage observation: "The difference between gossip and news is whether you hear it or tell it."

• It's been reported that while making the film "The Perfect Storm," actor Mark Wahlberg was seasick a total of 52 times. Now that's dedication to your craft.

• Jordan's Queen Rania was once an employee of Apple Computer.

• In 2001, the Doris Day Animal Foundation launched a campaign to encourage New Yorkers to neuter their pets. It was called "2001: A Spay Odyssey."

• Michigan is evidently mad for mud — at least, when it comes to naming bodies of water. The state is home to two Muddy Lakes, five Big Mud Lakes, 17 Little Mud Lakes and a whopping 237 Mud Lakes. In contrast, northern Wisconsin has a Near-Clear Lake, seven Clear Lakes — and five Lost Lakes, which makes you wonder how they were ever found to begin with. And with 110 Long Lakes, Minnesota seems to be commenting more on the shape of the feature than the quality of the water.

• In Jamaica, there is an actual law firm called "Lawless and Linch."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 20, 1841, the first detective story is published when Edgar Allen Poe's "The Murders in the Rue Morgue" appears in Graham's Lady's and Gentleman's Magazine. Like the later Sherlock Holmes stories, Poe's tale is narrated by the detective's roommate.

• On April 21, 1918, in the skies over France, Manfred von Richthofen, the notorious German flying ace known as "The Red Baron," is killed by Allied fire. Richthofen downed 80 enemy aircraft before his death at age 25 and is regarded to this day as the ace of aces.

• On April 24, 1936, an unplanned event is shown on television for the first time when a group of firemen responding to an alarm in Camden, N.J., is televised. The broadcast anticipated the development of live TV news coverage.

• On April 23, 1956, Elvis makes his first appearance in Las Vegas, but the mostly middle-aged audience was so unimpressed with the rock-and-roll star that his two-week run was canceled after only a week. Ironically, Las Vegas was the site of the star's comeback in the early 1970s.

• On April 22, 1970, Earth Day is celebrated in the United States for the first time. Millions of Americans, including students from thousands of colleges and universities, took part in rallies and educational programs to raise public awareness of the world's environmental problems.

• On April 18, 1989, Chinese students take to the streets in Beijing to protest government policies and issue a call for greater democracy in the communist People's Republic of China. The protests grew until the Chinese government ruthlessly suppressed them in June during the Tiananmen Square Massacre.

• On April 19, 1995, just after 9 a.m., a massive truck bomb explodes outside the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, Okla., collapsing the north face of the nine-story building. The terrorist attack killed 168 people, including 19 children in the building's day-care center.

Dobermans as Pets

Q. I am really interested in getting a Doberman Pinscher, but am not so sure after talking to a few people about it. All I hear is, "So you want an attack dog?" or "Dobermans shouldn't be around kids." I just think it's a beautiful breed. What's your opinion? — Mary W., Kansas City, Mo.

A. I think you're talking to the wrong people, first of all. Pick up the local phone book or hop onto the Internet and look for kennel clubs or Doberman Pinscher clubs in your area. The American Kennel Club (AKC) can help you with this search. The people best suited to giving reliable information about this breed are enthusiastic owners and breeders, and you will find them at these clubs.

Expect some very pointed questions from members of these clubs about your intentions in obtaining a Doberman. There are people out there who want to train them as guard dogs for their homes — or worse, make them fighting dogs. However, club members will also tell you about the great characteristics of the breed, including the Doberman's intelligence, loyalty and steady temperament. They'll give you details about these dogs that you might not see in books, as well as personal anecdotes about life with the Doberman. You'll learn about reliable breeders in your area (and perhaps about unreliable ones).

In addition, learn all you can about the breed, its training and feeding requirements, and common problems, including illnesses. Find out how much time you have to commit to a new pet, and whether that time is enough to accommodate an energetic dog like the Doberman. With a few weeks of research, you will be able to decide whether this dog is the perfect one for you.

Q. Recently I purchased a love bracelet at an estate sale. Later I discovered that it was hallmarked by Cartier. Who can I contact to determine its value? — Dottie, Kissimmee, Fla.

A. One of the better reference books is Old Jewelry: 1840-1950 Identification and Price Guide, by C. Jeanenne Bell (Krause Publications, $27.99). This comprehensive guide determines how old a piece of jewelry is, what kind of metal or material it is crafted of and whether a stone is the real McCoy or synthetic. Especially helpful for you is valuable information about maker's marks and current prices in the marketplace.

Janet Lawwill is the owner of AZillion Sparklz, a mail-order and Internet business dealing exclusively in both costume and fine estate jewelry. GC Sets May Course Slate In Grantsville

Garrett College has scheduled a variety of courses at the Grantsville Outreach Center during the month of May: Photographing Nature, SOS for Women, Computer Skills I, Advance Directives, Landscape Painting, and Medical Transcription.

Photographing Nature is set from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. over four consecutive Mondays beginning May 2.

The class will demonstrate techniques applicable to the special assignment of photographing nature and wildlife. It is suitable for aficionados of both traditional photography and digital camera users. Topics will include equipment and its proper use, fill flash light, magnification exposure techniques, calculation with flash and natural light, and compositional techniques in landscape and close-up photography. Each session will meet at the center, allowing time to review techniques and answer questions. The group will then proceed outside to take pictures. The course will be held rain or shine. Students will need to bring their own tri-pod or uni-pod, along with camera and film. Richard Bowser, an accomplished photographer and studio owner in Oakland, is instructing the course.

Computer Skills I will meet from 9 to 11 a.m. for three consecutive Fridays, May 6, 13, and 20.

This beginners' class offers interactive instruction on the essentials of working with a computer. Topics include common elements of the computer, basic computer terms, mouse techniques, menu bars, and managing files. Terry Beachy, a Microsoft certified instructor, will conduct the course.

SOS for Women will be offered at two locations, one in Grantsville and the other in Accident, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. for five sessions. The class will meet at the Grantsville Outreach Center on Wednesdays from May 4 through June 1, and at the Flowery Vale Fitness Center in Accident on Thursdays, May 5 through June 2.

Suitable for all ages, this course will enable the student to handle the stressors unique to women by strengthening the foundation of mental, physical, and spiritual health. Participants will learn fun and practical ways to increase energy, improve self-esteem, and enhance assertiveness. The goal is to experience greater joy and fulfillment in one's work and in other areas of your life. Methods include yoga, meditation, imaging in meditation, chi-gong, and aromatherapy, along with stretching and breathing exercises. Certified yoga and Pilates instructor, Peggy Santamaria will instruct both classes.

A one-session Advance Directive seminar is scheduled from 6:30 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday, May 3, at the Grantsville Senior Center.

Advance directives are documents which state choices about medical treatment or name someone to make decisions about medical treatment if an individual is unable to make these decisions for him- or herself. They are called "advance" directives because they are signed in advance to let the doctor and other health care providers know one's wishes concerning medical treatment. Through advance directives, one can make legally valid decisions about future medical care. Debby Ward, director of social work services from Garrett Memorial Hospital, will conduct the course.

Landscape Painting will meet from 9 a.m. to noon on Fridays, May 20 to June 24, at the Grantsville Senior Center.

Painting fundamentals will be reviewed, and students will be introduced to principles of landscape painting, including compositions, color values, structures and textures of natural form, and the application of general principles of art. Edna Bender, an accomplished local artist, will instruct the course.

Medical Transcription courses will meet according to variable time frames on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays from May 16 through Dec. 19.

Admission requirements include proficiency at college level English and typing speed of 45 accurate wpm. The medical transcription training program is a series of six consecutive courses designed to train individuals to listen to dictated recordings made by physicians and other health care professional and transcribe (type) them, creating medical reports that eventually become part of a patient's permanent files. A medical transcriptionist will often work for outpatient clinics, physicians' offices, hospitals, and at-home employment.

For additional information or to register for these courses, persons may contact Terry Beachy, Grantsville Center coordinator, by calling 301-895-3368 or via e-mail at tbeachy@garrett-college.edu

Dean of Academic Affairs

This week at Garrett College brings one of our favorite times: the chance to register for classes. In fact, April registration means double excitement, since students can sign up for classes that meet this summer as well as those starting next fall. With a schedule full of opportunities, we at Garrett are ready to give students ways to achieve their goals.

Students taking advantage of our summer offerings can learn everything from math to creative writing, whether learning online or on campus. We're featuring a variety of courses, including those in sciences, social and behavioral sciences, physical education, language arts and communication, psychology and sociology, biology, business, speech and language arts, and computer science. Our Admissions Office is eager to help new students who wish to take these as well as some of our one-credit course offerings, which will also be offered this summer.

Learning, of course, won't be limited to the summer months. In fact, each academic department stands ready to offer a variety of courses designed to appeal to a wide range of students with diverse needs next fall. For instance, we know that members of our community have a strong interest in graphic arts design, and to that end, students can take both traditional arts courses that supplement graphic arts. Professor Ron Skidmore is ready to welcome students to courses such as Basic Design I. Professor Ron Bertolina will offer Macromedia Studio, a new and dynamic course geared specifically toward graphic design. Using the latest technology in this class as well as desktop publishing, Ron will introduce students to concepts that can lead toward a certificate in graphic design.

Our technology offerings will be enhanced in other ways, too. Working with Sandra Shaffer, the college will offer courses such as Introduction to C#, Security + and Security in Microsoft Server 2003 Network. Designed both for those in the workforce as well as those in a traditional curriculum, the security courses will enable learners to identify threats to computer security as well as to plan and implement infrastructure security. Introduction to C#, on the other hand, can serve as a starting point for students learning about computer programming as it involves object-oriented applications for the World Wide Web. The courses lend a new dimension to the Business and Information Technology Division, currently led by Mike Kilgus, the program's interim director.

At the other end of the spectrum, we're glad to introduce Organic Chemistry to Garrett's curriculum. Taught by Professor Linda Griffith, the course will strengthen the chemistry background of those students who wish to pursue coursework or careers in the sciences. Linda's own background in academic settings as well as industry will be a great boon to those enrolling in the course, to be offered for the first time this fall.

Another "first time this fall" offering will be Introduction to Conversational Spanish, supplemented by Spanish 101 and Spanish 102. Taught by Fran Reynolds, these courses will follow on the heels of the success we've had with offering Spanish this spring. We're delighted to be diversifying our offerings and to help strengthen global education and awareness at GC through foreign language instruction.

Diversifying our offerings, of course, involves offering new and innovative approaches to learning outside the traditional classroom. To that end, we're looking towards creating a weekend college, and one step in that direction will involve offering English 101 on Saturday mornings. Taught by Professor Lonnie Brewster, this class is one of several that we hope will appeal to working students who look to the weekends as a time to learn.

Our offerings will be out of the traditional academic "box" in other ways, too, as we continue growing our online curriculum. From Early Childhood Education to Introduction to Psychology 10, from Human Resource Management to Personal and Consumer Finance, our distance learning courses allow students to learn on their own time, using the Internet as their classroom. Each semester, we're seeing more and more students taking advantage of these unique opportunities, and we're delighted that we can help them achieve their goals as well as to lend new courses to those offered in our traditional classrooms.

Whatever their goals, we at Garrett stand ready to offer support and guidance in helping students achieve their dreams for their education. Whether students wish to start this summer or wait until fall, we're looking forward to welcoming them and helping them recognize the benefits of a small college that truly works to promote big results.

April Showers Bring Flowers, Mean It's Time To Fertilize

by Willie Lantz
Extension Educator

As the old saying goes, "April showers bring May flowers": it also brings on our pasture and hay fields. The weather has warmed up across the region, leading many of us to think about spreading fertilizer on our pastures and hay fields.

Taking time to do a few management steps can save money on that high-priced fertilizer this spring.

First of all, take a soil sample if you have not had one in the last three years. The soil sample will show you three important things: pH, phosphorous, and potassium levels. For most crops, the pH of the soil needs to be between 6.0 and 7.0. Soil pH below 6.0 can tie up valuable nutrients already in the soil or those expensive fertilizers you just purchased. The purchase and application of lime to increase the pH will be more economical than purchasing more fertilizer.

As for phosphorous (P) and potassium (K), if you have applied manure to the land on a regular basis in the past, it is likely that your P and K levels are adequate for good crop growth. One exception would be if you are growing alfalfa, which will almost always require additional K.

A soil test will cost less than $10 per sample, and can be sent away and returned in 10 days. There is still adequate time to take soil samples. If you need assistance with where to send the sample or reading your test results, give us a call.

The second management item would be to look at the timing of fertilizer applications. The biggest concern with timing is the application of nitrogen (N) fertilizers. Nitrogen is the most expensive component and most important for crop growth of all the fertilizers. Therefore, we need to make sure we use it efficiently. Nitrogen does not attach to soil particles. It must be diluted in the water that surrounds the soil particles. Most of the nitrogen in commercial fertilizers is very soluble and is available soon after application. Plants do not need large amounts of nitrogen until they start growing vigorously. Extended wet periods after the application of nitrogen will often result in the nitrogen being leached below where the roots of most of the plants can reach (except for those deep-rooted perennial weeds).

To get the most out of nitrogen fertilizers, consider splitting the application. For cool season grass (orchard, Ryan's Glade, and Bradley Lilly, Trailblazers.

Entrants Sought For Md. Dairy Princess Pageant

The Maryland Dairy Princess Program is searching for young women interested in representing the dairy industry for one year as dairy princesses and dairy maids. Maryland's seven regional dairy princess pageants will be held throughout May and June.

Dairy princesses make school and grocery store appearances, speak to farm and non-farm groups, and appear on radio and television. They often make appearances at sporting events and fairs as well. Regional princesses participate in a training seminar in early July and will compete in the state pageant on Tuesday, July 20, at the Holiday Inn in Frederick.

To enter the regional contest, candidates may be the daughter of a dairy farmer, a dairy farm manager or herdsman, or someone employed in a dairy-related industry (farm store, cooperative, DHIA supervisor, feed supplier, veterinarian, milk inspector, etc.) A candidate may also be employed herself as one of the above, or own at least one dairy animal, or be enrolled in the dairy foods project in 4-H or FFA.

To qualify, entrants must be 16 years old by Dec. 31, 2005, and not have reached their 22nd birthday by that date. Girls between 13 and 16 years old can participate in the royalty program as well by becoming a dairy maid. "The dairy maid program in Maryland not only prepares girls to become dairy princesses, but gives them valuable experiences as they mature through their teen years," a spokesperson said.

Dairy maids will perform similar duties as the dairy princesses, assisting them throughout the year. There is no dairy maid competition, and all applicants who qualify will be accepted. All dairy maids will take part in a one-day training seminar and be introduced during the state dairy princess pageant in July.

For more information on becoming a dairy princess or dairy maid, or to receive an application, persons may call Nancy Savage at 301-616-1454, or Heidi Qualls at 301-616-2310 or 301-533-0062.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Bob and Margie Brenneman (Mountain Bob and His Gal Margie) celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on Friday, April 8. Imagine that many happy years with one person. They have always been an inspiration to me.

My girls refuse to watch my "dumb old movies" on TV. They don't know what they are missing with the likes of the hilarious Marx Brothers. As an adult who had the rare pleasure to see them at their best, even at 8 a.m., I almost laughed myself sick. The only question is, which brother was the funniest? I have to vote for Groucho. I once actually wore a Groucho nose, glasses, and mustache in riding my horse in a show, but it did not stop me from collecting my championship ribbon. I guess that one judge had a sense of humor, unlike the one who was outraged when my fellow leading competitor sang "Here Comes The Judge," a famous line from "Laugh-In" on television. He just glared at us since we both outclassed any other horses in the class. Forgive me when I slipped some insignificant autobiographic detail. It is true that does not happen in Bittinger, but that horse show was in Bruceton Mills in about 1969.

Just after I sent my last week's column into The Republican I heard the song of the spring peepers which was last Tuesday, which was their standard time for their debut here in the Glades of Bittinger. Unless when we are in the middle of the "Robin's Snow," they sometimes sing during a spring snow, but as a rule they do not. It was a startling contrast when, in only three days, we went from a horrible blizzard on Sunday to 70-plus degrees, which is a prime Bittinger summer day.

But before long we got an ordinary spring day, with weather being wet and in the 40s. Even that is good enough for our wild birds, who are singing their hearts out.

The 4-H buckwheat and pancake supper was a big success even though the evening was so beautiful that probably many people were reluctant to come inside. Even with warm days, our nighttimes still are quite cold. Spring, like most good things, takes a long time to fully develop.

If we get a frost it would be truly disastrous, as my lilac bush is already fully budded. The old-timer's wisdom is that we are still in for another snow when our wild savage is in bloom. Oh, please no! Today (April 12) is still pretty chilly.

If you drive the back roads around Bittinger you would see hundreds of fantastic scenes – hemlock woods with huge boulders among it, many rhododendron thickets, the remainder of autumn-past pale leaves like slivers of gold leaf, stark burnt orange with the brilliant cobalt blue sky behind, and you might find yourself on a high ridge with views of miles of woods without any sign of human invaders. I saw an old farm junk pile which made me long for an archeological dig. I know a treasure might be lurking in it, like old patent medicine bottles, old Coke bottles, broken crocks, all colors of broken glass, an intact jelly jar, a mystery metal piece, and an old bed of daffodils blooming beside an old foundation.

During my scenic drive I stopped several times to take pictures for future use as reference for my art. I noticed unusual shadows cast by a big pine tree. Of course, someone stopped to inquire why I was stopped. It turned out the concerned local was Sam Stanton's brother Roy. I decided to go over the mountain to take some pictures of New Germany Lake. I hope it will always stay as undeveloped as it is now. I guess a long time ago Deep Creek Lake looked like that, with nothing but clear water reflecting the blue sky, surrounded by just trees and rhododendron bushes and with a handful of fishermen on the beach.

New Germany is among our treasures developed by the Civilian Conservation Corps, as well as Cunningham Lake at the 4-H Camp. Those log and stone buildings at both public facilities are so lovely. That was a great use of federal taxes.

I decided to take the short-cut between New Germany and Bittinger on Otto Lane across from Howe Country Store and then onto Maynardier Ridge Road. It is a pretty steep climb, so I offered a ride to a walker who had a fully packed backpack. It was a Baltimore native transplanted to Jennings. He fell in love with our beautiful scenery, so he said once he saw it he never wanted to leave it. Most of the time most people do not truly appreciate the beauty of Garrett County, but just take it for granted.

A new beautiful sight that I recently saw was tiny Rebecca Diehlman, who is one week old. She is as beautiful as any newborn deserves to be. I was almost as in love with her as her proud mother Patty. She is so sweet, and just as good as she is pretty.

Rodney Glotfelty, along with Jim Jones and his band "The Remedy," will perform this Saturday at Garrett College at 7:30 p.m. at the Garrett Galaxy Program. For middle-aged folks, they still can do rock and roll. You can't get any better entertainment around anywhere, and it is free.

Our daffodils are now in full bloom, which is a beautiful sight to behold.

The Bittinger Volunteer Fire Department held its annual appreciation dinner for the firemen, auxiliary, and their guests at the Hen House West on Sunday. Guests from other volunteer departments were also there.

Sam and Cindy Stanton visited their daughter and husband, Lea and Mike Pochet, in Ohio over the weekend.

Margaret Hershberger Wagner remains in Monongalia Hospital in Morgantown, but hopefully will soon be home to recuperate further before undergoing more chemotherapy. Please limit your visits and phone calls at the present, but cards and e-mails are appreciated. Along with many others, please keep Margaret in your prayers.

4-H Club News

COUNTRY EXPLORERS
by Katelyn Gnegy

The monthly meeting of the Country Explorers 4-H Club was held on April 1. We started it by going to Underwood South to give crafts to the residents there. We also told the residents about our individual projects and showed them some of our work.

After returning to Swan Meadow School, we continued our regular meeting. Reports were given on the Garrett County Public Speaking Contest. Members who attended were Catlin Carrico, J.B. and Katelyn Gnegy, Aaron and Levi Lantz, and Eric Tichnell.

Members who attended the recent Alternative Agriculture Conference were Catlin Carrico, J.B. and Katelyn Gnegy, and Aaron and Levi Lantz. Each of these members gave a report on what they sold at the conference. They also learned how to make their own business cards.

The meat goat conference was attended by Aaron Lantz.

As a new club, we need to officially adopt our by-laws for this club.

This year instead of giving trophies for our club awards, we decided to give certificates.

We voted to adopt Blue Ribbon Road as our Adopt A Highway project. Clean-up on this road is scheduled for next month.

Anyone who wants to "Help Wave the Flag" on Marsh Mountain for the flag day event on June 14 should contact Arlene.

We voted on donating an inflatable croquet set for outside play equipment to Swan Meadow.

Members should get applications for 4-H Camp in quickly, as all forms and a $70 deposit are due by May 2. We decided on having a fundraiser to help with camp costs. We plan to sell hoagies and have a bake sale later this month.

We also decided that we want to plan a another trip to Washington, D.C., next year.

Faith and Nathan Tichnell gave demonstrations on their hobby projects. Eric Tichnell and Aaron Lantz gave demonstrations on their public speaking presentations, since our members were headed to Hagerstown on Saturday for the regional competition.

The feeder pig, lamb, and goat sale will be held at the fairgrounds on April 15.

Our next meeting will be held May 6, starting at 6:30 p.m. with trash pickup. The program will be a bicycle rodeo, and members are to bring their bikes.

Teens Across State Gear Up For Envirothon

Across Maryland, teenagers are grabbing their binoculars, pulling on their waterproof boots, and consulting their field guides as they gear up to take part in the first round of competitions leading up to the 2005 Canon International Envirothon, North America's largest and most prestigious natural resources event for high school students.

"This kind of hands-on academic programming is a valuable way for students to understand the complexities of our environment and about career choices," said Gov. Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. "It is exciting to know that Maryland students are developing the enthusiasm and skills they need to become our next natural resources professionals and future guardians of the Chesapeake Bay."

Students participating in the Envirothon have been studying the state's natural resources all year. The learning experience and competition take place in a variety of outdoor and indoor settings. During their training, the teenagers identify and categorize living resources, perform soil surveys, measure tree heights, and solve other complex natural resource issues. They receive hands-on instruction from such natural resource professionals as foresters, soil scientists, wildlife specialists and environmental engineers from local, state and federal agencies as well as private environmental organizations.

Teams compete by applying their knowledge and problem-solving skills in these areas. The team with the highest cumulative total wins the local competition and advances to the Maryland Envirothon, scheduled for June 21-23 at Harford Glen Environmental Education Center in Bel Air.

The winner of the Maryland Envirothon earns the right to represent the state at the 2005 Canon International Envirothon. More than 300 of the brightest teenagers from across the United States and Canada will participate in this rigorous competition, slated for later this summer in Springfield, Mo.

Envirothon is sponsored by soil conservation districts and the State Soil Conservation Committee.

The Garrett County Envirothon Competition will take place on May 4.

For more information on the local competition, persons may contact Shaun Sanders, Garrett Soil Conservation District, at 301-334-6951.

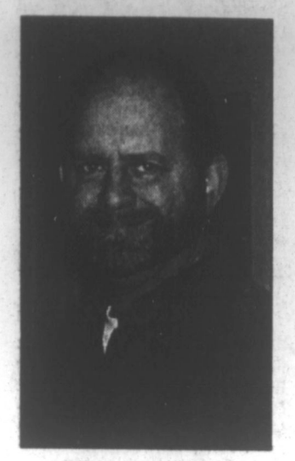
McHenry UM Church Plans Revival Services



REV. JIM POND

At the invitation of Rev. Bill Dawson, the Rev. Jim Pond of Star Junction, Pa., will hold revival services at the McHenry United Methodist Church, April 24 through 27, beginning at 7 p.m. each evening. Rev. Pond is a United Methodist pastor in the Western Pennsylvania Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Pond grew up near Portland, Ore., and received an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy. He graduated with a bachelor of science degree in 1975. He was commissioned for the United States Navy and was married two days following graduation from the academy. He and his wife Debbie have two grown children.

Rev. Pond has traveled to Japan, the Philippines, Italy, Cuba, the Panama Canal, Korea, the Persian Gulf region, and many other locations. He retired from the Naval Reserve as a commander in 1997.

His ministerial experience came in 1998 when he was appointed as a local pastor in the United Methodist Church for the Meyersdale (Pa.) charge. He was appointed in 1999 to the Redstone Parish in the Western Pa. Annual Conference. Pond earned a master of divinity degree from the United Theological Seminary of Dayton, Ohio, graduating in the spring of 2003.

"Jim is a wonderful pastor and friend," said Pastor Dawson of the McHenry U.M. Church. "Jim and I attended seminary together, but it wasn't until we went on a mission trip that we really learned a lot about each other. The two of us went to Russia on a Volunteers-In-Mission trip to the orphanages in and around Moscow. We left the states as friends and came back as true brothers in Christ."

Currently, Rev. Pond is a probationary elder in the Western Pennsylvania conference, and is working toward his Elder's Orders in 2006. In addition to the responsibilities of his full-time ministry, Rev. Pond spends his time singing in a quartet and coaching Little League baseball and soccer.

Along with the guest preacher, the revival services will feature special music, including "4/4 the Shepherd," made up of four United Methodist pastors who formed a quartet while in seminary together. The members are the Revs. Pond, Kenneth Haines, Randy Vincent, and David Cartwright. The music on Monday, April 25, will be presented by Garrett County talent, and on Tuesday will be provided by Britney Palmer from Fairmont, W.Va. The final night's music will be provided by a husband and wife team from Garrett County.

All are welcome to attend any or all of the revival services.

QUARTET TO BE PART OF MCHENRY UM CHURCH REVIVAL – "4/4 the Shepherd," a quartet made up of four United Methodist pastors who attended seminary together, will take part in revival services slated at the McHenry United Methodist Church. The revival will be held from April 24 to 27, beginning at 7 p.m. each evening, and will feature the Rev. Jim Pond as the main speaker. Special music will be presented each day. The members of the quartet are pictured above. Seated is Rev. Randy Vincent, and standing from left to right are Revs. Kenneth Haines, David Cartwright, and Pond. Other music will be provided by local musicians, as well as by Britney Palmer of Fairmont, W.Va. See story.

Garrett College Schedules May "Mini-Mester" For Adult Learners

Garrett College's second annual "Mini-Mester for active adults" is divided into three time frames from 9 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. from Monday through Wednesday, May 16-18. Once again, a variety of short courses will be available for people to choose from, according to Patty Kelley, coordinator of the Center for Lifelong Learning.

This year's schedule will make it possible for a person to take two courses in the mornings and one in the afternoons. Each course will meet all three days for 1 hour and 15 minutes, with three courses scheduled for each time period and a 70-minute break for lunch.

The first time period, from 9 to 10:15 a.m., will offer a history course, a business course, and a film course.

Paul Shogren, local historian and vice president of the Garrett County Historical Society, will teach a course on the French and Indian War that will include the worldwide Seven Years War and the connection with the Revolutionary War.

Beverly Williams, business consultant, will teach a course titled Supplementing Retirement Income with a Home Based Business that will include information about the most popular home businesses, and help students determine if they have the personality, skills and temperament to operate a successful business from home.

A film course will be taught by Jack DuBose, language arts instructor at Garrett College, who will show excerpts of films from a specific movie genre and guide the discussion to develop appreciation of movies as an art form and increase understanding of the basics of the film medium.

In the second morning period from 10:35 to 11:50 a.m., a computer course, a course on World War II, and a course on Islam are being offered.

Getting to Know Your Computer, taught by Beverly Williams, will include desktop functions such as cursor, pull-down menus and taskbar, creating folders and storing files, and launching applications.

The World War II class will include discussions of the war in Europe, the war in the Pacific, the role of women in the war, the aftermath of the war, the Marshall Plan, and the Holocaust. This course will be taught by Shogren, a veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps, and Joan Crawford, a former professor of English at Garrett College and U.S. Navy veteran.

A course on Islam will discuss the politics, religions, and languages of the Middle East, the influence of the prophet Mohammed on the faith's development, and the accomplishments influenced by Islam. Instructor Donna Lee Shogren, who taught Muslim students in Egypt while working as a missionary, holds a master's degree of sacred theology with a specialty in international studies from the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary.

Following the lunch break, the third time period from 1 to 2:15 p.m. will offer courses in art, creative writing, and gardening.

Ginny Neff, local artist and former art instructor in Baltimore City Schools, will teach Pen and Ink Drawing, where students will learn to draw an image in pen and ink from a photo of their home.

Ginny Grove, adjunct instructor of English at Garrett College, will teach Poetry and Prose. The course will show students how to write about their mother or another close family member, and to write limericks, foolish rhymes, or "fantastical" tales.

Growing Better Gardens, taught by Garrett College agricultural studies coordinator Richard McRobie, will include the benefits of composting and proper soil care, getting rid of insects and weeds, proper placement of plants, and effective pruning methods.

For cost information and to register, persons may call the Continuing Education and Training Office at 301-387-3069.

Bike-A-Thon To Raise Funds For St. Jude's

A Wheels-For-Life Bike-A-Thon to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital will be held on Saturday, May 21 (rain date June 4), at Broadford Park. The Garrett County community is invited to "help save lives by participating in the event," a spokesperson said.

The event, which will last most of the day on the 21st, is being sponsored by the Swanton Kids For Christ Puppet Ministry/ Youth Group. It is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

By participating in or attending the event, persons will help raise funds for the internationally recognized hospital. The proceeds will go toward St. Jude's ongoing fight against childhood catastrophic diseases.

The Bike-A-Thon is open to all ages. The town of Oakland has donated the use of Broadford Park for this event. A secure bike route will be set up throughout the park for participants to bike safely. Those taking part will be responsible for collecting pledges and/or donations for each mile completed.

Each participant who turns in pledges and/or donations will receive a certificate. Riders raising $35 will also receive a T-shirt, and those raising $75 will receive a sports bag and T-shirt or sweatshirt. The rider raising the most money over $125 will receive a super slim portable CD player (limit, one per event; in case of a tie, a drawing will be held).

Organizers are seeking area businesses and organizations who are interested in donating additional prizes and refreshments for the riders. The Garrett County Health Department will offer bicycle helmet checks and will pass out information pertaining to bike safety.

Refreshments will be served throughout the day. The Kids For Christ Youth Group encourages the community to sponsor riders and to make donations, or to take part in the event.

"Our goal in holding this event is to help the children of the world who are stricken with diseases like cancer, AIDS, and sickle cell disease," said June McClosky, coordinator. "St. Jude Children's Research Hospital is a world leader in the fight against these diseases, and it has made great progress because of the help of people like the citizens of Garrett County."

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital is internationally recognized for its pioneering work in finding cures and saving children with cancer and other catastrophic diseases. Founded by the late entertainer Danny Thomas and based in Memphis, Tenn., St. Jude freely shares its discoveries with scientific and medical communities around the world, a spokesperson said.

"No family ever pays for treatments not covered by insurance, and families without insurance are never asked to pay," the spokesperson said.

St. Jude is financially supported by ALSAC, its fundraising organization. For more information, persons may visit www.stjude.org.

More information on the local event will be published in future issues of The Republican.

Zion Lutheran Women Convene

Women of the ELCA, Zion Lutheran Church, Jennings, held their monthly meeting in the church on April 8.

The topic," Outrageous Generosity," was led by Leota Baker. The principal endeavors of the lesson were to compare modern and ancient assumptions about good and bad behavior, reflect on the experience of undeserved love, and to consider how freedom works in one's relationships with God, as well as in relationships with one another. Based on the parable of the Prodigal Son, the study opened with singing the hymn "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult."

Judy Stanton presided over the business meeting. A gift offering was presented by Shirley Yommer, given in memory of her husband, Richard Yommer. A portion of this gift will remain in Zion's unit, and a special offering was forwarded to Women of the ELCA–Churchwide, in memory of Mr. Yommer designated for the specific ministry of Strengthening Families and Communities.

The quarterly offering was sent to the American Bible Society for the Bible-a-Month ministry.

An announcement was made of the spring assembly of the Monongahela Valley–Mountain Cluster Women of the ELCA to be held at St. Paul Lutheran Church, Morgantown, W.Va., on April 16. The theme of the day will be "Fed By the Bread to Act Boldly."

A report of activities thus far for this year was given. Although study sessions were not held from January through March, various projects were completed during the winter months.

Twelve lap robes and 12 chair pads were made and sent to Pendleton Nursing Home in Franklin, W.Va. Fourteen baby quilts were made and sent with six men's shirts and two packets of dress material to Our Savior's Lutheran Church, Box Elder, Mont., for its layette ministry and clothing give-away to residents on the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation.

Twenty invalid gowns were made from men's shirts and sent with three dresses and a pair of bedroom slippers to the Lutheran Home at Kane, Pa.

Subscriptions were renewed to Lutheran Woman Today magazine.

Special offerings had previously been sent in March to Women of the ELCA–Churchwide, as tributes to the memory of Lucretia Stanton and Richard Yommer. These gifts had also been designated for the specific ministry of Strengthening Families and Communities.

Thank-you cards have been received for the packages sent and from the Stanton and Yommer families.

WALK IN THE SHOPPER'S SHOES!

Imagine walking into a ritzy department store to purchase expensive clothing or jewelry. Now imagine your surprise when you find the store lighted with a few dim 40-watt bulbs hanging from the ceiling. Unable to tell navy blue from black, or diamonds from zircon, wouldn't you feel that the store was playing in the wrong league?

What if, across the street, another store offered merchandise that really dazzled your senses? Brilliant diamonds in crystal clear showcases, striking mannequins adorned with the latest fashions. Which store would get your business?

Now imagine you're selling your home. Will buyers see a freshly painted exterior and neatly trimmed yard? Inside, will the aroma of fresh baked bread or cinnamon rolls bombard their senses? Will sparkling windows flood your home with sunshine?

Just as department stores merchandise their wares to appeal to your senses, you must do the same with your home to attract serious buyers who comparison-shop. To be chosen, a home must reflect pride-of-ownership and the greatest possible value for the price.

Capitalize on the condition of your home by asking your real estate agent to "walk-through," giving you ideas to improve its curb appeal. Now make all needed or cosmetic improvements before the home is shown. You'll find that a house offered for sale in model home condition can actually create competition among buyers for its purchase!

If you'd like to sell your home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

General Permit for Discharges from Surface Coal Mines and Related Facilities

The Department proposes to reissue a State/NPDES (National Pollution Discharge Elimination System) general permit for discharges from surface coal mines and related facilities for the next five years.

General Discharge Permit No. 06CM for Surface Coal Mines in Maryland is necessary to meet federal requirements and to protect water quality. The permit replaces one issued in February 2001, and contains the same discharge limitations and other conditions as that permit.

Specifically, for active mining areas, there are limits on turbidity (50 NTU monthly avg., 100 NTU daily max.), total iron (3 mg/l monthly avg., 6 mg/l daily max.), total manganese (2 mg/l monthly avg., 4 mg/l daily max), total suspended solids. (45 mg/l daily max.), and pH range (6.0 to 9.0). For reclamation areas, there are limits on settleable solids (0.5 ml/l daily max.) and pH range (6.0 to 9.0).

The permit authorizes discharges of storm water runoff and ground water seepage to surface waters of the State from surface coal mines, access roads, reclamation areas, and associated coal storage and loading areas. It does not authorize discharges from acid mine drainage, deep mines, or reclamation areas, which may be covered by individual discharge permits.

The Department will hold a public hearing concerning the tentative determination on Friday, May 20, 2005, at 10:30 a.m. at Allegany College, Continuing Education Building, Room 8, Cumberland, Maryland. Any hearing impaired person may request an interpreter at the hearing by contacting Ms. Deanna Miles-Brown at 410-537-3173 at least five working days prior to the scheduled hearing date.

All information supporting this tentative determination, including the draft permit, may be reviewed by contacting Patsy Allen at the Maryland Department of the Environment, Water Management Administration, at pallen@mde.state.md.us, at the above address, or by telephone at 410-537-3625 to make an appointment during the hours from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Copies of the document may be obtained at a cost of $0.34 per page. The draft permit can also be viewed on MDE's website at mde.state.md.us.

Written comments concerning the tentative determination will also be considered in the preparation of a final determination if received by Patsy Allen at the above address, on or before 8 a.m., Friday, May 27, 2005.

It is thereupon, this 8th day of April 2005, by the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland, ORDERED that the notice be given in accordance with Rule 2-121 by certified mail requesting: "Restricted Delivery – show to whom, date, address of delivery" on the defendant named in the complaint, warning the Defendants to be and appear in this Court by the 7th day of June 2005, and redeem the property and answer the complaint, or thereafter a final decree will be rendered foreclosing all rights of redemption in the property, and vesting in the Plaintiff a title free and clear of all encumbrances.

ORDERED that the notice be given by the insertion of a copy of this Order in some newspaper having a general circulation in Garrett County, once a week for three successive weeks before the 29th day of April 2005, warning all persons interested in the said property to be and appear in this Court by the 7th day of June 2005, and redeem the property and answer the complaint, or thereafter a final decree will be rendered foreclosing all rights of redemption in the property, and vesting in the Plaintiff a title free and clear of all encumbrances.

FAIR HOUSING MONTH 2005
A PROCLAMATION

Passage of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1988, popularly called the "Fair Housing Act," declares as a national policy that housing throughout our country be made available to all citizens on the basis of equality and fairness. The act outlaws any preference, limitation, or discrimination in the sale, rental, or financing of housing because of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, handicap, or familial status.

The Fair Housing Act reflects Americans' willingness and determination to make sure that housing is available to all without discrimination. In the two decades since its initial passage in 1968, judicial and administrative enforcement and public and private efforts to induce voluntary compliance with the law have helped countless people obtain the housing they desire. America truly has succeeded in moving closer to the ideal of a society open to all.

Every American is entitled to freedom from discrimination in housing; April 2005 is an appropriate time for all of us to reaffirm our dedication as a Nation to the principles of equal opportunity on which the Fair Housing Act is grounded.

The Mayor and Town Council of Mountain Lake Park has designated April 2005 as "Fair Housing Month." Mayor Britten L. Martin Jr. is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation in observance of this event.

NOW THEREFORE, I, Britten L. Martin Jr., Mayor of the Town of Mountain Lake Park, do hereby proclaim April 2005 as Fair Housing Month.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this 7th day of April 2005.

By authority of the Mayor and Town Council of Mtn. Lake Park

Secrets To Getting Organized

Spring is a time of rebirth and renewal. Flowers are blooming, baby birds are chirping, the sun is shining. The season is also synonymous with cleaning, as you have renewed energy to tackle projects otherwise overlooked. Now is the time to sort through those clothes you haven't worn in years, get rid of those socks whose mates have been eaten by the dryer, and finally clean out your "junk drawer."

Organization boasts numerous benefits. According to the National Association of Professional Organizers, organized people save time and money and have lower stress and frustration levels. Plus, organization helps you find things faster and easier, giving you more room for the essentials. The closet is a great place to start your "mission organization." Here are some easy ways to organize closet clutter:

STORAGE SOLUTIONS

Organizational products, which are available in many home and department stores can make conquering clutter that much easier. These storage tools will maximize closet space and help you find things easier and faster. Some items include:

1. Shelving can lift clutter from the floor. Preassembled stackable shelves (often made of wire) come in a variety of sizes to fit your closet. For heavier items, installed, wooden shelves will be better as they can hold more weight. Get even more leverage out of shelves by storing items like purses or umbrellas in bins and shelf dividers. Not only will these items organize your shelves, but they will free up floor and drawer space, too.

2. Maximize your clothing rod. Multilevel rods can give you an extra rod to hang clothing. Just be sure items on the lower rod don't touch the floor. Special clothing hangers are an ideal way to hang clothing. Collapsible, multi-tiered ones will enable you to hang multiple shirts downward, giving you more space on your rod. You can also purchase special hangers suitable for ties and belts.

3. For shoe addicts, a sturdy shoe rack can store all your sandals, pumps and sneakers. If you have a small closet or want to double your shoe storage space, invest in a hanging shoe rack that can attach to the back of the door. Or, get a shoe bag with pouches to stores shoes as well as scarves, pantyhose and belts. Pouches should be transparent so that you can easily find items. You may also want to store your shoes in their original boxes. You can tape a picture of the shoes on the outside of the box so you know what is inside.

4. A closet organizing system can free up space and give you extra shelving and clothing hanging areas. Hook it over your closet rod, and you'll gain more storage area and floor space, too.

Get organized with organizational products. The jewelry cabinet featured above doubles as a cabinet and a mirror and can be hung in your master closet or mounted on a wall.

5. Install hooks for hats, bags, umbrellas and purses. That way, you can grab them and go.

6. Take advantage of your door. Over-the-door organizers hang items like laundry bags, ironing boards and coats.

7. A hanging organizer can help organize your jewelry. The Jewelry-Closet™ Cabinet, a solid wood cabinet designed to hold jewelry, doubles as a wood-framed, full-length mirror. Hang it inside your master closet, behind a door or anywhere on the wall to keep your finer things in place. The cabinet, which comes finished or unfinished in oak, cherry, maple and white, can be surface mounted or recessed into a wall or closet to reveal only the mirror. When the door is opened, you can see all of your jewelry in an organized fashion, without searching through drawers of tangled necklaces and mismatched earrings. For security, a lock is available, and the cabinet can be connected to a security system.

For more information on the Jewelry-Closet Cabinet, call (800) 320-2201, or visit www.jewelry-closet.com.

Countdown To Home Ownership

Purchasing a home involves a roller coaster of emotions, a pile of paperwork and nerves of steel. Beginning the process without a cursory course in home buying is not a wise venture. Here are steps along the way to expect on the way to your final destination – home ownership.

Step 1: Affordability: Before you visit a real estate agent, decide on a price range. The best way to do so is to sit down with a financial consultant or mortgage broker who will weigh your current debt against your income and savings.

Step 2: Finding a home: Finding your prospective home can be a time-consuming process. Consult with a real estate broker, who will have current listings and up-to-date information, or set out on your own search by visiting open houses.

Step 3: Making an offer: In most states, you'll be required to make a formal offer on the house in the form of a written contract. It will state your intended offer price as well as information on a down payment and proposed closing date.

Step 4: Securing a mortgage: Now that you know your purchase price, find a lender who will agree to lend you the money. Shop around for the best offer from several financial institutions, keeping in mind the current interest rate.

Step 5: Contact an attorney: You'll likely want to contact an attorney who will guide you through the legalities that will ensue. (The seller probably has an attorney working for him.) A lawyer can review the contract and advocate for items in your favor – like improvements that need to be made, or appliances you'd like to keep. Your attorney will also facilitate contact between the seller, so you won't need to be involved so thoroughly in the process.

Step 6: Home inspection: A licensed professional can best assess if the home is structurally sound and built according to code. Should anything be illegal, or just not up to par, the inspector will include it in his report.

Step 7: Walk-through: In most cases, you'll be able to walk through the prospective home right before the closing to make sure the house is in the agreed upon condition.

Step 8: The closing: You'll be required to sign paperwork and present fees, called closing costs. Examples of closing costs include: down payment, property taxes, attorney's fee, points, title insurance, clerical/processing costs, proof of homeowner's insurance.

After you've signed what seems like a million documents, and initialed a million more, you will receive the keys to your new home. Congratulations on being a homeowner!

Easy Apartment Improvements

Living in an apartment presents distinct design and home improvement challenges for renters. Oftentimes, landlords restrict improvements by tenants, imposing rules against painting, structural changes and wallpaper application. Check your lease or consult with your landlord if you are unsure of what is and is not allowed.

For those who are looking to make changes to their apartment, there are ways to follow the rules while also adding a creative flair to your living space.

Overcome bland paint: Neutral wall tones make it easier for landlords to rent and maintain an apartment. Just think of the effort involved in priming and painting over a bold tone every time a tenant vacates the apartment. But what should you do if you are starving for some color as you stare at white walls? Accessories and wall hangings can add the splash of color you need. Seek artwork that is oversized and full of color and movement. Furnish the room with bright, bold-colored sofas, chairs and loveseats that can compensate for lack of color elsewhere. Colored light bulbs or shades can create lighting that casts a hue in the room.

Wallpaper drama: Wallpaper can be very difficult to remove, often making it forbidden in apartments. However, you may want to look into wallpaper borders. (Just be sure to consult with your landlord first). There are self-adhesive, removable varieties. This makes it easy to change your design scheme on a whim, or remove the border if you are moving out of the apartment. They can add a fun mood to bathrooms or kitchens when coordinated with matching accessories.

Beneath your feet: Most landlords will allow a change in carpeting if it already exists in the apartment and has become dirty or grimy. Some don't want a permanent improvement like carpeting to be made, since it requires tacking or nailing into a subfloor. However, you have another option: Manufacturers offer carpeting kits that interlock together and are not attached to the floor. They work like puzzle pieces and can be removed and taken to your next residence. For permanent changes, like changing linoleum in the kitchen or stick-down tiles, ask your landlord before proceeding. He may be willing to offset the cost of this improvement since it could add value to the apartment.

Structural changes: Unhappy with the layout of the apartment? You can use items like curtains or screens to divide rooms. Or use large furniture items like bookcases that can act as "standing walls." Some buildings also allow you to put up "fake" walls that can convert one bedroom into two.

Window treatments: Some apartment complexes want to create a uniform appearance from the outside. This means neutral window treatments or sticking with whatever came with the apartment. Comply with the guidelines by doubling up on window treatments – hang neutral blinds that can be viewed from outdoors but, indoors, jazz up the windows with bold draperies and blinds.

How To Make Spring Gutter Cleaning Safer And Easier

It's spring cleaning time – and you should include gutter cleaning in your plan. In fact, gutter cleaning is much more important than many homeowners think. Spring rain flowing over windows, doors and siding as a result of blocked gutters or gutters that are not well maintained can rot the fascia board behind the gutter as well as door and window framing. Rain can also erode the soil around your home, damage your home's foundation, and even cause a wet basement. To protect your biggest investment and keep gutters operating properly, try these tips:

Tip #1 Think Safety First. Always use a quality ladder to reach your gutters. Safety glasses and gloves are a good idea, too, to protect your eyes and hands. And watch out for power lines so you don't electrocute yourself.

Tip #2 Use the Right Tools for the Job. In addition to needing something to contain gutter debris, you'll also need a tool to scoop it out. The Gutter Getter Scoop from Working Products, Inc. is a good option. It's flexible and shaped to fit the gutter, plus it will keep your hands away from the debris.

Tip #3 Don't Over-Reach. Over-reaching can destabilize your ladder and cause you to fall. Instead, consider a special tool to extend your reach. The Gutter Grabber is a cleaning tool on an extension pole that lets you clean up to 18 feet of your gutter without moving the ladder.

Tip #4 Check the Downspouts, Too. If the spout is clogged, a coat hanger or the handle of your Gutter Grabber can help get the debris out of the spout. Then, use a garden hose to flush out any remaining debris. For stubborn clogs, remove the downspout and flush it with the hose. Covering your downspout with a strainer such as the Gutter Getter Big Top Strainer will help reduce future clogging, as well.

Tip #5 Clean Gutters Anytime They Need It. Most homeowners know that they need to clean their gutters in the fall. But once you understand the importance of gutters, you'll understand why it's vital to clean them out anytime they get full. To protect the value of your home, keep your gutters clean throughout the year.

For more information on any of the Gutter Getter products, visitwww.gutter getter.com, or call toll free at (800) 582-9491.

Gutter cleaning should be on your spring cleaning chore list.

Ceiling Fans Useful For Both Heating And Cooling House

Ceiling fans play an integral role in heating and cooling your home. They help circulate cool air in the summer and make homes warmer in the winter. With so many styles on the market, you can find a ceiling fan that will match just about any decor in any room of your house.

If you would like to install a ceiling fan in your home, follow these step-by-step instructions, courtesy of alsnetbiz.com and doit yourself.com.

Note: These are general guidelines. Be sure to consult the specific instructions included with your fan for correct installation of your unit.

1. Shut off the power to the ceiling fixture circuit at the service panel, which is located in the basement, in a utilities closet or in the garage. The switches will be clearly marked so you'll know which one to turn off.

2. Use a metal junction box to support a ceiling fan – never hang the fan from a plastic box. Depending on the brand, style and size of your ceiling fan – and the electrical code in your area – you may use a 3-inch or 4-inch octagonal junction box.

If you are working on a first-floor ceiling in a two-story home and can't reach the junction box, a specialized fan support unit designed to be inserted through the normal junction box hole will save you from opening a hole in the ceiling.

You can find both retrofit and regular junction boxes at the home improvement retailer where you purchased your fan fixture.

3. Assemble the fan: Fan assembly varies from brand to brand. Be sure to follow the specific instructions for the unit you bought.

4. Installing the fan: Install the hanger bracket on the junction box with screws and lock washers. If no lock washers are supplied, purchase some from a hardware store or home center – they prevent fan vibration from loosening the screws over time.

5. Wire the unit by connecting the house's black wires to the fan's black wires, and the house's white wires to the fan's white wires. If your fan has light fixtures on it, follow the instructions that came with your fan. (Normally, the power to the light is supplied by a blue wire.)

The fan should be electrically grounded to the metal box. The grounding wires will be either green or bare copper. Connect the ground wires from the box, the fan and the power supply together with a wire nut, which is a small plastic cap that connects bare wires together. After completing the wiring, the ceiling cover will be slipped up to its full height and tightened in place.

6. Turn the power back on at the service panel. Turn on your wall switch or pull the power cord on your fan to see if the fan is working correctly.

Most fans will wobble slightly when in operation, even when correctly balanced. However, if the fan wobbles considerably when it runs, its blades may be unbalanced. To correct this, try interchanging two adjacent blades. If that doesn't work, take all the blades off and weigh each one on a food or postal scale. If any is underweight, tape a soft object such as a pencil eraser or modeling clay to the top center of the blade, which will make its weight the same as the others. Fan balancing kits with detailed instructions are also available where fans are sold. Reinstall the blades and the fan should run smoothly.

Clutter Can Be Concealed In Various Decorative Ways

If your household bears any resemblance to most – filled with kids, pets and clutter – you may be searching for innovative ways to hide the mess until you can tackle organization later. With responsibilities like work, carpools and the like filling most hours of your day, it can be hard to manage messes that accumulate in the recesses of your home. Rest assured, there are creative and decorative ways to make your home appear less like a "pigpen" and more like a place that's "comfortably lived-in."

• Curtains – More than just decorative accents for your windows, curtains can be used to conceal clutter. Drape curtains between rooms without doors to create a distinct transition. A small curtain can cover the base of a pedestal sink in a bathroom and hide your toiletries, and similarly around a fish tank stand to conceal wires and pet products. You can also use curtains as wall hangings in lieu of artwork. This way, you can use the curtains to cover a wall that is unsightly or is in need of a paint job.

• Screens – No longer used just to provide a private changing area, folding screens can effectively camouflage a messy office area housed in a living room, conceal piles and stacks of books or boxes in corners, or provide a secluded separation in a one-room loft. Purchase ready-made screens in decorative designs from home stores, or create your own screens out of folding doors or other items.

• Suitcases and trunks – Decorative rattan trunks or antique leather suitcases can be a focal point in a room as well as a place to stash clutter. Use them to store magazines, children's toys or craft projects that you haven't completed (like needlepoint or knitting).

• Baskets – Well-placed baskets (even those brimming with items) can look like purposeful design elements rather than just ways to hide stuff. A large one can store folded throws or pillows for a sofa. Small ones can hold keys and change near doorways so you can toss them "neatly" upon entering the home. Or stack a few at the foot of the stairs to hold items you want to carry upstairs. Baskets in the bathroom can store smaller toiletries, extra towels or extra rolls of toilet tissue. And a tall basket with a cover can make a pretty clothes hamper instead of the traditional plastic variety.

• Slipcovers/Area rugs – Perhaps it's not small items that are compromising the look of your home, but rather larger items like furniture and floors. Transform a sofa or chair that has seen better days with a slipcover. Mask stains on a carpet or damage to wood flooring with an area rug until you can get a new one.

• Dust ruffles – Place a dust ruffle on your bed to cover the gap between the bedspread and the floor. You can stash storage containers, table leaves, vacuums, folding chairs or other larger items under your bed and out of view.

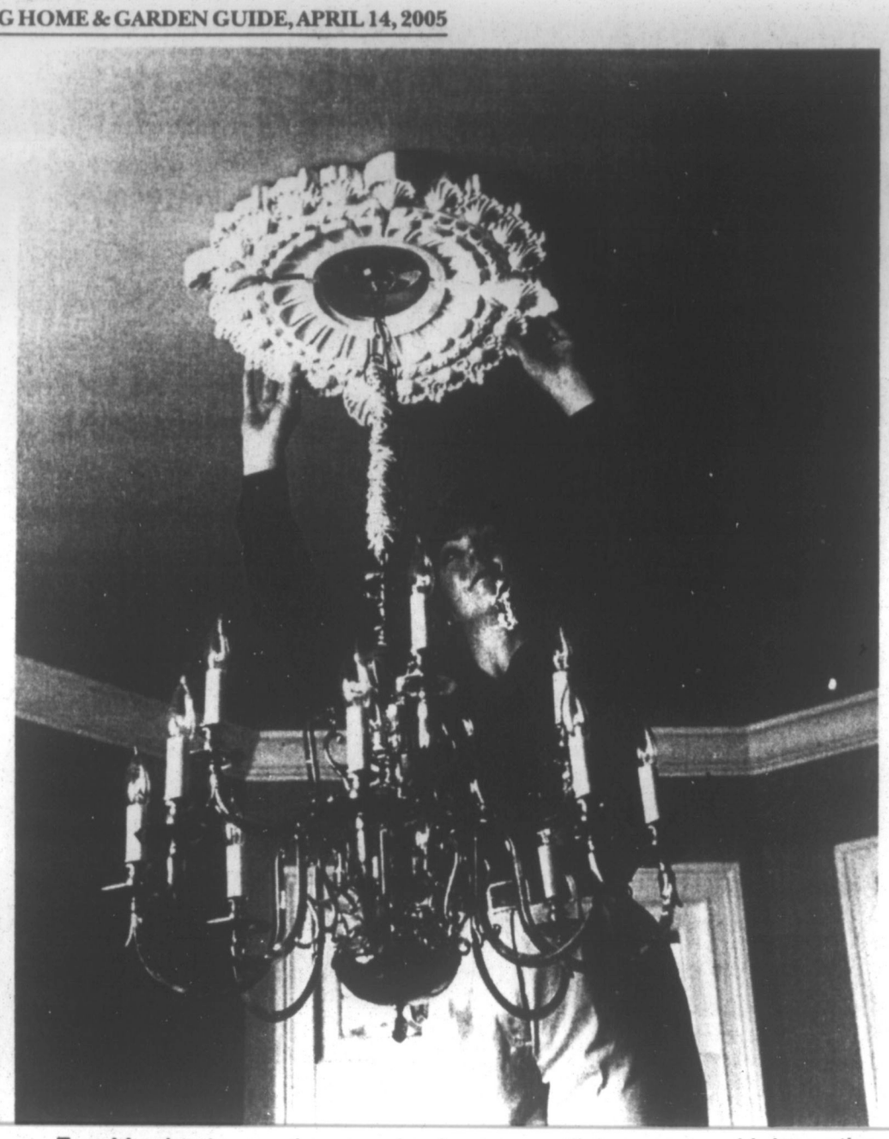
Ten Suggestions For Adding Value To Your Home Offered

Whether you're interested in making a resale investment or just want to enhance your living space, industry experts agree there are a number of easy ways you can add value to your home.

"Home improvement projects always equate to increasing the value of your house," says Don Zeman, host of the home improvement radio show, Homefront with Don Zeman. "Whether you're replacing an old dishwasher with a newer, energy-efficient model or simply adding crown moulding to a bedroom, every activity you do means you're investing in the future of your home."

A contractor and builder for 25 years before starting his nationally syndicated radio show, Zeman knows the best ways to add value to a house. "Research shows that major remodeling projects like adding a bathroom or renovating a basement definitely pay off when it comes time to selling your home," says Zeman. "Those are big projects. Homeowners need to understand that smaller and medium-sized projects can also have huge benefits."

According to Zeman, there are 10 extremely positive home improvement projects that can make life in your current home more enjoyable in the short-term and pay big dividends when selling the home in the future.



To add value to your home and enhance your living space, add decorative interior accents such as Fypon crown moulding and ceiling medallions to any room.

Project #1 – Create a designated home office space. Whether it's just part of a room partitioned off with an obscure acrylic block wall to create a private nook or an entire room, home offices are an essential part of today's living. The multi-functional space can be used for children to study, paying bills, writing or for a home business.

Project #2 – Treat your ceilings as the fifth wall in a room. Accent and embellish them with beaded boards, paints or decorative finishes. Consider adding a lightweight urethane ceiling medallion from Fypon® around ceiling lights and fans. Two-piece medallions snap into place in less than five minutes to add more ambiance to a room.

Project #3 – Invest in your lawn. Nothing puts forth a better first impression than a well-manicured lawn and continuously-maintained shrubs and flower beds. If you're selling your home, a buyer immediately forms his opinion of how well you have taken care of the interior by the look of the exterior.

Project #4 – Replace old, leaky windows with energy efficient vinyl windows. ENERGY STAR™ compliant windows help save on heating and cooling bills all year long. And, for added safety and security, consider Simonton StormBreaker™ Plus impact-resistant windows. Much like a car windshield, when broken the glass in these windows adheres to a heavy invisible plastic interlayer, thus reducing the damage inside the home from storms or crime attempts.

Project #5 – Expand living space by adding a deck or sunroom. Increasing the amount of usable space in a home always equates to adding more value. Whether it's placing an awning over a patio area, converting a screened-in porch to a sunroom or adding a deck, the creation of more living space makes life more enjoyable for you now and adds an appealing selling feature for the future.

Project #6 – Remove mildew from your home's exterior and prevent it from coming back. Start by killing any mildew by using a garden sprayer and JOMAX®, which contains an EPA-registered mildecide that kills mildew without harming your siding, shrubs or grass. After killing the mildew, prevent it from coming back by using PERMA-WHITE® Mold and Mildew-Proof Exterior Paint.

Project #7 – Trim out exterior windows and doors. If you have old, rotting wood around windows (or no trim at all) install all-weather millwork. Fypon cellular PVC trim resists insects, rot and termites, making it an ideal low-maintenance product.

Project #8 – Upgrade the master bathroom with a tub window. Made of durable acrylic blocks, Hy-Lite's fixed and operable windows provide privacy in the bathroom while allowing light into the room. A decorative bathroom window over the tub serves as a focal point in the room.

Project #9 – Replace rotted columns and porch posts with fiberglass columns. When you start spending several weekends each year repairing and repainting exterior rail systems and columns, it's time too invest in low-maintenance fiberglass columns. Structural load-bearing columns from Dixie-Pacific are an affordable investment. Options include columns with lifetime finishes to eliminate painting and a variety of styles to complement any home design.

Project #10 – Bump out to a bay or bow window. Along with adding extra living space, bay and bow windows add instant visual interior and exterior appeal to homes. People value the extended space that can highlight a holiday tree, a window seat or simply adds more light to the home.

For more tips and ideas on adding value to your home, along with information on products discussed here, visit www.homefront.com.

Spring Into The Season With A Spring Cleaning

Now that the wintry weather is gone and the colorful blooms are back, it's time to think about spring cleaning. But while you're washing windows, scrubbing walls and dusting corners inside the house, don't forget about rolling up those sleeves and giving the outside a once-over, too.

Rake

As soon as the lawn begins to wake up for the season, give it a light once-over with a rake, taking care not to disturb any new grass plants by raking too hard. In addition to clearing leaves, twigs and other debris left over from last fall, the first raking of the year also allows you to assess the extent of any winter damage to your lawn. Look for early signs of pests or disease, and nip them in the bud before they cause big problems.

Aerate

Heavy use throughout the year can cause soil to become compacted. Removing plugs of sod in the spring -- aerating -- loosens the soil and lets water, air and fertilizer get down to the grass plant's root structure. For smaller yards, or for concentrated trouble spots in any size yard, consider using a manual aerating tool that removes plugs from the turf. If you have a large yard, consider renting a power aerator.

Top Dress

After you aerate, spend a few minutes doing what the experts call "top dressing," spreading a thin layer of peat moss over the lawn with a rake. The top dressing helps to gradually condition the lawn throughout the year, strengthening the grass so it can resist disease, weeds and thatch, and reducing the amount of water and fertilizer it needs.

Weed

Go after weeds early in the season before they have a chance to go to seed. Cultivating a healthy lawn is one of the simplest ways to crowd out weeds. Or, remove dandelions and other broadleaf weeds with an easy-to-use weeder. Ergonomic tools like the Weed Hound have helped make long afternoons spent weeding nothing more than a backbreaking memory. All you do is place the tool over the weed, step lightly on the footrest, and pull the weed up, root and all.

Fix Bare Spots

Whether it's due to disease or dog urine, bare patches can make a yard look shabby. A quick and easy way of improving the look of your yard is to repair the discolored patches, especially in early spring, when the cooler temperatures help the grass grow. Just clear away the dead-looking patches, sprinkle grass seed on the newly exposed soil, add fertilizer, and keep the area moist until it sprouts.

Remove Thatch Build-Up

Thatch prevents sunlight, oxygen and moisture from getting to the nutrient-hungry soil below. But it's easy to remove, especially if you do it regularly – every year or two. Just go at the yard with a dethatching rake or power dethatcher to clean away the layer of tangled roots and stems. It takes some elbow grease, but it will help clear the way for new growth.

Give Tools a Tune-Up

Spend a few minutes in the garage or storage shed making sure your tools are in good working condition – before you need to use them for the first time. Consider taking your lawn mower in for an annual tune-up. The dealer can replace the oil and spark plugs, sharpen the blade, and get it ready for the season.

A little effort in early spring can lay the groundwork for a thriving, healthy backyard.

Three Simple Steps Offered To Make Amazing Deck Makeover

A deck makeover is a project that can repay you with delight and pride every time you step into your backyard. By following three simple steps – one, clean; two, treat; and three, deckcessorize – you can transform an uninviting deck into an outdoor oasis for family and friends.

1. Clean: Cleaning can reverse years of neglect, removing dirt, mildew, old weathered coatings, and that dark gray color caused by exposure to the elements. A thorough cleaning helps ensure the best performance from your finish. You wouldn't wax a dirty car, so don't try to skimp on the cleaning step.

There is a range of cleaners available to handle specific deck conditions. A deck wash will remove dirt, mildew and similar soils. If your deck has a coating on it, you'll need a heavy duty cleaner or even a deck stripper. Redwood, cedar, mahogany and other high extractive woods also have different natural characteristics than pressure-treated pine, and they need a cleaner specifically formulated for them. Before you begin your cleaning step, check out the Thompson's™ Water Seal™ Web site at www.thompsonswaterseal.com to find the best cleaner for your job (not to mention a wealth of other helpful information).

To make the job easier, look for deck cleaners that are ready-to-use. These may be applied with a brush, roller or sprayer. Depending on your cleaner and your deck, you may need to scrub the surface lightly with a synthetic, stiff-bristled brush. (Be sure to read and follow all the instructions on your cleaner.) After rinsing off the cleaner, check to see if there are any stubborn spots, and reapply as needed.

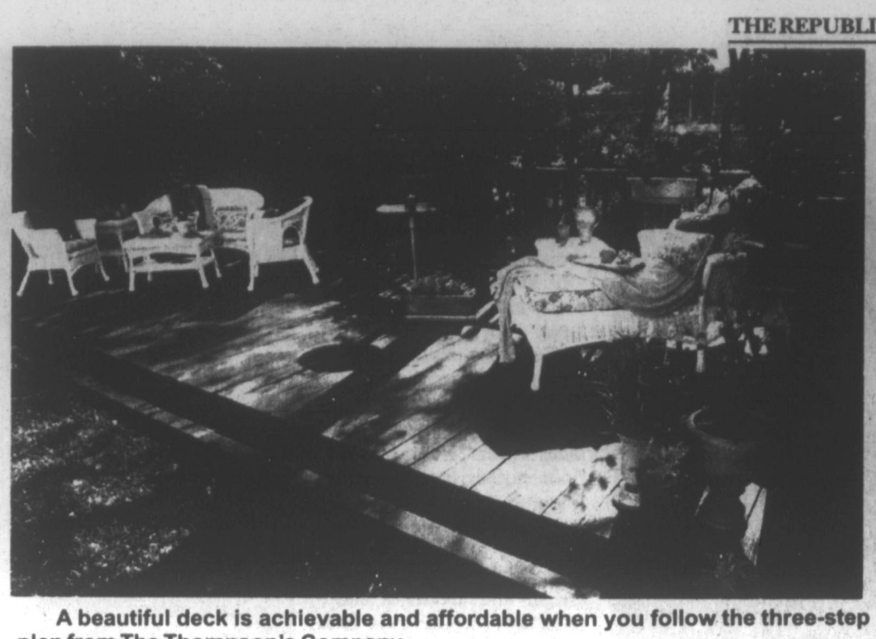
2. Treat: This second step, treating the deck with a waterproofing coating, enhances the beauty of the wood and protects it at the same time. For the fastest makeover and the highest level of water protection, try Thompson's (R) Water Seal(R) Advanced waterproofers. This patented line can be applied two hours after cleaning a surface, making a one-day deck makeover possible. You can choose clear protection with Thompson's(R) Water Seal (R) Advanced Natural Wood Protector, or protection and sheer color with the Thompson's(R) Water Seal(R) Advanced Tinted Wood Protector.

A paint pad attached to a long handle is an ideal tool for applying a waterproofer to a large, open surface, whether it's a deck or a fence. It works the product into the wood and greatly reduces the need for bending and kneeling. For railings, built-in seating or other smaller areas, use a 2-inch brush. Allow your deck to dry for 12 hours, and it's time for step three.

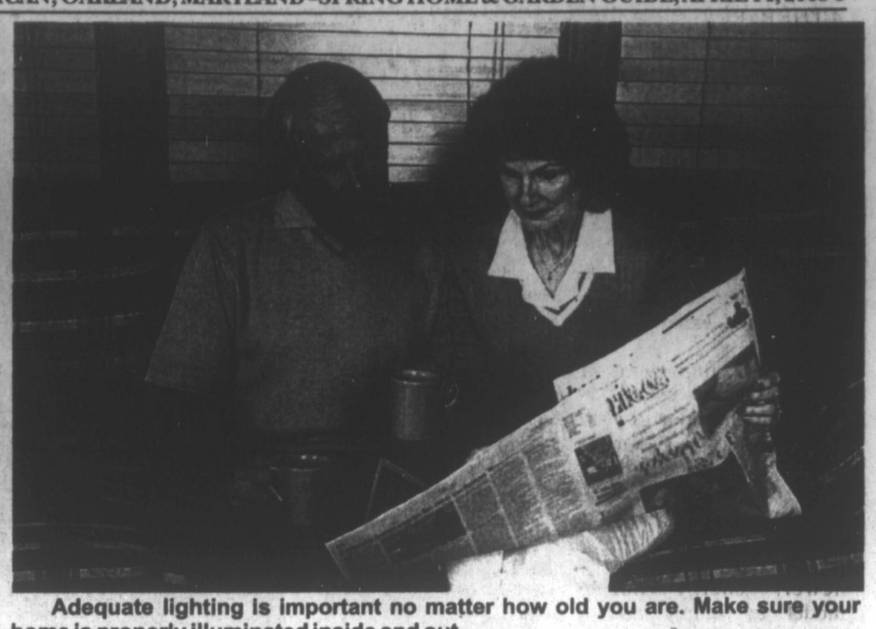
3. Deckcessorize: Outdoor decorating is one of the hottest home improvement trends, so there has never been a broader or more stylish array of outdoor decor products. There are even lamps and fabrics designed specifically to be left outdoors on the deck or patio, and deck storage containers for items you don't want to leave uncovered.

When choosing furniture and accessories, consider the location of the deck. For instance, if your deck was built beneath trees to take advantage of the shade, look for lighter furniture, or use bright cushions to counteract dark corners. If the deck is immediately off the house, you'll want to coordinate with the colors of your home's exterior. (If you have any waterproofer left over from the deck, you can use it on unfinished wood chairs or planters for a truly custom look.)

Now comes the reward – relax and enjoy the beautiful getaway in your own backyard. Your deck should be protected from water damage for two to three seasons, and you don't have to tell anyone that it was as easy as one ... two ... three!



A beautiful deck is achievable and affordable when you follow the three-step plan from The Thompson's Company.



Adequate lighting is important no matter how old you are. Make sure your home is properly illuminated inside and out.

Adequate Lighting In The Home Important For All Ages

Once the kids have flown the coop, many empty nesters downsize their life. Seniors may simplify their lifestyle and buckle down to live life on a stricter budget.

While there are areas where you can cut back, you shouldn't skimp on important safety items like adequate lighting – especially as you get older. Lighting is crucial to preventing falls and eye strain and helps you see properly. Here are some tips to help you see clearly:

Evaluate your lighting needs: Assess your lighting situation by looking at how much light you currently have in and outside of your home. Is there adequate light available for activities such as reading? Is it too dark outside your home to safely see the stairs or walkway? How much sunlight enters your home? You might be unknowingly blocking it from entering. Let the sun shine in by opening curtains, pulling up shades and keeping windows clean.

Types of fixtures: Look for lamps with rocker switches, which are large enough to be turned on if your hands are full or if you have poor hand and finger strength. They can be turned on with an elbow, fist, thumb, umbrella or cane. Also choose fixture styles that clean easily and are easily accessible enough for you to change the bulb. Ceiling lights with bulb covers may look pretty, but they are often hard to change and clean. And, if one of the bulbs burns out or if the fixture is dirty, it won't emit the right amount of light.

Add additional fixtures if necessary: If you find you need more light in your home, be sure to add it to all the right spots, indoors and outdoors.

- Outdoors: Lighting outside your home at night deters thieves from entering and prevents trips or falls on dark stairs and walkways as you enter your home. Stairways should be completely illuminated.
- Work Areas: Incandescent lighting fixtures work well indoors. Place extra fixtures in work areas such as the kitchen or home office. You should have enough light so you aren't working in shadows.
- Reading Areas: Don't put unnecessary strain on your eyes by reading in poor light conditions. Put reading chairs near the window or increase the lighting in reading areas. Use three-way bulbs so each household member can choose their own lighting level.
- Nightlights: Nightlights aren't just for kids. Use them near the bathrooms and in bedrooms, especially if you tend to make a few trips to the bathroom in the middle of the night.

Follow bulb wattage recommendations: Bulbs come in a variety of wattages so you need to check what's recommended for your particular lighting fixture. Don't just buy the highest bulb wattage possible to maximize your light output: The fixture could catch fire.

Bring laminate flooring into your home. It will give rooms like your living room or kitchen a refined and elegant look.

to envision your new room before you start shopping for design accents. Armstrong's new Design my Room℠ program makes redecorating easier and more fun. After selecting or uploading a digital photo, use the program's tracing tool to outline areas where you want to insert new surfaces. Then merely point and click to explore a myriad of design combinations. The program will adjust the perspective for the new surfaces so that, for example, a floor surface looks like it is lying on the floor, not floating above it. The program also lets you share ideas with friends and family via e-mail and creates a shopping list based on your final selections.

For more information on Armstrong products and the Design my Room download and CD, visit www.armstrong.com.

Dramatically Different Flooring Options Offered By Laminates

Hardwood flooring is very appealing for homeowners. Since it's easy to care for and offers a refined look in any room, it's a popular flooring option. However, hardwood can be an expensive investment, and that is why many homeowners are turning to laminate.

Real hardwood flooring is planks of wood cut and finished to be installed in your home. With laminate flooring, a realistic surface color and grain are printed on a piece of paper, laminated onto fiberboard, and then given a protective coating. Laminate offers consumers the look and feel of real wood at a lesser price than hardwood.

UPGRADED TECHNOLOGY

The trend in laminate flooring is upgraded manufacturing technology. One company, Armstrong, has developed MasterWorks™ Technology, which combines refined visuals with realistic embossing. This enhanced embossing accentuates the design's lines and detailing, especially when light is reflected off the surface. These collective technologies allow designs to mirror their original source of inspiration – natural wood.

Armstrong's laminate flooring boasts a water-resistant, high-density fiberboard core that offers a moisture barrier, stability, impact resistance and sound absorption. It also features angle-angle joints, which combine easier installation and stronger joints with engaging appearance.

COLOR AND GRAINS

As a homeowner, you'll want a variety of colors, grains or patterns from which to choose. The right flooring manufacturer will be able to offer a wide selection of products. For example, Armstrong offers laminate that emulates real "hand-scraped" hardwood, rustic accents and the realism of a true hardwood visual with a 4-foot-long, 3½ inch strip laminate flooring. These floors easily complement any traditional setting, providing a comfortable, warm visual in the kitchen, foyer, family room, dining room or bedroom. Or for an inexpensive way to install traditional or French herringbone patterns, try Pacific Heights™ Herringbone.

Wallpapering Is Not Difficult; Adds Elegance To Any Room

Wallpaper can add style and elegance to any room in your home. And wallpaper hanging is easier than you think if you follow a few tips from the pros and use the right tools. Just follow these simple steps:

1. Prepare the surface. Surface prep is an essential first-step to any successful wallpapering project. So first prime the surface with a wallcovering primer like SHIELDZ® UNIVERSAL Wallcovering Primer. Wallcovering primers like SHIELDZ seal, size and hide previous colors in one coat, creating the perfect surface for hanging wallpaper. Priming makes wallpaper easier to position, improves its adhesion, and makes it easier to remove when redecorating. Plus, SHIELDZ with Mild & Mildew Shield technology protects against the growth of mold and mildew under the wallpaper, so it is great for bathrooms, kitchens, laundry rooms and other high-humidity areas of the home.

2. Prepare the wallpaper for hanging. Carefully measure the wall and cut wallpaper to length adding 2 inches to the bottom and top for trimming away when hanging. WALWorks® makes a full line of trimming knives, rollers, sponges and other easy-to-use application tools designed to help make hanging wallpaper faster and easier.

If you're hanging prepasted wallpaper on painted walls or over vinyl, apply PREPZ® One Step Wallpaper Prep and Adhesive to the back of the wallpaper. PREPZ prepares the paper for hanging and eliminates the need for sizing, adhesive and messy water trays. Fold the wallpaper back to itself (paste side to paste side) and "book" wallpaper as per the manufacturer's directions.

3. You're ready to hang! Use a plumb line to align your wallpaper straight on the wall -- letting it overlap on the ceiling by a few inches. Smooth it out using a plastic smoothing tool, like the WalWiz® 3 IN 1 Wallpaper Tool. Trim the overhanging paper at the top and bottom, and you're ready to install the next piece.

4. Admire your work. Before you know it, you'll have wallpapered an entire room! For more "tips" on making wallpaper hanging easy or advice on other home improvement projects, visit www.zinsser.com. Or, call (732) 469-8100.

Twenty Quick Tips Offered To Refresh Your Home This Spring

It's time to wake-up your home from its long winter slumber. To help you get started and achieve instant impact inside and out, Lowe's offers these tips and ideas:

1. Line the home's front walkway with four to five new shrubs.
2. Use asphalt sealer and asphalt caulking compound to fill cracks in the driveway.
3. Install shelving units in the garage to organize gardening tools, auto supplies and athletic equipment.
4. Pamper loved ones by fastening a multi-jet showerhead into the master bath.
5. Clean outdoor grill components thoroughly, and vacuum out accumulated debris with a wet/dry vacuum.
6. Use binoculars to inspect roofing. Call for a professional inspection if torn or broken edges, pinching or bending in the shingles or loose adhesive is spotted.
7. Transform a battered front door with a new door knocker or lockset.
8. Replace all burnt-out light bulbs indoors and outdoors.
9. Conquer clutter one day at a time. Choose one cabinet or drawer to reorganize each day with the help of a caddy or expanding shelf or divider.
10. Hang a window box filled with flowers and greenery outside a prominent window.
11. Scrub recent motor oil stains or other spilled substances off the driveway, deck and other walkways using a scrub brush, liquid dish soap and water.
12. Install a light dimmer switch for an instant way to improve a room's ambiance.
13. Weave decorative paper lantern or twinkle lights through outdoor patio umbrella spokes or small trees near spaces reserved for entertaining.
14. Check gutters to make sure they are all attached to the house and working properly.
15. Focus on filter maintenance. Replace or clean the home's water, furnace, dryer, stove exhaust fan and air conditioning filters.
16. Enhance curb appeal with a new mailbox or by brushing a fresh coat of paint on the mailbox post. Replace or polish tarnished house numbers for extra "oomph."
17. Eliminate dirt from windowpanes with soap suds and a squeegee.
18. Give the kitchen a fresh look by adding sparkling new cabinet and door hardware.
19. Repot cramped house plants that have outgrown their current pots.
20. Unwind after a project is complete by suspending a hammock or hammock swing from two trees or a deck.

Tackling spring spruce-up projects one at a time will help you create an attractive and livable home. For additional How-To project ideas, visit Lowes.com/HowTo.

Families can enjoy the original element of comfort that comes from a hammock.

A Hammock Can Do Wonders For Family Backyard Comfort

With spring comes the desire to start fresh and clean house of all that is stressful. It is the season for lying back and compiling a plan for bringing elements of comfort into your life starting with the great outdoors – your backyard.

The No. 1 element of outdoor comfort is found in a hammock. In fact, hammocks are crafted with the sole purpose of providing comfort. But, a hammock is just a start for your sensory pleasure. From there, many other elements of comfort come into play including scent, touch, motion, as well as personal and natural comforts. Here are the elements you should consider for your hammock:

1. Comforting Spot – Choose a hammock that can provide not only unlimited comfort, but also long lasting life in the elements. "Hammocks today are crafted of various types of materials that are durable in the outdoors as well as decorative with soothing colors and coordinating accessories such as pillows for even greater comfort," says Laurie Rudd, creative director for The Hammock-Source, manufacturer of Hatteras Hammocks and The Original Pawleys Island Rope Hammocks.

2. Comforting Scent – By positioning your hammock next to a flower bed or patio pot brimming with such varieties as lavender, peonies, freesia, or any stress-relieving fragrance, you will soon feel your tensions soothed away. Positioning your hammock in a garden setting is easily accomplished with the addition of a hammock stand. "Various hammock stand styles are available as well as wheel kits that can make moving your slice of comfort to any relaxing location easily," says Chuck Sineath, president of Nags Head Hammocks.

3. Comforting Touch – Hand-woven rope hammocks can provide body-hugging comfort. This tactile, soothing feeling gives great comfort as it molds to the exact shape of the user. Hammocks, unlike patio chairs, offer the ability for full-body lounging, and quilted hammock styles also provide a "floating-on-air" feeling.

4. Comforting Motion – Even before birth, movement has been known to be soothing. In a hammock, a gentle sway or rocking provides that element of motion. "Hammock accessories today include such items as a hammock rocking kit," says J. R. Pelletier, manager of the online retailer, The-HammockCompany.com. "With such a kit, movement can be provided even when a soft breeze is nowhere to be found."

5. Comforting People – Family and friends are often a source of comfort. Lying back in a hammock with a loved one, sitting still for the first time in "who knows when" will provide comfort for your heart. The stresses of the day won't seem as important from the vantage point of a hammock.

6. Comforting Naturally – Nature itself, such as that found in your own backyard, provides comfort with its soothing sights and sounds all around you. Lying still to enjoy them is the secret. Place a comfy hammock pillow under your head, and relax your shoulders, your neck, all the way to the top of your head. You'll see that total comfort is possible.

Achieving these elements of comfort can be realized in any size backyard setting. And with the purchase of one of the many sizes and styles of hammocks available today, your spring-time home-improvement project may end up improving more than just your outdoor spaces.

For more information about hammocks or hammock accessories, contact www.thehammocksource.com, www.nagsheadhammocks.com or www.thehammockcompany.com.

Read. Then Recycle.

Battle May Be Brewing In Yard Between Grass, Trees

There may be a battle brewing in your backyard between your trees and your grass. Trees and turf tend to be mutually exclusive -- you won't see many trees growing in the prairies or grasslands, and grass is uncommon on the forest floor.

Our urban landscapes represent an unnatural ecosystem in which we force two somewhat incompatible plant types together and expect optimum performance from each. Trees and turf compete for sunlight, water, mineral nutrients, and growing space below ground. Turf roots typically out-compete tree roots and win the below-ground battle. But the dense shade of a tree's crown can be too much competition for turf, enabling trees to win the aerial war. Shade leads to reduced grass density, increased root competition, and increased weed invasion. In order for turf and trees to cohabitate, here are some areas you should consider:

•Pruning for light penetration – Pruning to increase light penetration should be considered, keeping in mind that it is usually not a permanent solution. Remember that trees will grow into the voids created by pruning. That's why a rule of thumb is not to remove more than one-fourth of the tree's foliage-bearing crown in a single pruning. If a tree is thinned too much, it will be stressed and will probably produce many watersprouts (suckers) along its branches to compensate for lost foliage. This process defeats the purpose of pruning to allow more light penetration. It may help to "raise" a tree's crown (crown raising) to improve light penetration. Crown raising involves the removal of lower branches on trees, and most tree species are quite tolerant of this pruning practice.

• Root Control – Some trees tend to form surface roots, which can be a major problem in lawns. Homeowners always want to know to what extent they can prune or remove tree roots without killing the tree. Because cut roots tend to develop more roots, root pruning is generally not a solution.

The most simple maintenance recommendation is also the most important. Mulch. Mulching the root areas of trees is one of the least expensive but most beneficial things you can do to enhance tree health and minimize competition with turf. Mulch helps retain soil moisture, moderates soil temperature, and reduces competition from weeds. Organic mulch can help condition the soil and improve microbial activity.

Apply mulch about 2 to 4 inches deep, but do not pile it against the tree trunks. As far as the trees are concerned, the bigger the mulched area the better. Mulch groups of trees together, and extend the mulched areas as far out as practical.

•Fertilization – There is a long-standing, but inaccurate, belief that trees must be "deep-root" fertilized. This notion is associated with the myth that a tree's root system is an underground mirror of the crown. Because most of the absorbing roots are actually in the upper few inches of soil, it makes little sense to place the fertilizer deeper. If you are fertilizing your lawn and trees are occupying the same area, the trees might not require supplemental fertilization. The key to any fertilization program is to base the application on the plant's needs.

•Mowing – Most people don't realize the degree of damage that can be caused by the bumping of a mower or the whipping action of a nylon string trimmer. A tree's bark can only provide so much protection against these devices. Young, thin-barked trees can be damaged almost immediately. In the worst-case scenario, the trees may die. Those that are not killed will be stressed (weak and susceptible), and wounds may serve as entry points for diseases, borers or other insects.

• Chemical treatments – Herbicides, especially broadleaf weed killers, are often used on lawns. It is important to remember, however, that most trees are broadleaved plants and can be injured or killed if high enough doses reach them. Homeowners must keep in mind that "weed and feed" fertilizers contain herbicides, which can damage trees.

• Achieving a balance – Trees and turf can peacefully coexist, even thrive, in a landscape. Armed with an understanding of how each affects the other, a homeowner can modify the environment and the maintenance procedures to optimize the growing conditions for both. One of the best ways to be assured you are making wise decisions regarding your trees is to educate yourself on some of the basic principles of tree care. The International Society of Arboriculture offers consumer information about trees at www.treesaregood.com. To contact an ISA-certified arborist in your area, visit www.isa-arbor.com.

Parents Should Always Set Ground Rules For Mowing

With warmer days come flowers, longer grass, children out playing in the yard, and, of course, lawn mowers. But, parents should remember, when it's time for mowing and trimming, children and outdoor power equipment don't mix.

Children at play are unpredictable. Because they can easily run, jump, or tumble into areas where outdoor power equipment is operating, they could be at risk for serious injury or death.

The best safety practice, according to the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, is to keep children completely out of the work area and supervised -- preferably indoors. Parents need to set and follow strict safety rules, such as those in the operator's manual, before operating riding mowers or any type of outdoor power equipment.

Thinking safety first may prevent accidents:

• Keep children away from the work area, period. Children should remain inside when any kind of outdoor power equipment is in use such as walk-behind or riding lawn mowers.

• DO NOT allow a child to operate a riding mower or any type of outdoor power equipment.

• Child safety is an adult responsibility. Think about this before you mow and if necessary, do not mow until someone is available to supervise the children and keep them out of the mowing area.

• DO NOT allow a child to play on or around equipment that is not running or in storage. If the equipment has a key, remove the key after shutting off the engine to prevent unintended use. Store the key away from the equipment and out of the reach of children.

• Immediately turn off equipment if a child or anyone enters the work area.

• Riding mowers are designed for ONLY ONE person, the operator. They are not built to carry passengers or to tow anyone behind in carts or trailers, even with the blades off.

• NEVER carry a child on your lap while operating a riding mower. Children who have been given rides in the past, or who see another child being given a ride, may run out for a ride themselves, not be noticed by the operator, and have a serious accident. Many runover/backover accidents are the result of a child running out to get a ride!

• Always look down and behind for children before, and while backing up with a riding mower.

• Before mowing, clear the area of twigs, stones, or toys that could be thrown by the mower. Check the area to be sure that children and pets are clear of the area. (Objects can be thrown from the mower blades at very high speeds.)

Further, dress properly for the job. Wear long pants, close-fitting clothes, sturdy shoes, and eye protection. Do not wear anything that could get caught in moving parts, such as jewelry and scarves. Tie back and contain long hair.

For a free booklet on outdoor power equipment safety, contact the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute (OPEI) at 341 South Patrick St., Alexandria, VA 22314 or at www.opei.org.

Always look down and behind for children while backing up with a riding mower.

Mow Master Offers Ideas For Getting, Keeping Lawn Beauty

Wondering about the best things to feed your lawn? Is that a new blade of grass or a weed? Learn the secrets to creating a lush green lawn with advice from John Deere's "Mow Master" Bill Klutho.

Q: When we moved into our new house last year, I inherited a yard full of weeds and crab grass. What can I do this year to get rid of them? -- Needs to Weed

A: Now is the time to prevent crab grass before it comes back. Put down a pre-emergence herbicide before the crab grass seeds germinate and sprout. If you wait until you see the weeds, it's too late. John Deere recommends that you set up an early warning system. When you see the forsythia bushes in your neighborhood in bloom – bright yellow leaves – then spread a pre-emergence herbicide.

Many other common weeds, like dandelions, can be handled with a post-emergence herbicide. Wait until after the weeds sprout and have leaves; then pounce on them with your herbicide. This weed killer is absorbed into the leaves and is circulated down into the root system. You'll have the best results in the spring when the weeds are still growing.

Q: My walk-behind mower was on its last legs, so this year I finally got my dream mower: a new John Deere LX 280 riding mower. Do I need to mow differently with a tractor vs. a walk-behind? -- Riding in Style

A: How you mow is mostly the same, with one significant difference: slopes. When mowing slopes with a walk-behind mower, it's best to mow back and forth across a hill. If you trip and fall, the mower is less likely to tumble on top of you. But with a lawn tractor, mow up and down hills for greatest stability. If the hillside is really ominous, get creative and plant a ground cover instead.

As with any mower, read your operator's manual and pay close attention to all warning labels. When walking backward with a push mower, you should be careful not to run over your own toes. With a riding mower, you have limited visibility and could potentially encounter something without even feeling it; so be extra careful of the space around you. No matter what kind of mower you use, be sure to keep children and pets inside under adult supervision when mowing.

Q: What's the deal with lime and iron? Does my lawn really need them or not? – Curious Cutter

A: You add crushed limestone or iron to a lawn in order to change its chemistry. Grass prefers slightly acidic soil, so you either add lime to bring the acid level down or add sulfur to increase it. If you live in an area where it rains a lot, you might have to lime every year. If a lawn turns yellow, sometimes the culprit is lack of iron. Check with your neighbors to find out what they add during the summers. The best solution is to have your soil tested through your local agriculture extension office. The analysis you receive will tell you what to do.

Green Lawn Care Ideas From The Master Of Mowing

Is your green thumb brown? Don't know your thatch from your fungus? Put a little life in your lawn this spring with advice from John Deere's "Mow Master" Bill Klutho.

Q: It's finally getting warmer, so I can't wait to pull my lawn mower out of the garage. What should I do to make sure my mower is warmed up for the season? -- Spring Fevered

A: Before the warm weather arrives, read your operator's manual to learn your mower's recommended routine maintenance schedule. Most maintenance needs can be handled annually, so now is the perfect time to tune up your mower.

Common maintenance tasks include sharpening your mower blade; replacing the spark plug; clearing fans and intake screens; changing the oil, oil filters and fuel filters; checking safety shields and switches; and replacing the gasoline since old gas can clog the carburetor.

A disregarded or damaged mower can cause harm to your lawn, your equipment and yourself. If you can't or just don't want to perform your own maintenance, take your mower in to your local dealer for a tune up or try John Deere Ready to Mow – a mobile service that actually comes to your home to perform mower maintenance.

Q: Dear Mow Master – I'm a newlywed, and we just bought our first house. Any tips to make my lawn the envy of the neighborhood? -- Married Mower

A: Congratulations. Welcome to the world of marriage, home ownership and lawn care.

To keep your lawn growing as strong as your love, stick to the basics:

•Fertilize your lawn when it starts growing in the spring and in the fall, one month before the lawn goes dormant.

•Follow the John Deere one-third cutting rule, mowing only the top third of the grass each time you mow.

•Most lawns need about an inch of water per week. If you're unsure of how long to water, put a mark one inch from the bottom of several plastic containers and spread them around the watering zone. Clock the time it takes to reach the one-inch mark and water for that length of time in the future.

Make a life-long commitment to safety too – your spouse (and future kids) will appreciate it.

Q: Help me, Mow Master. My lawn is all soft and spongy. Is something wrong? – Concerned Cutter

A: Sound like you've got thatch. Thatch is mostly dead roots caused by excessive watering or fertilizing. Up to a half inch of thatch can be beneficial, as it helps prevent ground compaction and holds moisture in the soil. However, a thick layer of thatch is detrimental. It acts like a sheet of plastic to hold back water, nutrients and air – all the things roots need to stay healthy.

Thatch can also harbor insects and disease. If you already have thatch problems, use a dethatcher or aerate your lawn. To avoid thatch buildup, follow the John Deere one-third rule and mow on the high side. Water your lawn infrequently, but deeply – about an inch a week.

Eight Essential "Don'ts" Are Offered For Healthy Garden

A healthy, well-maintained garden is a beautiful sight, and most serious gardeners strive to achieve that beauty all year long. It certainly takes a lot of time and effort, not to mention proper planning and plant and garden know-how. But to gardeners of all levels, it seems to be well worth the effort, because it's a hobby that's very rewarding: You get to create your own unique masterpiece!

However, throughout that creative process, knowing what "not" to do is equally as important as knowing what you should do to keep your garden thriving year-round. Keep your garden in tip-top shape with these "Gardening Don'ts" from gardener Paul James, courtesy of hgtv.com (Home & Garden Television).

1. Don't fertilize trees, shrubs, or other landscape plants during the late summer. Fertilizing landscape plants encourages new growth. And new growth is extremely susceptible to freeze damage (especially if you live in an area where freezes suddenly occur), which may not be apparent until the following spring. In addition, since your plants have already been growing for several months, by the time late summer arrives, they are ready for a rest as they begin preparing themselves for dormancy.

2. Don't fertilize your lawn with products that are high in nitrogen. It's best to fertilize your lawn while the grass is still green, especially in late summer to early fall. But don't use products high in nitrogen, because turf grasses do not need much nitrogen that time of year. Instead, use a balanced fertilizer with an NPK ratio of 3-1-2 such as 6-2-4 or 12-4-8. Since fertilizers enable turf grasses to produce an abundance of carbohydrates, the grasses can store those excess carbohydrates throughout the winter months. So by springtime, the grasses have all the nutrients they need to produce a lush, green lawn.

3. Don't scalp a lawn, even if you're getting ready to reseed. Scalping (mowing the turf an inch or less in early spring before new growth begins) only stresses the turf and encourages more weed growth by allowing the sun to reach more soil.

4. Don't use a pre-emergent herbicide two weeks before or after sowing grass seed. A pre-emergent herbicide prevents seeds from sprouting, which will also prevent the grass seeds from sprouting, too. If you have a lot of weeds in your lawn, use a post-emergent herbicide. It will only kill emerging weeds and won't affect your sprouting grass seeds.

5. Don't stake trees. Staking actually makes trees weaker. The trunks of unstaked trees are allowed to sway or bend in the wind, which makes them stronger.

6. Walk in garden beds as little as possible. Walking compacts the soil, and plants can't grow well in compacted soil. Since it's impossible to avoid, consider walking on a board. It will distribute your weight evenly and reduce compaction.

7. Don't work the soil while it's wet. Doing so destroys its structure, and it may take months or even years before the soil has a chance to recover. In the meantime, you're left with a bunch of ugly dirt clods, which are not ideal for growing plants.

8. Don't overwork the soil. There is a misconception that a good garden soil must have the consistency of a fine powder. That's why some gardeners constantly work the soil with either a tiller or by hand. The truth is that good garden soil should contain a range of particle sizes and have a fairly coarse textural feel because of its high content of organic matter. This type of soil doesn't compact as easily, drains a lot faster yet has more water-holding capacity, contains more nutrients and oxygen, and is easier to dig in.

When gardening, knowing what not to do is just as important as knowing what to do if you want to maintain a beautiful, thriving garden all year long.

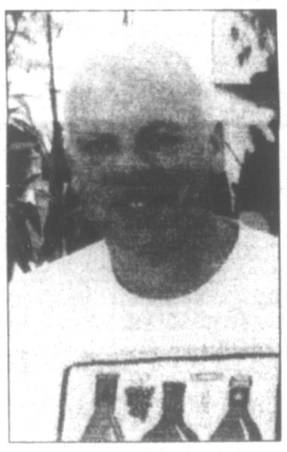
Orchid Program Slated At Next Garden Club Mtg.



KIRK KING

The Mountain Laurel Garden Club will meet Tuesday, April 19, at Red Run, Deep Creek Lake, beginning at 10:30 a.m. Following a business meeting, Kirk King will present "The Culture of Commonly Available Orchids." Lunch will be served after the program.

"Mr. King's goal is to educate owners and would-be owners of orchids about proper watering, fertilizing, light requirements, and repotting techniques," said a club spokesperson. "Information will be shared to ensure the orchid owner of having an enjoyable and rewarding experience."

Anyone who has orchids is asked to bring one to the meeting for King to demonstrate repotting or diagnose any growing problems.

The guest speaker has a B.S. degree from the University of Maryland in biology. He is a retired health physicist with the U.S. government. As a member and past president of the National Capital Orchid Society and member of the American Orchid Society, King has been growing orchids as a hobby for the past 20 years. Tips On Keeping The Birds Away From Your Garden

You spent hours this Sunday toiling in your garden planting small plants that will soon sprout flowers. You go to sleep smiling at the thought of how beautiful your garden will look. But when you check out your garden's progress on Monday morning, you see that hungry birds have eaten all your tiny plants! No more daisies, no more begonias: The only evidence of your work are a few stems.

How do you stop birds from ruining your garden? Follow these tips to prevent future occurrences.

• Plant seeds in peat pots indoors. Once the plants have two sets of leaves, plant them outdoors. Birds often eat plants because of their sweet taste. But this taste wanes after the second set of leaves.

• Cover seedbeds with floating row covers. These covers allow light, water, and oxygen to seep through while protecting against insects and birds.

• Birds get scared easily, so use that to your advantage. On sticks, attach some old CDs and some flash tape (a Mylar tape). Place the sticks near your garden. The CDs and tape will flutter in the breeze and scare away some birds.

• Cover the seedbed with bird netting. Be forewarned that you may have to release birds from the netting if they get caught in it.

• Set the sprinkler system to go on and off at 15-minute intervals. The sudden bursts of water will scare off the birds.

• Plant individual seeds inside milk cartons. It will prevent birds from reaching the seedlings.

Whichever method you choose, keep at it. Birds will always want to eat your new plants. But with some extra effort, you will be able to keep the birds in the sky and your plants in the garden!

Raised Beds Offer An Alternative, Advantages To Traditional Gardens

Whether they're sick of wrestling with poor backyard soil, or simply looking for a unique alternative to traditional gardens, more and more homeowners are "going to bed" – turning to raised bed gardens – to indulge their green thumbs.

If you've never considered creating a raised bed, you're missing out on one of the most personalized experiences gardening has to offer. A made-to-order raised bed offers several advantages over a conventional garden, including:

• Comfort. Gardening doesn't have to be a pain in the back. You can design and build a raised bed to your exact specifications, constructing an easily accessible garden that's the perfect size and shape for you to work on. You can even raise it several feet so you can sit while you garden. Just be sure that it's made of stable materials that won't topple in bad weather.

• Flexibility. A raised bed is limited only by your imagination, likes and dislikes, and ambition. The options are endless: You can use just about any material to form your walls, from cement block or brick to pressure-treated lumber, stone or even plastic. After you've put up the sides, add some gravel to the bottom to ensure that it will drain well, lay the soil --preferably a potting mix with peat -- then water the bed thoroughly and let it settle for a few days before you begin planting. Before you know it, you'll have a versatile, vibrant and one-of-a-kind garden, custom-designed down to the last detail.

• Less compaction. In a conventional garden, footprints and heavy machinery often compact the soil, making it difficult for air and water to reach a plant's roots. A raised bed avoids those problems. Since you'll be able to do all of your gardening from outside its walls, you'll avoid tramping on the soil.

• Higher yields. One study found that the average raised bed garden could yield twice as many vegetables and flowers as a traditional one. Since a raised bed can be tended without actually stepping into the bed, you don't have to leave walking paths between the rows. That means you'll have more room for more plants.

• More control. Poor terrain, a forest of weeds, or thin topsoil? Who cares? A raised bed lets you start from scratch and not have to rely on whatever Mother Nature dealt your yard. Most important, a raised bed lets you control the condition of the soil. A potting mix that contains peat moss is an ideal growing medium for raised beds. It helps regulate the pH, strengthens plants to protect against weeds and pests, and releases moisture and nutrients over time.

Canadian peat moss – a good option for your raised beds – is a sustainable resource. Only one acre in every 6,000 is harvested, and when harvesting stops, the bogs are restored to functioning peatlands. For more information on peat and the environment, visit the Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association's Web site at www.peatmoss.com.

For more information on how to properly condition and prepare your soil, or to order free brochures on "How to...with peat moss" and other gardening tips, send a self-addressed, unstamped, business-sized envelope to: Peat Moss, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN, 55438, or e-mail cspma@peatmoss.com.

Adding a peat-based potting mix makes it easy to plant and maintain a garden, like this 4 foot by 4 foot raised bed.

Allergy-Friendly Gardening

"Ah-choo!" Allergy sufferers get used to wheezing and sneezing come springtime. But according to the American Academy of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology, there are certain plants, flowers, and trees that are less likely to trigger allergic reactions. If you want to keep your allergies at bay this spring, replace what's in your garden or around your home with these: apple, begonia, cherry, clematis, columbine, daffodil, daisy, dogwood, geranium, hyacinth, hydranega, impatiens, iris, lilac, lily, magnolia, rose, sunflower, tulip, and zinnia.

More People Buying, And Growing, Organic Foods

More and more U.S. consumers are buying organic produce. In fact, in 2000, shoppers spent $7.8 billion on organic food – and the numbers keep growing. Those who are willing to spend the extra money buying organic do so for a number of reasons, from avoiding pesticide residues in their food to appreciating the better flavor and texture of organically grown food. If you're reading this and thinking "I already knew all that, that's why I buy organic," then perhaps you've already taken the next logical step – growing your own organic food.

Organic produce has become more readily available in recent years, so you don't have to grow your own; but there is something magical about putting food that came from your garden on the table for your family. "Growing your own food really puts you in touch with your food source," said Glenda Lehman Ervin of Lehman's, a company specializing in old-fashioned, high-quality merchandise. By cooking with fresh produce, you can avoid using a lot of chemical-laden processed foods lacking in nutrients.

Growing an organic garden will take some thought, preparation and care, but isn't that what gardening is all about? It will also give you an excuse to spend time outdoors, get your hands dirty and get a feel for the soil. "Organic gardening is all about working in harmony with nature," said Lehman Ervin.

If you're new to organic growing, you'll need a good source of advice and information. Lehman Ervin recommends Straight-Ahead Organic, a step-by-step guide to growing great vegetables by Sheperd Ogden. It includes information on designing your garden; improving the soil; tools and equipment; seeds and seedlings; and planting and cultivation.

Another favorite is This Organic Life, Confessions of a Suburban Homesteader, by Joan Dey Gussow. "It is part recipe book, part autobiography and part memoir," said Lehman Ervin. It is a gardening book for those who want to grow their own food but don't want to read another "how-to" book.

Armed with your newfound knowledge, you'll need to set to work improving your soil. Adding organic matter to your soil improves its ability to hold water, improves the structure of the soil and adds valuable nutrients. You can find organic fertilizers to jump-start your soil, or use compost you make yourself. Simply add grass clippings, leaves and kitchen scraps to a compost bin and let nature do the rest. You can use a simple home-made compost bin, or opt for a kit that you assemble; tumbling compost bins spin for easy aeration of the compost. Lehman's also offers a selection of handy compost accessories, such as a compost thermometer and an aerator.

Chances are if you're gardening organically, you'll want to protect the environment by avoiding gas-powered gardening tools that spew noxious fumes. Lehman's offers a wide range of human-powered digging and cultivating tools, including a broadfork to break up compacted soil and push cultivators to help keep your soil in top condition. The cultivators turn in fertilizers, root out weeds, make furrows and break up the soil, letting in vital moisture and air. These implements are authentic and highly effective. Since well tended soil is the first step in growing a healthy garden, it makes sense to prepare it thoroughly.

Before you lay out your garden, you'll want to consider where, what and how to plant. For example, you'll want to rotate your crops from year to year so you don't deplete all the nutrients from the soil; think about planting cover crops in the fall, which will help renew the soil for spring planting; and look for seeds that are not genetically modified. Get a jump on the growing season with garden tunnels or portable greenhouses that warm the soil and protect tender young plants, allowing you to get your crops in earlier in the season.

Once the seeds are in the ground, you'll need to protect them from garden pests. Gardening organically means using tried-and-true pest control methods such as building a bat house in your yard to encourage bug-eating bats to visit your garden. Companion planting is another low-maintenance way to combat pests. For example, some gardeners swear that using marigolds as a border around their vegetable garden helps repel pests.

When harvest time rolls around, you'll want to think about preserving the bounty that you can't eat right away. Lehman's has a full range of canning equipment, food mills, dehydrators and other kitchen tools to make it easy to preserve the fruits and vegetables of your labor.

Growing your family's food organically is an act of love, but it really isn't more difficult or more expensive than a traditional vegetable garden.

To see the all the garden and cooking tools available from Lehman's, visit www.Lehmans.com or call 877-438-5346 to order a catalog (there is a $3 charge for catalogs).

Six Easy Steps Are Offered For Successful Container Gardening

Container planting is one of the most creative gardening forms in which color combinations, texture and even the container itself can make a statement. Container gardens can express your artistry or set a mood in the house, on your deck or front porch, and even in the garden.

The following are simple, easy-to-follow steps to get things started – even for those of you who don't think you have a green thumb!

Step 1: Select the right pot for your plant.

• Any container that appeals to you is a possibility -- choose colors, sizes, and styles that not only match your plant, but also your environment.

• Think foam! Foam pots, like those from Fiskars Garden & Outdoor Living, are extremely lightweight yet durable. The pot's polyurethane foam also protects roots in extreme temperatures.

• Pot should be 1 to 2 inches larger than the root ball so roots have room to grow and expand (large plants may need more space – 2 to 3 inches).

Step 2: Create and cover drainage holes.

• Punch holes in bottom of the pot.

• Use wire mesh to cover holes so soil mix doesn't run out with any excess water.

• Fill bottom portion of container with gravel, rocks, pieces of broken crockery or packing peanuts to create a drain field. That way, excess water won't seep through the pot and rot the roots of the plants.

Step 3: Prepare the potting soil.

• Always use a prepared mix; never use soil from your home garden, which almost always contains weed seeds, bugs, or unhealthy bacteria.

• A versatile potting soil suitable for most plants contains 60 percent peat moss, 19 percent Perlite, 20 percent Vermiculite, and 1 percent Lime.

• Always check with a lawn and garden specialist to find out what type of soil mix is recommended for the plants you are using.

Step 4: Add potting mix and plants.

• Add 2 to 3 inches of potting mix to the bottom of the pot (larger plants may require more mix).

• Set plant into pot and add potting mix around sides, tamping down with thumbs as you go.

• Don't be afraid to mix a variety of plants in one container -- a full arrangement could have tall plants in the center, working out to the sides with smaller plants.

• Make sure the top of root ball is just under the top of the soil.

• Leave 11/2 to 2 inches of watering space between the top of the soil and the rim of the pot.

Step 5: Water thoroughly.

• Give a full flush of water through the planter the first time you water it.

• For larger plants, you can opt to place the pot in a tub filled with about 1/2 inch of water for approximately 15 minutes.

Step 6: Place in indirect lighting for 3 to 4 days, and water as necessary.

• Keep an eye on your container garden – especially in hot weather as it can dry out quickly.

• Keep in mind that fertilizers wash out of container soils faster than out of garden soils, so you may wish to apply a liquid fertilizer at half strength to the plant every two weeks.

A strawberry pot is ideal for keeping a fresh herb garden. All it takes are the right ingredients: healthy potting soil with plenty of organic matter like peat moss, herbs, and lots of sunshine.

Grow Herbs All By Yourself

Parsley, sage, rosemary, and thyme. You can grow your favorite herbs in a decorative planter for a delightful display and handy supply. Creating an herb planter is easy. You just need a strawberry pot, about 10 herb plants, peat-based potting mix, some small stones, and a cardboard wrapping-paper tube.

A strawberry pot is an ideal planter because its protruding pockets let an assortment of herbs cascade from all sides, providing versatility in the kitchen, as well as an attractive show on the deck.

Most herbs are sun-lovers, so choose a sunny site where they will be convenient for picking. For attractive results, position tall herbs, such as chives, parsley, and mint, at the center and shorter or trailing herbs toward edges and in the pockets.

For best results, use a top-quality, peat-based potting mix. An easy way to judge quality is to look at the ingredients listed on the potting-mix bag. If Canadian sphagnum peat moss is the first ingredient listed, it means there is more peat than any other ingredient, which assures you of good quality. The proper mix is particularly important for container plants to ensure adequate drainage. Yard soils tend to retain too much water, leading to rotting roots. Poor-quality potting mixes allow water to run through too quickly, leading to dried-out plants.

1. Add about 2 inches of peat moss to the bottom of the strawberry planter. Place the cardboard tube in the center of the planter. Work it into the peat moss so that it remains upright.

2. Fill the pot with potting mixture to the first pockets. Now add plants, gently passing roots through the holes. Cover roots with potting mix, and repeat until planter is filled. Leave about 1 inch between the potting mixture and the planter rim to allow for watering.

3. Fill the cardboard tube with small stones, and then carefully pull out the tube. The stones improve drainage, allowing water to seep evenly throughout the potting mix.

4. Plant herbs in the open soil at the top of the planter. Use herbs that require less water, like basil, thyme, and rosemary.

The herbs should be ready for picking within a few weeks. Water the planter frequently to keep the soil moist but not wet to the touch, and apply a water-soluble fertilizer every two weeks. Pick herbs often, never taking more than a third of the plant at one time. The best time to pick is in the morning. For best flavor and fragrance, harvest herbs before they bloom.

For more information on how to properly condition and prepare your soil or other ways to use peat moss, send an unstamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to Peat Moss, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN, 55438. You can also visit www.peatmoss.com..

The Canadian peat industry is committed to making peat a sustainable resource. Only one acre in every 6,000 is harvested, and when harvesting stops, the bogs are restored to functioning peatlands. For more information on peat and the environment, visit the Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association's Web site at www.peatmoss.com.

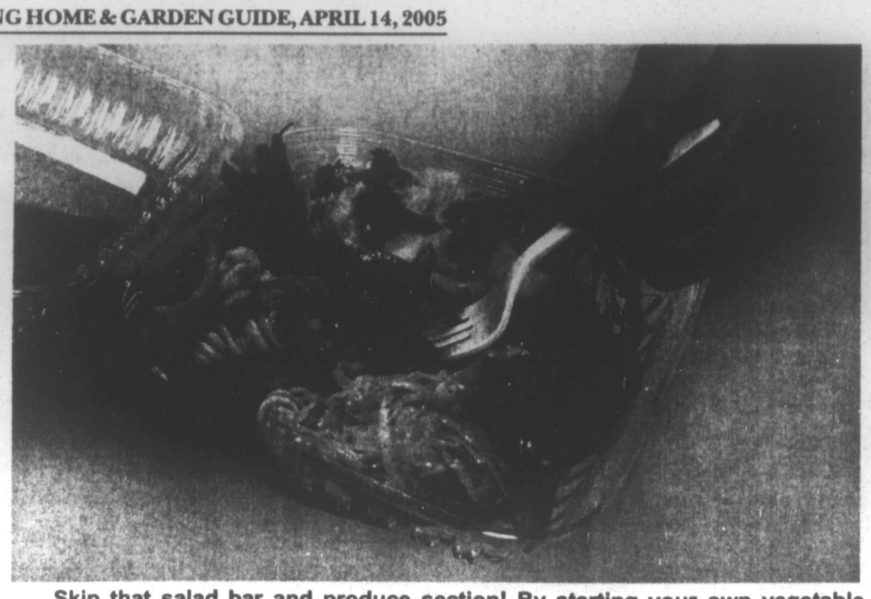
Getting Back To The Basics In Backyard Vegetable Gardening



Skip that salad bar and produce section! By starting your own vegetable garden, you can enjoy a salad with vegetables that are right from your own garden.

Anyone can buy vegetables. But when you grow them yourself, you can literally eat the fruits (well, vegetables!) of your labor. It's like having your own personal produce section – a deep-purple eggplant in the summer or a golden butternut squash in the fall, right from the vine. All you need to get started is an outdoor space that gets at least six hours of direct sunlight per day and boasts rich, fertile, well-drained soil. And, importantly, you must be willing to pour love and care into your garden. Here are the tools to make your garden grow:

Pick your plants wisely. Beginners are smart to start with easy-to-grow plants like tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, squash, and eggplants, says Fran Sorin, author of Digging Deep: Unearthing Your Creative Roots Through Gardening, (Warner Books). You can also factor in what you like to eat. However, Debbie Lonnee, a horticulturist at Bailey Nurseries (www.baileynursery.com), warns that you have to consider the climate of your hometown. "A veggie garden in Minnesota is entirely different from one in North Carolina," she says. "You have to consider the last frost of the spring, the first frost of the fall, and the number of frost-free days in between. The length of the season will help you determine which varieties of vegetables may grow best." Your best bet is to ask an expert at your nursery or the place where you purchase your seeds and plants.

Plant in the proper location. Your garden won't flourish if you don't have enough room to properly space out your vegetables. Beans, for example, tend to grow on stalks that need to be properly attached to a trellis that allows them to climb upward. And zucchini have large leaves and flowers that need plenty of space to grow.

You can also strategize about the placement of plants. "Certain plants thrive alongside one another and make excellent companion plants: Hot pepper plants do well alongside eggplant, tomato, okra, Swiss chard, escarole, squash and cucumbers," according to garden writer Pepper Joe's article, "Planning and Designing Your Vegetable Garden," for www.gardenguides.com. He also suggests placing your smallest plants in the front of your garden and continuing in ascending height order so the tallest are in the back. This strategy maximizes each plant's sunlight by preventing shorter plants from getting shade.

An affordable landscape-design program for your computer or a simple sketch allows you to map out the design of your garden and plant placement. Plant vegetables far enough apart so there is plenty of air circulation between them when they mature, says Sorin. One of the biggest mistakes that novice gardeners make is to plant their new plants too close together with no understanding of how huge they will become, she says.

Once you've decided what to plant and where to plant it, follow the instructions for sowing your veggies that are on either the back of the seed's packet or on the postcard that came with your plant.

Shower them with love. Vegetables need about one inch of water per week. If the rainwater isn't enough, add water to plants with a hose. Plants should be watered either early in the morning or late in the evening. There is little or no sun during those times, so you prevent scorching and water evaporation.

Control weeds and bugs. Pulling out weeds and controlling critters are other important aspects of caring for a vegetable garden, says Lonnee. A fence will keep out animals like deer or squirrels. But don't forget to be wary of insect infestations, she says. Sorin suggests buying ladybugs, which are predators for unwanted insects, and placing them in your garden. She adds that neem oil, an all-organic insecticide, will also help eliminate pesky bugs. She suggests using mulch and organic fertilizer to help the soil retain moisture and nutrients and prevent weeds.

Follow this game plan, and you'll turn to your garden -- not the supermarket's produce section or the local restaurant's salad bar – to enjoy your favorite veggies.

Statues And Furniture Add A Personal Touch To The Garden

It is safe to say that one can find garden pieces to fit virtually any budget. A quick visit to the local home center during the warmer months yields a bumper crop of outdoor furniture, statues and accessories designed to appeal to the ephemeral tastes -- and wallets -- of a broad cross section of homeowners.

But if you're looking for heirloom quality designs, you'll need to look further than your local big box retailer. You'll want to go where some of the country's leading landscape architects and interior designers shop for statuary, urns, chaise lounges, fountains and other handcrafted products.

Florentine Craftsmen, a New York City-based operation that has been in the same family for more than 85 years, is one of only two manufacturers of lead statues and ornaments in the United States.

"Our clients are looking for craftsmanship that will last several lifetimes, so our materials need to withstand the tests of time and weather," said Skip Brown, whose maternal grandfather founded the business

The Florentine Craftsmen catalog, which features more than 400 products, showcases everything from mythological creatures and classical figures to garden animals to fountains. In addition to lead, the company offers statues and accessories in bronze and stone, and its furniture lines include products made of premium welded cast aluminum, wrought iron and cast bronze. There are many finishes available, and since Florentine Craftsmen makes each piece to order, opportunities for customization abound. One example of their craft is the large statue of Ben Hur in his four-horse chariot made for Ceasar's Palace in Las Vegas.

Timeless Designs

"My grandfather, Vincent Primavera, came to this country from Central Italy when he was in his teens," Brown stated. "When he started Florentine Craftsmen using old-world manufacturing techniques his initial product line was dominated by hardware : hinges, hardware, outdoor lanterns and that sort of thing."

Primavera's skill and business sense soon led him to design and produce high-end outdoor furniture and statuary, and the line continued to evolve from there. "Many of our designs, particularly the statues, have not changed very much over the years," Brown notes. "Our clients are after a classic, timeless look, which is one of the reasons they feel comfortable paying up to several thousand dollars for a statue."

The company's furniture collections are updated more frequently, but some of its most popular items are chestnuts from yesteryear. The "Star & Dolphin" design, to cite just one example, dates from the 1920s and remains a best seller. Florentine Craftsmen worked with the original designer and initially made this furniture line in cast iron.

Like other high-end garden furniture manufacturers, Florentine Craftsmen's designs rival the finest indoor furniture. Offerings include custom-size dining, serving, coffee and end tables with glass or metal tops. The company sells arm chairs, double and triple settees, side chairs, bar stools, luxurious grand chairs with matching ottomans and chaise lounges, as well as double and triple grand sofas. For those with an eye on the budget, bolted construction furniture is available in several styles, and generally fetches slightly less than half the price of premier pieces. The Florentine Craftsmen facilities combine foundry and sales office, and every piece is made entirely on the premises.

Catering to Custom Tastes

In addition to leading landscape architects and interior designers, Skip Brown sells the company's wares to high-end garden boutiques. The Forentine Craftsmen catalog is made available to all retailers and often sparks ideas on the part of homeowners or the professional designers they employ. "We don't stock anything, so customers can specify a statue with a different finish," Brown explains. "To a large extent they can combine 'Part A' and 'Part B' from any of our hundreds of designs. This flexibility is a big selling point." Brown likes to tell of the woman who asked him to produce a suite of terrace furniture incorporating a rosette motif from the interior railing of her rather grand home. "We had no trouble complying," he stated.

Delivery ranges from two weeks to two months, depending on the season and scope of the order. For more information visit www.florentinecraftsmen.com or call 800-577-1188.

Innovative garden framing products help make it easy to transform your landscape with little time and effort.

Landscape Designs Can Add Much To Enhance Property

Turn on the television and you'll be met with a host of programming designed around home fix-ups. Many of these shows take the improvements outdoors and show how much a little change to your landscape can mean a huge difference in curb appeal. It comes as no surprise then that come the start of warmer weather, many homeowners make the yearly pilgrimage to home-improvement centers, nurseries, and garden shops to stock up on the supplies they'll need to create a winning landscape.

Before you make your shopping list, consider which elements you'll want to include to best achieve your garden design. Key landscape aspects that you may want to consider are:

• Raised landscape beds – By raising your flower garden or vegetable garden a few inches from the ground, you'll limit the amount of bending and squatting required to maintain these areas. Raised beds also experience better water drainage and soil aeration and are perfect for the homeowner who wants a contained space for their plantings.

• Edging – Just like a piece of art, a garden or playground is made "complete" with a nice frame or border. Edging gives playgrounds a polished look and reduces grass-trimming maintenance. Most importantly, it contains safety surface materials that cushion children's falls.

• Recreational spaces – If you have an area that proves resistant to growing plants, it might be the ideal spot to plan a kids' sandbox or playspace.

• Water elements – There's nothing like the tranquility of a bubbling brook or cascading waterfall in your landscape. Consider a raised waterfall, or pond which allows you to build up support walls, rather than dig down into the ground to create your design element.

Perhaps you're thinking that all of these landscape features will require hours of work and the purchase of many different costly products. Not so, if you rely on a versatile product like the Frame-It-All System from Scenery Solutions. The patented Frame-It-All System makes it easy for anyone to build and enjoy everything from multi-level raised water and garden beds to sandboxes to playground and garden borders and so much more.

The secret to the simplicity of the system is in how it's built. The system's patented anchor joint goes nearly a foot into the ground, providing support for any base level. And specially designed fins grip the ground to prevent heaving when the soil freezes. The stacking joint slides into the anchor stake for you to build upward. The brackets securely fasten and hold long-lasting Composite Plastic Timbers, also available through Scenery Solutions, or any standard 2-inch by 6-inch lumber. All this helps you form virtually unlimited designs that you can easily add to later on.

Another advantage to using Scenery Solutions is that the company makes it easy to create your own designs, or if you need some guidance, rely on the step-by-step instructions provided on www.scenerysolutions.com. You'll also find a parts shopping list based on the type of landscape design you'd like to create.

So before you fill your shopping cart with a stack of products that will provide little versatility in your landscape, visit www.scenerysolutions.com. The Frame-It-All System could be perfect for your project.

Nursery Did You Know:

Your local garden center or nursery will probably be your first stop when selecting plants for your home and garden. But are they tending to their plants well enough to warrant purchases? Here are some items to look for when selecting plants to make sure you are getting healthy, hearty specimens, courtesy of the Do It Yourself network:

• Plants should not look dried and yellowed on the foliage.

• Look at the vein pattern in the foliage. If the veins are green and the foliage is green, the plants are well watered. If the veins are green and the foliage is yellow, it could be a sign of chlorosis that can be easily remedied with a proper watering and some fertilizer.

• Look for signs of disease on leaves or blooms. It's helpful to be familiar with the plants you are going to purchase so you'll know the difference between a healthy and a diseased plant of the species. Gardening books or a well-informed nursery employee can assist you in these areas. For example, wilting or curling leaves on a rhododendron can indicate a disease is present.

• Observe the roots of the plant if possible. Make sure they look healthy and exhibit no signs of root rot, fungus or disease on the roots. Also, avoid plants that are overgrown in their pots. They may have spent too much time in the nursery and may not fare well when planted in your garden.

Clematis Is A Hearty, Showy Bloomer That's Easy To Grow

Tough and elegant. What better way to describe royalty? That's clematis, "Queen of the Vines." But do not fear. You don't have to have a royal garden to enjoy these spectacular flowers.

The Royal Horticultural Society has crowned a new series of clematis in its Bicentenary Plant Collection. The new Raymond Evison Royal Horticultural Society Bicentenary Clematis Collection will make growing clematis easier and more rewarding than ever.

This new series promises dazzling new cultivars that bloom much longer than traditional clematis. Bloom after bloom covers the compact vine from the base to the tip from spring till fall. And these beauties have more vigor and disease resistance as well.

"The Washington Post calls these plants 'super-performers' and that's just what they are," said Joe Gray, of Hines Horticulture. "Raymond Evison is the finest breeder of clematis anywhere. His hope is that these Royal Horticultural Society clematis will revolutionize the use of clematis in the garden."

Understanding how clematis fits in the big garden picture will guarantee success with this showy bloomer. According to famed British gardener Christopher Lloyd, "clematis does not relish isolation." American gardeners would probably say they are team players. In other words, clematis is a social plant that likes to mix it up in the garden.

"The Royal Horticultural Society Clematis Collection is very special," said Gray. "They were specifically selected because they are easier to grow, hardier and bloom longer than traditional clematis."

Rosemoor with deep-red dramatic blooms is a natural for climbing arches, arbors and pergolas. Its large flowers keep going from May to September making it the perfect gateway or transition for a garden room.

Once Harlow Carr, with its star shaped flowers in periwinkle purple, starts blooming in May it doesn't know when to stop. It is a workhorse in the garden, producing hundreds of flowers up and down the cane. This vine makes an ideal ground cover and is a must for use with grey-foliage, flat spreading conifers or any other ground cover plants.

Rich-blue Wisley weaving through roses from June to September can extend the beauty of the garden. In addition its greenish white stamens coordinate well with variegated foliage.

Hyde Hal with a somewhat shorter bloom time makes up for it with an explosion of luminous flowers. Think moonlight garden. Think fabulous cut flowers.

"Keep the roots cool" is the cardinal rule of clematis growing. Use mulch or groundcover, and even better, skirt her legs with compact shrubs for a layered professional look that shades her feet as well. And if you want to prune, do it when the daffodils bloom. Just pull the vine up like a ponytail and cut it 6 to 12 inches from the ground.

With such a small footprint for such a big bloomer, this versatile vine can be tucked behind a perennial border for a flowering backdrop, or trellised behind low hedges as a screen.

For smaller garden spaces, try the Raymond Evison Patio Clematis Collection. Beautiful clematis bred for container use offer the same high flower and bud count. In containers they provide gardeners with long lasting columns of color. Choose from jewel-toned Picardy, Versailles or Cezanne.

Clematis is not just for the mailbox post anymore. Oh, the places they'll go.

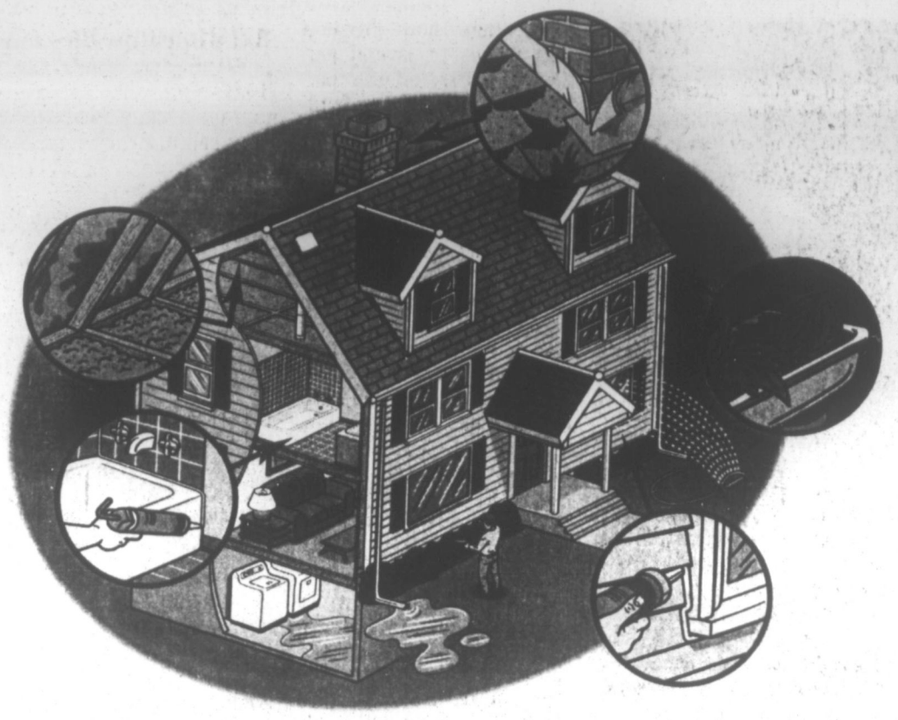
Ten Ways To Conquer And Prevent Mold Are Offered



Mold can ruin the appearance of a home's interior and exterior, and certain types may even cause health-related problems if left unchecked. But, conquering and preventing mold is quite simple, according to Ed Keith, senior engineer with APA – The Engineered Wood Association. "It's all about venting and sealing," Keith says. "Get rid of the moisture and you've banished your mold problem."

Industry research points to poorly sealed windows and doors as major culprits for mold growth. But don't forget about proper venting. "We've seen folks seal their homes up tight and forget about the importance of venting moisture," says Keith. He says that people shouldn't let moisture collect from steamy showers, dishwashers and washing machines. Using a properly vented exhaust fan, for example, regularly keeps indoor spaces dry.

APA says that if homeowners are armed with a common-sense plan, they can overcome mold and protect their most valuable asset their home. APA has launched a new initiative and Web site, FreeFromMold.org, which provides recommendations and suggestions for addressing common causes of mold. Following is the their "Ten-Point Protection Plan." If homeowners follow the plan's routine maintenance suggestions, they can help keep minor mold problems from becoming major headaches.

1. Roof – Remove moss and lichen growth anywhere on the roof using a broom or garden hose with a spray nozzle. Direct water down the roof, never up under the shingles. Remove debris build-up in valleys and at wall-to-roof intersections.

2. Gutters/Downspouts – Clean gutters with a blower, hose or small broom. (A hose will help pinpoint leaks and other trouble spots.) Use gutter cement on cracks or replace gutter sections according to manufacturer's instructions. Make sure that downspouts drain away from the house.

3. Windows/Doors/Siding – Inspect and re-caulk siding, windows, utility penetrations and doors. Check that weather stripping around doors and windows seals tightly to prevent moisture from entering.

4. Drainage – Make sure that perimeter ground slopes away from the foundation. If downspouts dead-end near the foundation, add splash blocks to redirect water away from the foundation.

5. Sprinklers – Water your plants, not your house. Redirect lawn sprinklers so they do not wet the siding, windows or foundation walls.

6. Landscaping – Trim plants away from the siding. Large shrubs or vegetation may need to be moved if foliage persistently contacts siding, windows or utility penetrations like dryer vents.

7. Attic – Look for water stains on the underside of the roof, rusted nails and discolored moldy sections on any surface. If you find any of these moisture warning signs, look for the source of the moisture, such as a vent that isn't directing air to the outside. Also check that there is room for air to flow from the eaves (soffit vents) into the attic space and out the upper roof vents.

8. Ventilation – Install timers on bathroom and laundry fans, and run fans for 20 minutes after showers. Your bath, kitchen and laundry fan ducts should vent outside and never terminate in the attic or another area of the house.

9. Kitchen/Bath – Inspect plumbing fixtures, paying particular attention to areas under sinks and toilets and around showers and tubs. Look for stains, cracks and mold on caulk, and repair as necessary.

10. Basement – Check your basement and crawlspace for moisture problems such as standing water, mold on floor joists or rust on metal fasteners. Replace loose or missing batt insulation. If crawlspace is not insulated, install a 6-mil polyethylene vapor barrier over exposed ground. If you find serious moisture damage or standing water in the crawlspace or basement, call a contractor to repair and correct the source of the problem.

For additional inspection and maintenance tips that every homeowner should follow to combat moisture, visit www.FreeFromMold.org.

Learn Gardening Secrets From The Greenery Masters

Turn on any gardening show on television and in 30 minutes garden gurus transform a pitiful patio into an outdoor oasis. If only it was that simple.

Busy homeowners and beginning gardeners are left asking, "What do I do? What plant, what place?" Now there is a creative solution that truly takes the mystery out of container gardening.

Inspired by the great artists of our time with the simplicity of a child's paint-by-number set, Plant by Number Container Combinations by Simply Beautiful will free the inner garden artist in everyone."

Whether your garden space is tropical, prairie or somewhere in between, the Plant by Number Website at www.PlantByNumber.com has a tried and tested combination. Each "painting" is accompanied by a simple diagram showing plant placement and container size; designs are available for sun or shade, even partial shade. Guesswork is eliminated with clear details for each design, along with "Garden Painter's Pointers" offering specific instructions for plant care. Because each combination features easy-care, top-performing Simply Beautiful plant varieties, gardeners can be confident that their "works of art" will provide enjoyment and lasting color all season.

Just take a look at the Georgia O'Keefe container combo. Its blooms come to life with the bold shape of Luna Red Hibiscus surrounded by Easy Wave White Petunias and Purple Lady Iresine. Just three varieties in an 18-inch container make a masterpiece. Flip the hibiscus to Luna Blush with Easy Wave Misty Lilac Petunias for a different look with the same impact. This heat-loving combination will tolerate higher humidity levels as well.

Unpredictable genius was behind Van Gogh's subtle and deliberate brushstrokes. Such sunny tones are unexpected in a shade planting, echoing Van Gogh's use of golden tones in happier times. Fill a window box with Wizard Golden Coleus, both Jungle Gold and Tango Impatiens, then temper with the cool tones of Super Elfin Blue Impatiens and Silver Falls Dichondra. These shimmering blooms will really light up the shadows.

Rose-colored glasses aren't needed to see a plant palette reminiscent of Renoir's sparkling light and color. At first glimpse it's a shade lover with hydrangea and coleus, but it's really an imaginative pairing of sun-loving Fantasia Neon Rose Geranium and Magilla Perilla woven through Angel Mist Light Pink Angelonia, Wink Pink Improved Diascia with Ballerina Rose Gaura.

When it comes to containers, creativity counts. Plant by Number Combinations can be easily adapted to old pails, tubs and troughs. Larger containers won't dry out as quickly. The use of a soil moistening agent can be useful in certain situations.

These plant pairings could be repeated to fill garden beds, where dangling plants can double as groundcovers. More experienced gardeners might use them as a leaping off point for more daring designs.

Explore all 16 possibilities at www.PlantByNumber.com, which can then direct you to the nearest garden center carrying the Simply Beautiful plants featured in the combinations. Find even more Simply Beautiful gardening ideas at www.SimplyBeautifulGardens.com.

On Dangerous Ground: Five Tips To Help Gardeners Reduce Groundwater Pollution

It's not as obvious as litter on the side of the road or toxic waste dumped into rivers and streams, but contaminated groundwater is a form of pollution that can be just as serious. And whether they know it or not, many gardeners are contributing to this growing environmental problem.

As homeowners apply more and more fertilizer to their lawns and gardens, environmental regulators are seeing the emergence of a new ecological challenge. Many well-intentioned gardeners are overfeeding their plants, and these extra nutrients are running off through the soil, polluting lakes, rivers -- and our drinking water.

Gardeners rely on fertilizer to add important nutrients -- primarily nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium -- to hungry roots. The problem arises when a plant is satiated and the fertilizer keeps coming, which drowns the roots in a sea of nutrients. With the plant too full to absorb them, the nutrients can leach into groundwater. This leaching may destroy aquatic habitats, poison cattle and sheep, contaminate recreational waterways, and, in the most serious cases, make people sick -- particularly infants.

Unconditioned soil is often the chief contributor to this growing problem. Sandy soil drains quickly, which increases the rate that chemicals leach into groundwater. Heavy clay soil delays the leaching process, but it drains so slowly, it increases surface runoff -- also a problem.

According to environmental scientists, the relatively tiny amount of runoff each garden contributes may seem insignificant, but when it's combined with the millions of other gardens across the country, the collective pollution can pose a serious threat.

So what's a conscientious gardener to do? There are several wise choices you can make to cut down on contamination.

To reduce the leaching or runoff of fertilizers, improve the soil by adding peat moss or other organic material.

1. Design with runoff in mind. Much of the problem can be eliminated through better planning before you plant. A landscape design that accounts for potential runoff issues -- for example, replacing turf on steep slopes with plants or paving materials that require less fertilizer, pesticides and water --can nip the problem in the bud.

2. Get a soil test. A properly administered soil test can help you identify how much of each nutrient your soil needs, ensuring that you won't overapply, say, nitrogen, when all your particular plot of soil really needs is more phosphorous. County extension offices or nurseries will test your soil, or you can purchase a kit so you can do it yourself.

3. Condition the soil. Adding an organic soil conditioner like peat moss to the soil helps it absorb fertilizer and hold it until the plant needs it, rather than letting it seep into the ground all at once. Peat moss helps bind sandy soil so it slows leaching. And it loosens clay soil, which helps prevent runoff.

4. Don't overwater. Too much water can wash away soil and nutrients. Instead of using a sprinkler, which can water an area too quickly, consider a slow-release soaker hose to keep runoff to a minimum.

5. Practice environmentally friendly pest management. Pesticides can also pollute groundwater. There are several effective alternatives to spraying your garden with chemicals, including planting pest-resistant vegetation or using organic pest-control methods such as beneficial insects. The idea is to make the garden a healthy place for plants to thrive, while also making it inhospitable for pests.

For more information on how to properly condition and prepare your soil, or other ways to use peat moss, send an unstamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to Peat Moss, Box 385102, Minneapolis, MN, 55438. You can also visit their Web site at www.peatmoss.com, or e-mail cspma@peatmoss.com.

Gardening Basics Lead To Green Spaces, Thumbs

With spring fast approaching, it's time to decide what you would like to do with your garden. Seed catalogs conjure visions of beautiful bouquets around your home, their sweet fragrances permeating every room. Your appetite is whetted for meals prepared with homegrown vegetables. But how can you best prepare that plot of soil behind your house to help make your garden grow?

Remove Debris

If you didn't remove all the debris from your garden last fall, you must clear out the old leaves and stems before you plant. This is the single-most effective pest control measure you can take for your garden. Insect eggs or disease spores from last year's growth can infect your new crop.

Loosen Soil

After you have removed the debris, use a shovel to break up clods of dirt and loosen the soil to the rooting depth of your plants. You want to create a uniform, porous seedbed for seeds and seedlings. Any plants that root below 5 or 6 inches are capable of penetrating most soils.

If your garden plot has packed clay or sandy soil, till in organic matter such as peat, composted leaves or lawn clippings and work them into the soil as deeply as you can. This will form a soil structure that allows roots to breathe and grow. It will also help retain vital moisture and nutrients. Do not use lawn clippings for this if you have treated your lawn with a weed killer or insecticide. Residual chemicals on the clippings can damage garden plants or make vegetables unsafe to eat. After all, leaving clippings on the lawn recycles nutrients back to grass plants, improving your lawn's health and beauty.

Fertilizing

Melinda Myers, host of the Great Lakes Gardener public television program and author of several gardening books, advises gardeners to always use a fertilizer that is gentle on both plants and the environment.

"Use a slow-release nitrogen fertilizer that provides plants with small amounts of nutrients over a long period of time," notes Myers. "This slow release nitrogen goes directly to the plants and not into groundwater. It's friendly to the environment and allows plants to use all the nutrients you apply. It also promotes even growth, discouraging insect and disease problems." Slow-release nitrogen fertilizer reduces the risk of damage to plants and the environment in the event it's misapplied or overused. An organic-based nitrogen fertilizer, such as Milorganite GardenCare 6-2-0, is ideal for helping build soil while fertilizing. Information on fertilizing various types of garden plants can be found at www.milorganite.com.

Seeding and Planting

It's exciting to watch plants grow from a tiny seed. If you plant seeds, follow the package directions. Directions will vary for each kind of seed you plant. Be careful. The most common planting mistake is planting too deep. This results in poor germination. Water gently, keeping seeds moist until they germinate. Follow specific watering instructions for each kind of seed you plant.

Plant seedlings as deep as they were in their holder. You can see the soil level on the stem. Keep their roots vertical by making sure your hole is deep enough. If your soil is dry, fill the hole half full of water before you place the seedling in it. Firmly pack soil around it. Gently water over the top of planted seedlings. Keep them moist for a week or so, depending on your local weather conditions.

When to Fertilize

In general, fertilize when you first seed or transplant. This encourages early root and plant growth. Fertilize again when plants begin to flower or display leaf growth that will mature for harvest. For full-season plants, fertilize a third time in mid- to late summer. Potatoes, tomatoes and similar plants especially benefit from this third application.

If you have any doubts as to what kind of fertilizer to use or how much to apply, or if you would like your soil analyzed for nutrients, contact your local county horticultural extension agent.

Relationships Blossom During Home Fix-Ups

Want to get even closer to your spouse – emotionally? Home-improvement projects may be the perfect way to go, says a study conducted by a tool manufacturing company based in Mineola, New York. According to the results, 54 percent of all couples (married or living with a significant other) who do home-improvement projects together actually enjoyed working with each other. Proving their ability to work together as a couple was cited as a key factor. Only a small percentage (7 percent) said the experience was terrible and wouldn't repeat it again. In fact, doing home-improvement projects together was listed as a favorite couples' activity among going out to dinner, socializing with friends and shopping.

What's the No 1 activity to do together? More than half of American couples like to do lawn and garden projects, at 51 percent. Other preferred home-improvement projects enjoyed as a joint venture include painting and wallpapering (34 percent), general fix-it and repairs (31 percent), woodworking (17 percent) and upgrading flooring (15 percent).

Those Darned Pests

Insects, weeds and disease can present problems to a healthy garden. Mike Archer, master gardener and research coordinator for Milorganite, recommends using Integrated Pest Management (IPM) for pest control. IPM is a low-cost, low-impact means for controlling harmful pests.

IPM encourages the use of natural pesticides as a friendly method of pest control. "Using commercial pesticides should be limited to times when the damage is beyond using natural methods," said Archer.

"In many cases, treating a garden with pesticides kills off beneficial insect species that keep problem species under control," said Archer. "Learn to identify these helpful insects, so you don't kill off friends of your garden."

Other methods of environmentally sound pest control include hoeing weeds; staking tall plants so fruit does not touch the ground; providing garden ventilation to minimize incidence of disease; and trickling water on the soil, not on foliage, when watering on sunny days so leaves don't scald.

Have Fun

There's no doubt about it; gardening can be hard work. But if you follow these simple tips, your garden will prosper and your experience will be a positive one.

Trees Are A Life Essential In Many Ways

The following article was written by Glenne J. Blocher of Earth & Tree LLC, Frostburg.

Close your eyes, imagine a world without trees. It's virtually impossible, because without our trees we cannot survive. They enhance the quality of life socially, environmentally, and economically.

Most of us respond to the presence of trees beyond simply observing their beauty. We feel peaceful, tranquil, and serene in that grove of trees. Trees and gardens as therapy is not a new concept. Ancient Greek and Roman physicians are said to have prescribed walks in gardens. Scientific research has noted that as little as four minutes in a garden will start to reduce stress, improve mood, and steady one's vital signs.

Recent studies at the University of Illinois have shown that children with ADHD (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder) have found relief by playing in natural settings. They actually perform better after these experiences. Hospital patients with a view of trees seem to recover from surgeries quicker than patients who do not have this view. The healing and therapeutic values add to the array of practical benefits.

Trees are essential to climate control, moderating sun, wind, and rain. Leaves block the sun's rays and create natural windbreaks. Using trees for these purposes directly influences what we spend for heating and cooling our homes. These same leaves slow down the flow of rainfall to the ground and allow the roots to absorb the water. The homeowner has less surface water runoff and soil erosion.

Would you like to block sound or gain more privacy? Try trees. We can thank our trees for purifying the air that we breath. Each leaf absorbs dust and pollutants from the air.

Many people do not realize that trees have a dollar value of their own. They can be a wise investment of funds. Property values of landscaped homes are 5-20% higher than those of non-landscaped homes. Trees give us a natural setting which enhances and complements our home.

We recognize the strong ties between people and trees. It is most evident in the efforts taken to preserve the historic trees, as well as the tree planted as a memorial to a loved one and the tree that someone (you) "just wants to keep."

Promoting the care of a living tree is crucial to our existence. However, some trees will not survive. They will be destroyed by natural elements, insects, or unknown diseases. Hazardous trees can cause significant damage to your home and compromise the safety of family, friends, and neighbors.

All trees require an investment and continuous maintenance to allow for long-term heath, safety, and aesthetic value.

Your Backyard: Room To Play, Room To Grow

While your front yard is a place that welcomes visitors and friends, your backyard is the place for you and your family. A retreat for relaxation, play and time spent together, the backyard is often a combination of gardens, toys and areas for entertaining.

You can create a special play area for your children that not only fits their needs now, but will adapt to them in the future, and you can create this area in harmony with whatever is already in your backyard. Many large play systems mean sacrificing garden, lawn or deck space to accommodate the features you hope your children will grow into.

If you have a small yard, or have spots you'd like to keep untouched, consider a play system that is adaptable to your needs, both now and in the future. Unlike readymade systems, kits like those sold by Detailed Play Systems, allow homeowners to choose only the features they want, from a basic tower to slides, climbing walls and swings.

Because the lumber is purchased by the homeowner, the cost for a full set up is much lower as well. Pre-made play systems -- that do not sacrifice size, features, or quality -- typically cost between $2,000 and $3,000. There are cheaper pre-made sets available, but these are usually smaller and weaker and skimp on lumber and hardware to save on cost. With a kit, you receive the plans and the best hardware and accessories, and you get to control the lumber quality that will be used to build the set.

Karl Jessen was a dad searching for a way to bring the playground to his backyard, and was shocked to learn what a readymade system would cost. Inspired to find a better way, he built his own playground and then created Detailed Play Systems, an online company that provides plans and accessories so homeowners can construct their own customized fun. Select the wood of your choice using the included Lumber Purchase Guide that makes it easy to select each piece needed for each layout.

According to Jessen, building this type of project yourself should take about a weekend, depending on the size of your playground, the tools you have available and how much help you have. But casual do-it-yourselfers needn't be intimidated. Only basic measuring, cutting and drilling skills are required.

The company's most popular kit, the Jungle Fort Swing Set, sells for $389. It features a 6 by 6 foot fort with sandbox, included step ladder, gangplank ramp, and three-position swing set. Slides are sold separately allowing customers to fully customize the playground kit to their needs.

"The best part is how your system can change over time, to create the perfect playground for your children based on their needs and interests, said Jessen. "Accessories such as periscopes, telescopes, steering wheels and specialty swings can be added on as children grow. Or maybe they have their heart set on wave slides and trapeze bars. Whatever they love to do, from climbing to spinning, you can create the perfect set-up."

It may make sense to have a sitting area for grown-ups near the structure when kids are small. In a few years, use that space to attach a gangplank ramp, spiral slide or even additional swings.

"The beauty of a customizable system is that you can choose a configuration that best fits your space now, while still leaving your options open for the future," stated Jessen. A modest system will fit in a 15 by 17 foot square, but can be added on to create a much larger structure to fit the dimensions of your yard and the interests of your children.

Detailed Play Systems is based in New Jersey, but does most of its business online and through catalogs. To order a catalog, persons may call 800-398-7565, or log on to www.detailedplay.com. Shipping is available in the 48 contiguous United States.

It's not only crucial to handle and plant a tree properly for it to survive – it also needs protection. The Fiber Edge Tree Ring Kit will give you everything you need to properly edge and protect your trees for a lifetime of beauty.

In Order To Thrive, Trees Must Be Planted Properly

You'd be surprised at just how important it is to plant a tree correctly. A properly planted tree requires a lot less management than a tree that is planted improperly. More importantly, a tree that is planted correctly will be healthier and more tolerant of adverse conditions.

Before buying your tree, investigate what type of tree will grow well where you live. Consider where the tree will be planted. Will it get a lot of light? Will it be placed in a shaded area? If you need help choosing a tree, talk to the owner of your local nursery or a county extension agent. They are valuable sources of information.

When you go to select a tree, be sure to choose one that's the right size. If you think bigger is better, think again. Smaller trees establish root systems faster than larger trees and are more likely to survive. Plus, they're cheaper to buy.

When you purchase a tree, also buy the materials that can protect it. Easy Gardener offers an all-in-one tree kit that edges and protects your tree. Fiber Edge(R) Tree Ring Kit contains everything you need for your new tree: a 3-foot square of WeedBlock(R) Landscape Fabric, 10 feet of Fiber Edge flexible landscape edging, and four Fiber Edge metal stakes.

Be careful when transporting your tree home. Never pick it up by the trunk, rather, lift it from the root ball. Once you get ready to dig at home, remember to not plant the tree too deeply. A good rule of thumb is to dig planting holes two to three times wider than the root ball and the same depth.

Once the tree is in the ground, the Fiber Edge Tree Ring Kit comes into play. First, lay the WeedBlock down around the base of the newly planted tree. Then, place Fiber Edge around the planting hole's perimeter, pound it into the ground with a rubber mallet, and secure it with metal stakes. Now add a couple of inches of mulch inside the ring. Form a well in the mulch at the base of the tree to avoid moist bark conditions that can lead to decay. The WeedBlock and mulch will conserve moisture, discourage weeds and regulate soil temperatures. The Fiber Edge ring will prevent damage from lawn equipment like mowers and string trimmers, and hold in the mulch.

After your tree is planted, water and fertilize it well. Young trees need more water than established ones, so be sure yours get enough to drink. Trees need the equivalent of one inch of rainfall every week. A slow-release fertilizer like Jobe's(R) Fertilizer Spikes for Trees and Shrubs will provide your new tree with a continuous supply of needed nutrients.

With just a little bit of planning and the right products, you can be rest assured that your newly planted tree will thrive.

Avoiding Bug Bites Without Using DEET

You've spent the whole weekend outdoors, biking, gardening, barbecuing, and just enjoying the beautiful weather. But you awake Monday morning to a body full of insect bites! You thought about those Citronella candles you put out on the deck and the oily repellent you sprayed all over your body. But alas, you are left with the task of nursing those itchy bug bites, wondering if spending that time outdoors was even worth it.

Why are biting insects, such as mosquitoes, so drawn to humans? Like bloodhounds, they have poor eyesight but a keen sense of smell. They can smell you from 100 feet away, but they can't see you until they are 30 feet away. "Mosquitoes are attracted to carbon dioxide and Octenol, chemicals that humans and animals emit when they exhale, which mosquitoes can detect from 100 feet away," says Jim Nolen, president of BioSensory, a U.S.-based manufacturer of next-generation mosquito-control products, many of which result from cooperative research with the U.S.D.A.

That's why you need to take advantage of mosquitoes' poor sense of smell and turn it against them by blocking their ability to track a person's scent. Since the bugs can't track your scent, they cannot get close enough to see you. And, if they cannot see you, then they cannot bite you. Conceal(R) products by Biosensory do just that. They come in a candle form or in a tabletop unit which dispenses Conceal inhibitor into the atmosphere through quiet, battery-powered fans. Place them in areas where people or animals congregate, such as on a deck, patio, or porch, or in a yard, pool, boat, tent or barn. Conceal products may be used around food, children, and pets, and they do not harm the environment.

So you can toss out the oily DEET and Citronella candles. Conceal products provide protection from mosquitoes for pennies a day.

A Project That Will Enhance You, And Your Home Too

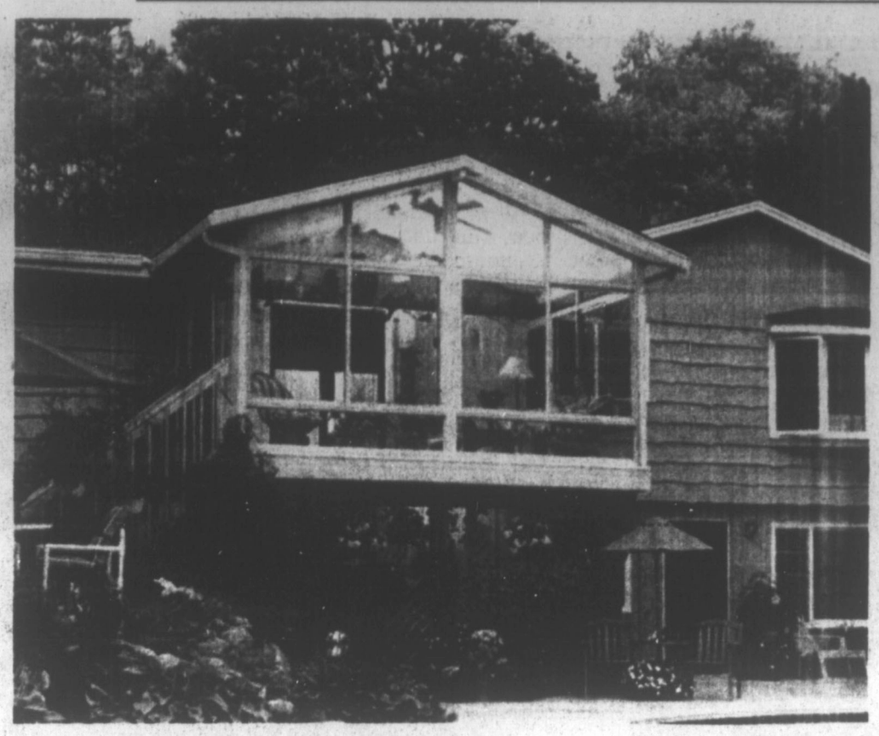
In the wintertime, people stay inside to avoid the cold. In the springtime, we venture out once again; but before you know it, the bugs will be back with a vengeance and people will be running for cover again.

Not Marci Zod of Abington, Pa. She goes outside anytime she feels like it. "Probably because I can enjoy the great outdoors from the comfort of my backyard sunroom," she said.

Marci and her husband Neil decided to add a sunroom to their home about three years ago. They were inspired by a neighbor who had built one. "We have a beautiful backyard, but never really took the time to enjoy it until we added the sunroom because it wasn't practical," stated Marci. "All we had back there was a tiny concrete deck big enough for a chair or two and a grill; and since I hate bugs, I never wanted to go back there. Now that we have the sunroom, I can enjoy the outdoors any time I want."

Industry experts estimate that more than half-million new sunrooms are built in this country each year. Some people put them up to expand their living space; others, like the Zods, so they can enjoy the backyard all year-round. "It's my favorite place in the house," said Marci. "We've hosted sit-down dinners in the sunroom, my kids have had parties out there, and I go out there just about every day to sit and relax."

Sunrooms are enjoying increasing popularity for a variety of reasons. "With Americans spending more time at home, home improvements have increased; and with a lower cost of construction than traditional additions and a higher valuation, adding a sunroom is a smart move that assures an excellent return on investment," said Andrew Stone, president of Craft-Bilt Manufacturing in Souderton, Pa. The company, in existence since 1946, is the manufacturer and distributor of Betterliving Patio & Sunrooms.



Depending on your needs and the options you choose, the cost of building and installing a sunroom can range from $8,000 to $50,000 and up, for an elaborate project. Because it's such a big investment, deciding what company to go with is an important decision.

Here are some important things to keep in mind when shopping around:

•Look for a company that stands behind both its product and installation. You want to choose a company that uses its own factory trained employees to install the room -- not subcontractors. If the sunroom is not put together properly, the roof could leak, or the doors and windows may not operate properly.

•Make sure the sunroom is fully engineered and has been tested to meet local building codes. No matter what state you live in, the structure must be able to meet or exceed local building codes, have a building permit, and pass inspection.

"Our company has put up more than 1,000 sunrooms in and around Jacksonville and during last summer's hurricanes, we only had four instances where roofs suffered puncture damage from limbs punching through them. No one lost any windows. None of the structures blew down. We're very proud about that," said Michael Kaufman, owner of Betterliving by Suntastic Inc. in Jacksonville, Fla.

•Work with a company that is willing to pull the permit for you. If you don't have one, you will not be able to sell your house in the future until you get one.

•Avoid companies that only offer short warranty periods. Instead, find a company that stands behind its product and will be there to offer support if a problem arises months or even years after your purchase.

•Look for a company that offers a wide range of styles and options, including three season patio rooms, year-round sunrooms, and glass conservatories. The company should also have staff members available that will work with you to build the sunroom or patio of your dreams.

"I consider getting a sunroom the best thing we've ever done. It's part of the house but every time I go out there, I'm transported someplace else. It's like going on vacation every day," Zod remarked.

Bear Break-In Leads To 4-H Cattle Deaths

The Maryland Department of Natural Resources has confirmed that a black bear pushed open the door of a livestock barn in the Keyser's Ridge area Saturday night or early Sunday morning, April 9-10, apparently spooking four 4-H market steers that were being raised by youngsters of a local farm family. Two of the steers were later killed when they were struck by vehicles on Interstate 68, while the other two were subsequently put down by a search party of the family's members and friends when they were unable to catch the frightened animals. The steers have a market value of $1,500 each.

The youngsters discovered that their steers were missing when they went to the barn to feed them Sunday morning. Claw marks on the barn door were later observed by DNR wildlife specialist Terry DeWitt, who responded to the scene and confirmed that the marks were made by a bear, although investigation showed that the bear likely did not make a direct physical attack on the steers.

The family and friends spent all of Sunday trying to catch their animals, described as "ordinarily tame" by a family member, but the steers refused to let anyone get close to them. The animals traveled wider and wider circles until they were approximately six miles from the barn. The family called off the search around 10:30 p.m., and left the barn doors open in hopes the steers would return. Approximately one hour later they were notified by Maryland State Police troopers that two of the animals had been struck and killed on Interstate 68 approximately two miles east of Keyser's Ridge. No motorists were injured in the two separate collisions.

Several family members immediately resumed the search in order to prevent the two remaining steers from reaching the highway, and continued to search throughout the night and into the daylight hours of Monday, April 11. Around 4 p.m. the steers were observed near the barn from where they had escaped, but

TIME FOR HIKES – Residents of Garrett County sometimes forget how many hiking opportunities there are on the mountaintop, but the fine weather of late has inspired many to take to the trails, like this family, fording the creek at Herrington Manor State Park this week. There surely were some cold toes after this jaunt, though, as the rushing water was not long ago infused with melted snow. Unfortunately, wading will probably be out of the question this weekend, as colder weather is predicted for a few days. There is even the chance of snow on Sunday and Monday. RFP Issued For Outdoor Mural Proj. In Oakland Oakland's Design Committee has issued an RFP (request for proposals) for designing/painting a mural on the rear wall of the Littman Building at Second and Green streets. The building's owner, First United Bank, gave the committee permission to use this wall for the first of what is planned to be a series of murals in downtown Oakland.

The Design Committee is a sub-group of the Main Street Program whose scope of work includes the quality of Oakland's appearance through its signage, lighting, landscaping, sculpture, and now murals.

A ordinance was adopted recently to permit outdoor murals within the town. A mural as defined in the ordinance is "any work of art which is intended to tell a story, communicate an idea or sequence of ideas, or depict a series of events."

"Generally speaking, a mural is a larger work of art dealing with authentic or historical subject matter," said Cherie Ross, local

Livengood Killer's Parole Request Denied By State

A request for parole by convicted murderer Roberto Recek, who is serving a life sentence for his part in the Jan. 1979 killing of Garrett County sheriff's deputy David Livengood, has been denied by the Maryland Parole Commission. The parole hearing took place Tuesday in the Jessup facility of the Maryland Division of Corrections where Recek is incarcerated.

Four local residents – Garrett County Corrections officer Ed Livengood (brother of the late deputy), sheriff's deputy Cpt. Larry Gnegy, Carl Friend, who was among the Friend family members assaulted in their Deer Park home in the wake of the murder, and Friend's wife Janie – were present at the parole hearing. Ed Livengood and Carl Friend both delivered brief statements before the three-member parole board.

Community Action May Be Slammed By Bush Proposals

by Glenn Tolbert

A proposal being heavily lobbied by the Bush administration could result in the gutting of many programs administered by the Garrett County Community Action Committee Inc. (GCCAC), including subsidized housing, transportation, and programs for the elderly.

An estimated 20 people at GCCAC, many in administrative positions, could lose their jobs as part of the proposed change in how to allocate monies, according to Duane Yoder, president of the agency.

The move by the administration comes as Bush officials want to transfer funds now allocated by the Department of Agriculture (USDA) to the Department of Commerce. The concept seems to be that the administration believes that the monies could be better utilized to help fund commercial efforts rather not-for-profit projects in rural sectors of the country. President Bush has proposed to eliminate community services block grants, which are the core funding for the 1,100 Community Action committees around the country. In Garrett County alone, it would mean losing half of GCCAC's administrators, according to Yoder.

In addition to eliminating those grants, another important source of money for GCCAC would also be eliminated. Known as Community Development Block Grants, these monies in Garrett County have been used in the past to help develop small businesses under a program known as Microworks. The monies also helped to build the Overlook Center, to redo the Appalachian Crossroads building, and to construct the basketball and tennis courts at Glades Park in

GC's Homeland Security Funding Reduced For '05

Garrett County will receive $173,442 from the State Homeland Security Grant Program under the Fiscal Year 2005 allocation, Director Brad Frantz, GC Office of Emergency Management, told the county commissioners this week during a departmental update.

The grant will be divided into two sections, with more than $160,000 going toward general emergency management items and the remainder to law enforcement concerns.

Frantz noted that the allocation was considerably smaller than FY 2004, which was $372,209. That funding was divided into four sections: general emergency management, law enforcement, Community Emergency Response Training (CERT), and a planner's salary.

Part of the '04 funding is being used now. The CERT classes have begun, and security equipment for the courthouse was purchased and recently installed. Persons entering the rotunda for court sessions must now pass through metal detectors, staffed by sheriff's deputies.

Frantz said some of the '04 and the '05 funding will be used to purchase "big ticket" equipment to address communications and interoperability issues.

"I think it's still the biggest issue since 9/11 for us," the director said about the problems that local emergency responders face when trying to communicate with each other in the region's mountainous terrain.

For FY '03 Homeland Security funding, the county received more than $36,000 for Phase I and more than $94,000 for Phase II.

Frantz also reported that Garrett, Allegany, and Washington counties had received $2.7 million from the state's Emergency Numbers Systems Board for an aerial mapping project. Using orthophotography, the project will provide clear photos of the county's topography and structures.

The photos can then be overlaid with information such as road names and surface types, property and sanitary districts, tax maps, and police and rescue jurisdictions. The maps, therefore, will be useful in many areas, including public safety, economic development, property management, and

Federal Funds Awarded To Establish Health Care Clinic In Garrett County

The Western Maryland Health Care Corporation (WMHCC), with support from the Maryland Office of Primary Care and Rural Health, has secured a $622,535 grant from the federal government to open a Federally Qualified Health Center (FQHC) in the Oakland area, Senators Paul Sarbanes and Barbara Mikulski announced last Thursday.

The funding will help provide primary and preventive health care services to all patients in the area regardless of their ability to pay.

"The clinic will be a godsend for thousands of persons in the area who need and deserve better primary care," said Garrett County commissioner Ernie Gregg, president of WMHCC. "It will fill a void in the community, and is long overdue."

A private, not-for-profit organization, the WMHCC was formed more than two years ago with a goal of providing quality accessible primary health care to residents of Garrett County and the surrounding areas.

The entire county is currently classified as rural and contains high concentrations of vulnerable residents in desperate need of quality care, noted Sarbanes.

Funds for the center will be awarded in December 2005 as they become available, and services should begin by March 2006, said a WMHCC spokesperson. The exact center location has not been determined, but it will probably be located in an existing facility. Satellite centers may also be established throughout the county.

"Assuring access to quality health care is an essential function of all public health departments," said Garrett County health officer Rodney Glotfelty. "Developing mechanisms to improve access to early primary preventive medical services has been a top priority of our Health Department for a number of years.

"Garrett County has historically had poor health outcomes in a number of critical areas," Glotfelty continued. "Community planning efforts have identified lack of access by uninsured or underinsured residents to affordable health care as a key reason for these poor outcomes. The establishment of a community health center to provide primary medical services, regardless of the patient's ability to pay, will make a huge difference in improving the health of thousands of residents in our community. This grant award to Garrett County's Western Maryland Health Care Corporation will make this a reality."

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Health Resources and Services Administration awarded 105 grants to help communities extend health care services to more low-income, uninsured Americans. The awards are part of the President Bush's five-year initiative to expand access to comprehensive primary health care services.

The community health centers deliver preventive and primary care services to patients regardless of their ability to pay. Nationwide, almost 40 percent of the patients treated at community health centers have no insurance coverage, and others have inadequate coverage. Charges for health care services are set according to income, according to the Health Department spokesperson.

"The notification that we will receive funding for the community health center is like a dream come true," said the Health Department's director of community and family health Bob Stephens, who led the grant writing team. "The health center will go a long way in providing health care for those without the financial resources to get regular health care. The center will

GC Circuit Court Judge Jailed For DUI In Frederick

James L. Sherbin was arrested in Frederick County early yesterday morning by Maryland State Police troopers, who filed drunk driving related charges against the Garrett County Circuit Court judge. Sherbin, 59, of Oakland, was released that same morning on his own personal recognizance.

According to a release from the MSP Office of Media Communications, shortly before 1:30 a.m. Trooper Robert J. Royer of the Frederick barracks was westbound on Interstate 70 near the 59-mile marker when he observed a GMC Sierra truck traveling erratically in the same direction. During his observations, the trooper paced the vehicle at 80 mph in the posted 65 mph zone.

The trooper stopped the vehicle on westbound I-70, east of Quinn Road. The trooper observed signs indicating the driver may be operating under the influence and initiated a drunken driving investigation. Sherbin was subsequently arrested on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while impaired by alcohol, speeding and negligent driving. He was taken to the Frederick barracks for processing on the charges, and then was taken to the Frederick County Central Processing Center for an initial appearance before a District Court commissioner. He was released on personal recognizance.

The truck driven by Sherbin was registered to him. It was secured at the place of his arrest, at his direction.

"No further information is available for release," MSP Media Communications officer Greg Shipley stated. "Any specific observations of the arresting trooper, statements made, whether tests were administered and the results of those tests are all considered evidence and will not be discussed prior to court proceedings."

Soldier's Spouse, Garrett Teacher Shares Her Story In Chicken Soup

Garrett County resident Kim Shaffer is among the authors featured in Chicken Soup For The Military Wife's Soul, the latest installment in the bestselling series. Shaffer's story, "The Delivery of Finding Strength," tells of the birth of her youngest child while her soldier husband, Lt. Joe Shaffer, was attending an officers' training course 1,000 miles away.

Shaffer's account opens at Kitzmiller Elementary School, where she teaches fourth grade, and concludes with daughter Kaitlin's delivery at Cumberland Memorial Hospital with her mother-in-law and sister-in-law at her side. Shaffer had been through three miscarriages and one corrective surgery between the births of her two children, Austin, 9, and Kaitlin, now 5.

Although doctors considered her pregnancy high-risk, her husband's military commitment prevented him from being with her for several months, including the childbirth.

The Army wife said the experience proved to be invaluable in helping her find the strength to cope with her husband's long Iraq deployment that followed Kaitlin's birth. The story was written while her husband was serving in Iraq.

"It's a small part of an effort to let people know that the spouses and loved ones of service members are actually members of the military too," said Shaffer. "There are huge worries, and big sacrifices made every day by those left behind when a soldier is called to duty, but there's a huge support system of military families who know what each other is going through. It's not something most people outside of the military are aware of."

Joyce Solomon, 53, was riding in a 2004 Chevrolet Malibu that was traveling north on Garrett Highway at the time of the 1:30 p.m. crash. The driver, Dorothy Bonner, 45, Accident, lost control of the car just north of Rock Lodge Road for unknown reasons. The car crashed into some trees.

No charges were filed by state troopers.

JUNIORS LEARN FROM THOSE WHO KNOW – More than 300 juniors from Northern and Southern high schools were lectured by community members at the recent annual Career Expo at Garrett College. The Annual Career Expo Differs from a traditional "Career Day" program. The Expo involves a unique format in which actual business and industry personnel present information to the students about specific career pathways. The goal is to educate students to the reality of tomorrow's career market and provide an overview of the required coursework and future career opportunities. The idea is to provide students with a picture of technical and other demonstrable careers and a better understanding of what each career entails. Area businesses, industries, and professionals volunteered to spend the day interacting with junior students. They talked about career choices, the type of education required for those choices, college life, and sound financial planning. The community volunteers also welcomed questions from students. The event was held at Garrett College and sponsored by Garrett College and the Garrett County Board of Education. Presenters included Mike Kilgis, Charlie Ross, Gary Yoder, Joanne Forno, Mark Proudfoot, Jason VanSickle, Mike Berry, LFC Bryan Willetts, and seniors Chelsea Davis, Bobby Bonser, and Stephanie Abe. Pictured above, Charlie Ross, president of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, addresses the students.

Plans Finalized For Annual Garden Show

The third annual Green Thumb Garden Show, sponsored by the GFWC Civic Club of Oakland, the Garrett County Lighthouse, and the Greater Oakland Business Association (GOBA), will take place at the Lighthouse in Oakland on Saturday, April 30, from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

This year's event will include more exhibits, workshops, and activities to promote the goal of achieving a "sound mind, healthy body, and a safe and beautiful environment," according to Roberta Andersen, chairperson of the event.

Floral displays, gardening and landscape exhibits, a bake sale, and special activities for children will be included in the day's event, as well as a mini-shopping-mart on the lower level of the facility. Items such as handbags, cosmetics, pot holders, candles, homemade candy, wreaths, and floral gifts will able be available for sale.

Exhibitors for the show will include Green Acres, Nature's Own/Country Garden Expressions, Orchids by King, Honey Grace Farm, Hoyland Horticulture, Flowers by Webers, Advantage Florist, Farmers' Market, Deep Creek Design Studio, and the Quilt Lady.

Students from the Swan Meadow School will present an exhibit of Garrett County birds, and members of local 4-H groups will demonstrate planting and will distribute plants. Liz McDowell will distribute seedlings from the DNR.

Bryce Hoyland, a certified arborist, will conduct a workshop on the care of trees at 11 a.m. At 1 p.m., Nancy Nimmich will present a workshop titled Secrets of Herbs. (See separate story.)

Throughout the day, Keyboard World of LaVale will provide musical entertainment.

In keeping with a theme of "Over the Rainbow," children will be able to visit a petting zoo as well as with some of "Dorothy's friends from Oz," Andersen said.

Lunch will be available in the cafeteria.

Because of limited parking, a shuttle service from the Oakland Municipal Parking Lot will be provided. At the end of the day, a 50/50 drawing will be held, and an auction of donated items will take place.

Details Of Last Week's Plane Crash Released

The Maryland State Police compiled a report late last week about the plane crash that took place near the runway of the Garrett County Airport in McHenry. The crash happened at 7:30 a.m. on Thursday, April 14.

According to the report, Vester Robison, 51, Raymond, Miss., was attempting to land a Cessna 337 Skymaster airplane at the airport when the craft clipped the tops of trees at the west end of the runway. It crashed, and both Robison and his passenger, Craig Cotton, 45, Ridgeland, Miss., walked away with minor burns, according to the report. The plane was nearly completely destroyed by fire.

The two men were reportedly in Garrett County doing map work of the area. They were transported by the Trooper 5 medevac helicopter to Cumberland Memorial Hospital, where they were treated for burns and contusions and then released.

Responding to the scene in addition to the MSP were the Deep Creek, Accident, and Friendsville volunteer fire departments, and the Northern Garrett Rescue Squad. Personnel of the Federal Aviation Administration also responded to the scene. The airport reopened at 10:30 a.m. the day of the crash.

In other police news, no injuries were reported in a two-vehicle accident Friday afternoon on Maryland Highway near Pysell Crosscut Road.

According to police, Rocky Tichinel Jr., 27, of Oakland was stopped in the eastbound lane waiting to make a left turn when his vehicle was rear ended by another vehicle operated by Christopher Bennett, 18, also of Oakland.

Bennett was charged with failure to control speed to avoid a collision.

GLAF To Present Cashore Marionettes

The Garrett Lakes Arts Festival (GLAF) will present the Cashore Marionettes on Friday, May 6, at the Garrett College auditorium.

The performance will begin at 7 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults and $5 for youth 12 years and younger. For tickets and information, persons may call the GLAF office at 301-387-3082.

The program, titled "Simple Gifts," is a series of portrayals and scenes from everyday life set to music by such composers as Vivaldi, Strauss, Beethoven, and Copland.

"The original vignettes presented in Simple Gifts, through a combination of virtuoso manipulation, beautiful music, theatrical illusion, and artistic insight, provide a sensitive vision of what it is to be human," said a spokesperson from Cashore. "From humorous to tragic, the performance spans the range of emotions with characters and actions that are amazingly convincing. The marionettes are engineering marvels, and the quality of movement is extraordinary."

The sponsor partners for this performance are LAOC and Shoup Design. Season sponsors for GLAF are Coldwell Banker Deep Creek Realty, the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, Wisp at Deep Creek Mountain Resort, and the Sprenger-Lang Foundation. Funding also comes from the arts councils of Garrett County and Maryland.

This project is partially supported by a grant from the Pennsylvania Performing Arts on Tour, a program developed and funded by Vira I. Heinz Endowment, the William Penn Foundation, the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, and the Pew Charitable Trusts, and administered by the Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation.

Complete information is available on GLAF's web site, located at www.arts-andentertainment.org.

Oakland Youth Facing Bomb-Related Charges

An unidentified Oakland youth faces felony criminal charges after investigators from the Maryland State Police found one suspected homemade explosive device and materials to make additional bombs in his home yesterday. No motive has been established in the case.

The 16-year-old male is charged as a juvenile with one count of each of manufacture, possession, and distribution of a destructive device, and five counts of possession of explosive or incendiary material with intent. Each of the charges are felonies. After being detained in police custody at the MSP McHenry barracks, the accused is being processed by authorities with the Department of Juvenile Services.

The investigation began late yesterday morning when the McHenry barracks received information that the juvenile may have explosive devices and firearms in his possession. After contacting the juvenile, troopers went to his home in the Oakland area, where he lives with relatives. From a closet in his bedroom, troopers reportedly recovered a box containing a small carbon dioxide cartridge that had been emptied of gas and filled with what appeared to be black powder and steel pellets from shotgun shells. The box also contained materials to make five more devices.

Troopers immediately contacted investigators from the State Fire Marshal's Office, who responded to the scene and examined the device and additional parts. The fire marshals confirmed the device was an explosive, and that the assorted parts were components for additional explosive devices.

Also recovered from the home were two rifles, a shotgun, and a black powder rifle, each of which allegedly belonged to the accused. No criminal charges were filed in connection with the firearms, although they were removed from the home by a relative for safekeeping purposes.

It was also reported that a sweep was made of Southern High School last night to confirm that no suspicious materials connected with this case were located at the school. That investigation, which reportedly included a bomb-detection canine dog and MSP helicopter Trooper 3, ended with a determination that the school's premises were clear.

Investigators from both the State Fire Marshal's Office and Maryland State Police are continuing their investigation.

Sexual Offender Registry Explained By Sheriff's Office

The Garrett County Sheriff's Office is responsible for the registration of sexual offenders residing in or relocating to Garrett County. The following information is being provided in response to a number of inquiries from the public concerning registration procedures, said Sheriff Dick Sanders.

Under the Sexual Offender Registry statute, there are four classifications of sexual offenders in Maryland. Persons convicted of sexual offenses are required to register as an offender, child sexual offender, sexual violent offender, or sexual violent predator.

Sexual offenders are required to register annually, for a period of either 10 years or a lifetime, depending upon the nature of the offense for which the individual was convicted. Sexual offenders are required to register upon release from jail or upon moving to Garrett County from another jurisdiction. Those moving to Garrett County are required to register with the Sheriff's Office within seven days of establishing residency within the county.

The registration form contains personal information about the offender, a photograph, and fingerprints. The process is repeated each year. The registration form is transmitted to the state Sexual Offender Registry Unit in Baltimore and updated in the database. The basic information is entered on the agency's web site.

In the case of a child sexual offender, a copy of the registration is forwarded to the superintendent of public schools, who makes notification to the principals of the schools in the area where the offender may be residing.

The Sexual Offender Registry laws do not dictate whether an offender is prohibited from contact with children. Those requirements would be established as a condition of parole or probation upon the offender's release. Failure of a sexual offender to register as required by law is punishable, upon conviction, of three years' incarceration and/or $5,000 fine.

The state's Sexual Offender Registry may be accessed through the web site of the Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services at www.dpscs.-state.md.us. Click onto the Sexual Offender Registry on the left of the page. The site is designed to search for offenders using an area's ZIP code. The registry may also be accessed through the web site of the Garrett County Sheriff's Office at www.garrettcounty.org/sheriff or by contacting the Sheriff's Office at 301-334-1911.

Fairmont Pair Jailed For Drugs During MSP Stop

A man and woman from Fairmont, W.Va., were arrested Friday afternoon during a traffic stop near Friendsville, according to the McHenry barrack of the Maryland State Police.

Floyd Ellis Cowger III, 37, and Jennifer Ann Benson, 26, were charged with possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

At 12:45 p.m. troopers stopped the pair's vehicle for an expired registration sticker. The odor of suspected burning marijuana led to a search that uncovered the suspected drug and paraphernalia.

Cowger and Benson were later released from police custody without being booked at the Garrett County Detention Center.

Deb Carpenter, geographical information systems specialist with the Garrett County Department of Planning and Land Development, is leading the project.

The director noted that one of the planes involved in the endeavor crashed and burned at the Garrett County Airport last Thursday, injuring two Mississippi men. Frantz said the mapping project would not be delayed, as most of the photos had already been taken. The orthophotography needed to be completed before the leaves came out on trees.

Frantz added that the Emergency Numbers Systems Board had also awarded $677,000 for a 9-1-1 project. The county will use its share to purchase new command center equipment.

Frantz also told the commissioners that a grant had been secured through the Maryland Institute for Emergency Medical Services Systems (MIEMSS). The money will be used to purchase seven more automated external defibrillators (AEDs) for the county's AED program.

"The program is going very well," the director said, adding that it was not costing the county anything in the long run. "It's a grant that's very productive."

The new AEDs will be placed in Southern and Northern middle schools, the Visitors Center, Cherry Hill Assisted Living, Garrett College, a Sheriff's Office patrol unit, and a Department of Natural Resources Search and Rescue unit.

Other defibrillators purchased with MIEMSS grants are located throughout the county, including in the courthouse, high schools, and fire and rescue units.

Those wanting the AEDs must agree to receive training on using them before they can receive the devices. Assistant director Phil Rook, GC Office of Emergency Management, provides the training.

Frantz said some persons are hesitant to receive the training because of liability issues. He stressed, however, that there were no problems with liability, as those trained would be covered by Good Samaritan laws.

Huge Shot in the Arm...

More than once we have complained in this column about the skyrocketing cost of health insurance, and no doubt we will do it again. While this column is related to this crisis, it is meant to have a more positive spin, as we comment on the awarding of a federal grant to Garrett County that will be used to establish a community health center.

Before we express delight about this gift, we first want to reiterate how fortunate we are to already have such high quality health care available in Garrett County. We are blessed with excellent physicians, various other health-care professionals, and an outstanding hospital. The rates for services from local physicians and the hospital are generally substantially lower than those in most other areas of the state.

However, the fact of the matter is, a huge segment of our population is going bare when it comes to health insurance. Too many of our citizens simply cannot afford it. The end result then is that a lot of folks do not get medical care when they need it. Without effective, early intervention with certain diseases, people often unnecessarily end up as hospital patients with severe conditions that could have been nipped in the bud. They do not get preventive care, which is crucial to living a healthier, happier, longer life. Consequently, as a county, we tend to consistently flunk in most areas of wellness. We are not a very healthy population.

The new community health center, though, will provide health care to people without regard to their ability to pay. It will present a golden opportunity for far more sick people to get well and healthy people to stay that way, regardless of their income.

Accolades are extended to all who have worked so hard to win this grant, including Garrett County Health Department personnel (specifically Bob Stephens, director of community and family health, and health officer Rodney Glotfelty), the Garrett County commissioners, and various state and federal elected officials. It will be a huge shot in the arm (forgive the pun) for both quality and quantity of life in Garrett County.

To the Editor:

Premature birth is the leading cause of newborn death and many lifelong disabilities in the United States. Unfortunately, it is a growing problem in our country, affecting one out of every eight babies born. Overall, the rate of premature birth has risen 29 percent since 1981. In an average week in Maryland, 182 babies are born too soon – some so small they can fit in the palm of your hand.

The costs and consequences of premature birth are enormous. It takes a tremendous emotional, physical, and financial toll on babies and their families. Average hospital charges for the most severe cases of prematurity are nearly 60 times higher than the charges for newborn stays without complications. It impacts us all.

The March of Dimes, the organization that conquered polio, has taken up the fight against premature birth. You can help by joining me and thousands of our neighbors as we participate in one of the 16 Walk America sites being held across the state between April 23 and May 15.

Since it was first held 35 years ago, WalkAmerica has raised more than $1 billion nationwide to fund the innovative programs and cutting-edge research that have saved millions of babies from death and disability.

Join WalkAmerica now and be part of the fight against prematurity. Walk for someone you love, so all babies will have a chance to be born healthy and full-term. For more information call 1-800-525-WALK or visit walkamerica.org. Thank you.

To the Editor:

Each year, families and individuals in the Oakland area make summer special for New York City children as volunteers for the Fresh Air Fund. As National Volunteer Week approaches, I would like to give my deepest thanks to our Fresh Air heroes: dedicated hosts, volunteers, and supporters. Year after year, they demonstrate their compassion and concern for the well-being of others by their commitment to New York City children from low-income neighborhoods.

Our caring Fresh Air host families open their homes and share the everyday joys of summertime with their Fresh Air guests. Our local volunteer leaders – many of whom are also hosts – give by serving on our local Friendly Town Committee, planning summer activities, raising funds for special events, publicizing the program, and interviewing prospective host families. I would also like to thank all individuals and businesses which have generously given their time and resources to make the Friendly Town Program throughout the Oakland area a great success each summer.

The theme of this year's National Volunteer Week is "Volunteers Inspire by Example." Our volunteers are truly inspirational.

The Fresh Air Fund, an independent, not-for-profit agency, has provided free summer vacations to more than 1.7 million New York City children since 1877. For more information on how you can help to continue this wonderful tradition of volunteering, please call Alice Orendorf at 301-245-4326 or the Fresh Air Fund at 800-367-0003.

Sincerely,

My sister and I are conducting sort of a survey. On Oct. 3, 2004, our dad passed away after 48 days of showing signs of illness. The doctors in Morgantown called the disease that took Dad's life CJD, or Cheutzfeldt-Jakob, which destroys the brain cells. There is no way to pinpoint what causes it. We have heard recently there are some people around the area who are having the same symptoms.

We were told Dad had the start of Alzheimer's, then one local doctor said it was dementia. The doctors in Morgantown, however, said Dad did show some signs of that, but it was not what took his life, because these diseases do not advance as quickly as his did. We were told there is no known cure for CJD, but we are interested in knowing if there are family members going through what we did. Maybe someone else has lost a loved one or is going through it now because the disease comes on so quickly.

If this has affected your life, we know what you're going through, and you're wondering what it could be. Believe me, I kept a journal on Dad's illness and it is unbelievable! If you would like to talk to us you can contact us at cunheaven@gcnetmail.net or at roger_shaffer@hotmail.com.

To the Editor:

Fundraising can be fun and great, especially when everything "clicks." We had that experience this past Sunday when we had a chicken barbecue in our church parking lot. The weather was perfect. All our team members worked together preparing, barbecuing, and serving the chicken. At 7 a.m. Ron McKenney from the Kitzmiller Lions Club brought his mobile charcoal barbecue pit to the parking lot and we loaded it with the charcoal. From then on it was fun, learning how to prepare and season chicken the best way and to have it tender and juicy. Team members in the kitchen served the chicken along with baked beans, cole slaw, roll, and drink to those who wanted to eat in or to carry home.

We want to thank Ron for staying all day and guiding us in the cookout process. Also we need to thank Kiley and Tracy at Get 'N Go for ordering and letting us store the chicken until Sunday. We did well, and all the proceeds went to Relay for Life.

The Relay for Life event will happen June 10-11 at the Southern High track. If you know of cancer survivors, there will be a free survivor dinner at 5 p.m. on that Friday evening for them and their spouses or caretakers. At dusk all around the track, candles with names on them in memory/honor of a loved one will be lit, and a very meaningful ceremony of words and songs will take place. Ask any Relay for Life team member or call 301-334-2348 for a form to fill out to attend the survivor dinner or to place a candle on the track for your loved one. We have plenty of time, but do it now so you won't forget.

Sincerely,

To the Editor:

The statements made in last week's Republican editorial regarding local officials' ability to control property assessment increases are simply wrong as far as permanent residents of the county are concerned.

Here are the facts:

In Maryland, each county's government does have the power, under another part of the same state law that requires them to hold the "constant yield" meeting, to cap the rise of assessments on dwellings occupied fulltime by their owners. They can be cut all the way down to zero! Right here in Garrett County during a previous administration, that board reduced the cap from the statewide maximum of 10% per year to 5%. I attended that meeting and commended then-commissioner Beitzel who announced the decision. I also was at the previous year's meeting and had prodded the board to do just that and more.

This year I could not attend, but last year I was on the record again, not once, but twice, saying that with all the development at the lake going on they could drop the cap much lower than 5% with the stroke of a pen.

Have you seen or heard anything about that since? I wonder why not?

In my opinion, we could have the lowest property taxes in the state if the money weren't being thrown as fast as it comes in at what one current commissioner once called "worthy projects"! Add to that the huge increase in county government employees. Just check out all of the new job titles created over the past few years. Guess who is paying for all of this.

Let me close by saying that we do not need only "wild and crazy" ideas (not my quote) to solve our problems here. What we need are leaders who have the fiscal common sense to spend our tax money on what we really need, not what every special interest group or developer wants, and give the huge surplus that those actions would produce back to us in the form of tax relief.

To the Editor:

The evening of April 11 proved to be an overwhelming fundraiser for the Garrett County Relay for Life. The idea was brought to our attention to use the large crowds that attend the Northern/Southern baseball games as a fundraiser. All the proceeds from the gate were donated to Relay for Life.

Before the game, a concession stand, built by friends and family through the Donna Carr Memorial fund, was dedicated. Donna Carr, Southern graduate and a strong Husky supporter, lost her battle with cancer last year. The first pitch was thrown out by retired Husky baseball coach John Houser, a cancer survivor. Throughout the evening many came up and just kept handing us donations. Our total profit was $553.50!!

We want to say thank you to the coaches who suggested the idea and to the fans who generously donated to this cause. On April 25, the Southern Rams will host the Northern Huskies, and their gate profits will also be donated to Relay for Life. Northern and Southern baseball have teamed up to help our county strike out the battle many in our community have had to face. There is no finish line until a cure is found.

Please consider joining a Relay for Life team, or come out and support Garrett County Relay for Life, to be held June 10-11 at Southern High School. For more information or to make a donation, contact me, Debbie Workman, at 301-746-8717.

To the Editor:

Recently my grandmother was hospitalized for pneumonia and an ongoing heart condition. Because of the toll of her illness, her doctor recommended Hospice as an alternative to a "nursing home" environment. She (wishing to be at home) decided that Hospice was a viable option for her treatment. My grandmother has always been a fighter... full of life with a strong will. For the past decade, her doctors have utterly misjudged her will to live and her ability to bounce back in miraculous recovery. She may be approaching life's end, but never has she submitted to the predictions of those who forecasted her end over a decade ago.

Herein lies the problem. It is no secret that Hospice embraces morphine as a treatment for pain. On a Hospice website they endow the benefits of this powerful opiate to alleviate pain. The use is justified to provide a "palliative rather than curative treatment; quality rather than quantity of life. The dying are comforted." I am not judging their practice or condemning it. The sole purpose of this letter is to inform of what service Hospice provides. My grandmother still talks about getting better, feeding her animals, and driving her car. Hospice was suggested by her physician as an alternative to a "nursing home." She requested no treatment for pain.

When Hospice began seeing her at her home, they immediately administered morphine. She strongly objected when her care provider suggested that her morphine dose be doubled and her heart medication stopped. She said no to the extra morphine and declined further services. Over

"SPEAKING OF FRENCH"

Just after I had finished last week's column in which I discussed the difficulty of learning French, I had a message from one of the premier political philosophers in France. He had read my column about the death of Pope John Paul II, and had some very kind things to say about the column – in French.

Then in English, and very kindly – he is one of the kindest people I have met in this country – he explained to me that I had exactly reversed "un grand homme," which as it turns out means "a great man" – and "un homme grand," which simply means "a tall man."

In a way, had he not been so kind, I would not have felt so miserable. Had he corrected me in that brusque fashion so typical of the French (like pouring a cup of ice cubes in your soup), I could have felt a little outraged.

Precisely at the moment that I had been trying to explain a nuance of the French language at a great moment of history, I had gotten it one hundred and eighty degrees wrong. This fact was pointed out to me in the gentlest possible way, and I felt completely humiliated.

In last week's column, however, I did get one thing right. I still have not learned French.

I wrote to my Cousin Sammy about how humiliated I felt to have had my French grammar corrected by one the foremost philosophers of the day. Sammy is a sage and cheerful chap, and replied, "What better critic to have!" Now there's a point! How many people can claim to have had their grammar corrected by a leading French philosopher?

During my undergraduate career there was a professor who boasted he had been told both by John Kenneth Galbraith and Margaret Mead that he had asked a stupid question. By such a standard I have only begun to assemble my dossier.

Ordinarily, when listening to a foreigner incompetently speaking their language the French wear a look on their faces like an old maid observing her five year-old great nephew playing with her eighteenth century porcelain tea service. There is an admixture of pain and anxiety. It is as if we could break the language merely by speaking it badly.

In French many ideas are conveyed by increasing the grammatical complexity of expression. Sometimes French meaning even transcends grammatical construction. For example, the difference between "should" and "must" is often conveyed, in the final analysis, by tone of voice.

When the natives say, "French is a difficult language to speak," it is with pride, as if being difficult to speak were an achievement after centuries of intensive labor.

It seems that no one speaks it perfectly. One of my language teachers debated with herself, while the class sat there listening to her take the two sides in the debate, about a particular construction before pronouncing her verdict. I have heard it said that a French newspaper once praised President De Gaulle for using the pluperfect correctly.

The French who are least judgmental of the foreigner doing his very best to speak French are those who themselves have struggled with other languages. The more languages they know, the more understanding they are. These folks have discovered that the difficulty of the French language to be spoken is not an accomplishment.

Not only do they know firsthand how difficult it is to learn another language well, but they have also come to appreciate the beauties of other languages.

One such friend expresses his admiration for the English language. "There is a word for everything," he marvels. I am pleased and a little relieved to hear this observation from a Frenchman because I have often thought that there are simply not enough words in French.

As examples, there is no good translation for "friendliness" or the various constructions of "to enjoy." Where a word is lacking, is the concept lacking too, and, finally, the experience as well?

The French who have plunged themselves into other languages and other cultures have a fuller complement of experiences and concepts. That is certainly true for the thinker who corrected my French. He lectures often in the United States. From his French lectures here in Paris I know he understands Greek and German well.

He is also rare among professors in any country of my experience. He is humble enough to open himself to correction. During his course he invites challenges to the material he has presented. He is also human enough to express frustration sometimes when that occurs more than he anticipated or wanted.

In the end, it is his own equanimity in the face of contradiction which inspires me. When he corrected me, he only did for me what he would expect me to do for him. His is a kindness born of humilty, but then after all he is himself "un grand homme."

Three Injured In Single-Vehicle Interstate Crash

A Delaware driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel Saturday evening on Interstate 68 near Friendsville, and he and his two passengers were injured when their SUV went out of control and crashed. Maryland State Police troopers from the McHenry barrack investigated the 6:45 p.m. accident.

According to the police report, a 1999 Dodge Durango was eastbound in the center lane of the interstate, approaching the six-mile marker, when Isaiah R. Robinson, 21, of New Castle, apparently fell asleep. The SUV went off the roadway and struck a guardrail. Upon impact, the vehicle became airborne before it struck an embankment and overturned.

Robinson and passengers Wayne Sanders, 20, of Newark, Del., and Austen M. Merrills, 20, of Buckhannon, W.Va., were each taken to Cumberland Memorial Hospital. One of the patients was airlifted to the hospital by MSP Trooper 5, while the other two were transported by the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad. No information was available as to who took which mode of transportation, or the extent of any injuries.

No information was available concerning possible charges against Robinson.

save lives by removing some of the financial barriers that prevent some persons from accessing primary care. It was a total team effort and we could not have done it without the strong local support from the medical community."

With the grant money, WMHCC plans to open a community health center in the Oakland area that will serve 5,000 patients per year, noted the spokesperson. Services provided to children and adults will include primary care, urgent medical care, immunizations and other well-baby care, diagnostic tests and screens, laboratory services, health education and promotion, and individual case management. In addition, the center will contract for preventive dental care and mental health services for its patients.

"Expanded access, getting more people to see a health care provider for prevention, or for earlier treatment of disease, that's what the FQHC can bring to Garrett County," said Deputy Health Officer Dr. William Pope. "We've always had dedicated and generous physicians in the county, but with increased financial support for seeing a doctor on a sliding fee scale, people may feel more comfortable seeking early care.

"Recruitment of doctors should also be assisted, because the financial support will reassure providers they can make a reasonable living here, and spend the needed time with each patient, even in a county which has almost the lowest average family income of the state."

Don Battista, the CEO for Garrett Memorial Hospital, agreed. "The FQHC will complement our existing primary care physicians' services to the uninsured," Battista said. "The hospital has been working to help expand the number of primary care physicians in the region, and the FQHC will aid in that growth."

"We really have our work cut out for us now," said Gregg. "There is a lot of ground work to be done and up until now we have done all of the work without paid staff. We will begin looking for an executive director for the center immediately."

"Access to quality health care is an essential human need, especially in our rural and under-served areas," said Sarbanes. "This new facility will help provide Garrett County residents with the access to the quality health care they deserve."

the next few days she experienced withdrawal from the drug her system rapidly became addicted to. Recently she told me about her Hospice experience and emphatically stated that she didn't want to die by the hands of man, but by the hand of God.

So here is my advice. Doctors, clearly explain what Hospice is before recommending it. Hospice has already submitted to death in its philosophical statements. Have you? Have your loved ones? These are important questions to ask. Because my grandmother said no to Hospice, my son, wife and daughter will be blessed by each day that God gives her from this point on. She will be a blessing to her family until her last God given breath... and that is life. The celebration of life. Make the right choice.

September 26, 1938 - April 25, 2002

We can't believe it's been three years since you had to leave us; it seems like only yesterday that we were camping and spending time together. We will treasure, cherish, and never forget those memories we made.

Although you are not physically here with us, we know you are watching us from above.

Pappy, you are our guardian angel and with you over our shoulders we can face the world with a brave heart.

We Love and Miss You,

Wildfire Danger Flags Flying In Preston County

Because of the lack of rain in the area, the fire danger is currently very high. Weather conditions, therefore, have prompted the Division of Forestry to alert the Office of Emergency Services to raise the red "Wildfire Danger" flag in front of the Preston County's Sheriff's Office to warn residents of the dangerous burning conditions. The flag will be flown until the fire danger has lessened.

Residents are encouraged to refrain from conducting any outdoor burning until conditions improve, such as the area receiving measurable rainfall. Conditions such as high winds, low relative humidity, warm weather, and periods of little or no rainfall greatly contribute to fire danger.

Outdoor burning restrictions are in effect through May 31. During this time, all outdoor burning is prohibited until after 4 p.m., and all fires must be extinguished by 7 a.m. Only vegetative materials such as limbs, leaves, and brush may be burned. A 10-foot area must be cleared around anything being burned, and all fires must be attended until completely extinguished.

For more information, persons may contact the Division of Forestry District 1 office at 304-367-2793 or the Preston County field office at 304-329-0184, or visit online at wvforestry.com.

and for those who plan to partake in the usual spring activities, there is a good chance you're heading for an athletic injury. After a dormant winter, many of us rush back into the typical spring sports such as golf, baseball, and swimming with little to no conditioning for that sport. The biggest mistake people make is doing nothing in the off-season and then immediately returning "full-go." Muscles must be conditioned during and after the season to remain healthy. Here are some simple tips to start your spring off right, and possibly prevent time away from your activity due to an athletic injury:

- Gradually return to the level of activity that you did last year. Don't try to do exactly what you did at the end of your season last year *(ie: Golfers: Try 9 holes the first couple times out)
- Warm up and stretch specific to your sport.
- Use strength-training exercises in your warm-up routine.
- Rotator Cuff, Rotator Cuff, Rotator Cuff !!!! Strengthen these muscles. If you don't know how, give us a call.
- Persistent pain should be addressed sooner than later; it's too common for us to wait and "hope it gets better." Doing this can lead to further damage.
- *MOST IMPORTANT Continue to train these muscles in the off-season.

Off-season programs include: proper flexibility and muscle conditioning

Addressing Proj. Needs Names For Driveways

The Preston County Office of Emergency Management is working with MicroData on the 911 addressing system for the county and is seeking residents' help.

The first step to setting addresses for residents is naming all roads in the county. This includes private drives with two or more houses on them. All major roads in the county have been named; however, most driveways have not.

"We are on a very short time schedule, and we have to name the private drives by April 27 to complete as much addressing as possible," said Clark Nicklow, addressing mapping coordinator.

"Should we fall behind, it will delay the entire state in the addressing process. The 911 addressing is a matter of public safety; therefore, we will have to assign a name to all the driveways that are in the county."

All residents are urged to contact Nicklow at 304-329-1855 or nick@preston911.com with their wish of a name for their driveway; otherwise, a name will be assigned for them.

"Have several original names picked, because names cannot be duplicated, and this will eventually be your mailing address," Nicklow said. "Also, if you live in a housing development, please have someone from your homeowner's association contact us so that we may be sure we have your names in our system."

Persons who would like to check the progress of the addressing mapping may visit online at wvaddressing-project.com.

Several Garrett County Lutheran churches were represented at the spring assembly of the Women of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Monongahela Valley Mountain Cluster, West Virginia — Western Maryland Synod, held Saturday at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Morgantown, W.Va.

The theme for the day was "Fed by the Bread to Act Boldly," and the meeting was opened with a welcome and greetings from Margaret Maurer of St. Paul's unit, followed by a litany led by Ruth Gladfelter.

Tamara Riegel led a Bible study based on experiences witnessed "on the road to Emmaus."

The synodical unit was represented by Dolly Nelson of Faith Lutheran Church, Franklin, W.Va., who serves as a board member. She announced that the synodical unit convention of Women of the ELCA will be held August 5-6 at St. Timothy Lutheran Church in Charleston. The theme will be "Feel the Power — Energize to Act Boldly." A love offering will be received to support a local ministry, the scholarship fund for women attending a Lutheran seminary with the intent of becoming an ordained pastor, and "Lutheran Lines," the synodical newsletter.

The sixth triennial convention will be held July 5-6 at San Antonia, Texas. Units are encouraged to send an offering for the convention through the synodical unit treasurer.

The guest speaker for the day was Tom Bell, a Christian counselor serving Morgantown and Clarksburg.

Denise Porter, cluster coordinator, presided over the business meeting.

Attendance totaled 42, with eight churches in the cluster represented, including the following Garrett County churches: Emmanuel, Bittinger; Zion, Jennings; St. John's, Cove; and St. John's, Red House.

A hymn sing was held, with Bob Zay as organist and Laura Stiller as song leader. Betty Kidd gave a brief history of the hymns that were sung.

The assembly closed with a meditation by Pastor Patricia Pittsnogle of the Bittinger Parish, who also led a service of Holy Communion. Offerings received were forwarded to the synodical unit.

The next assembly is scheduled for April 22, 2006. The host church will be St. Mark's, Clarksburg, W.Va.

YOUNG WRITER HONORED FOR POETRY – Joseph Bonilla, a seventh grader at Southern Middle School, was presented with a second place award at the recent Maryland International Reading Association Council Conference, held in Hunt Valley. The writer penned a poem titled "Alone," shown on this page, which was selected for second place in the seventh grade category from more than 14,000 entries from across the state of Maryland. The poem was entered into the contest by his teacher, Lorie Burdock, for whom he wrote the poem in class last fall, at that time being a student at Northern Middle. Pictured above from left are the writer's father, Lou Bonilla, Joseph, and the co-chairpersons of the Young Authors' Contest, Dianne Rogers and Deborah Knight. Below Joseph is pictured with a children's book illustrator, Ralph Masiello, who gave a lecture at the awards ceremony and also took time to talk with the young writers. Masiello gave Joseph a copy of his latest work (in Joseph's hands), titled The Skull Alphabet Book. See story.

Student Places Second In State Poetry Contest

Joseph Bonilla, a seventh grader at Southern Middle School, was recently honored at the Maryland International Reading Association Council Conference, held at the Marriott Hunt Valley (Md.) Inn, for earning second place in the association's Young Authors' Contest.

A student at Northern Middle last fall, Bonilla's poem, titled "Alone," was submitted to the contest by his teacher at that time, Lorie Burdock. He and Burdock were notified in February this year that the 13-year-old writer's work had placed second out of over 14,000 entries.

ALONE

When you pick up sand it is always together.
You can never pick up just one piece,
It's just not the way things work.
Sand has friends; all it wishes,
So it can be comfortable,
But, I'm like a one and only apple tree,
In a forest of pines.
I feel alone,
All alone,
No one here.
No one to comfort me or be with me.
There's no one like me in this forest,
Or maybe there is,
I just can't see them.
Over the high, tall, wide, long branches,
I have to find them,
Where are they?
Please call out to me now...
I can not speak,
I can not talk,
I want to talk,
I want to speak,
It's just the way I am.

Garrett County Reading Council

Joseph, his father Lou, his younger brothers Brian and John, his aunt Maria Bonilla, and Burdock all attended the awards ceremony, held on March 30. His aunt flew up from her home in Florida for the event.

In addition to receiving his award, Joseph was able to meet the other winning writers and exchange autographs with them. He was also introduced to Ralph Masiello, a well-known children's book illustrator.

Masiello gave a presentation to the award winners and their families, explaining how children's books are produced and offering tips to all the young writers.

"Joseph was thrilled," said his father Lou. "He has always loved to write. He writes all the time. So to meet an accomplished illustrator was just great for him. And we all enjoyed the presentation."

Masiello gave Joseph a copy of his latest book, The Skull Alphabet Book, complete with his autograph. Joseph also received the 2005 Young Author's Anthology, in which his poem is published.

Bonilla's work, which appears on this page, was written in Burdock's class last year. Lou said Joseph's writing is often inspired by memories of his mother, Cecilia Bonilla, who died suddenly and unexpectedly in 1999. She, too, was a published writer and avid reader.

"He's very proud of his mom," Lou said. "She definitely continues to inspire him to write."

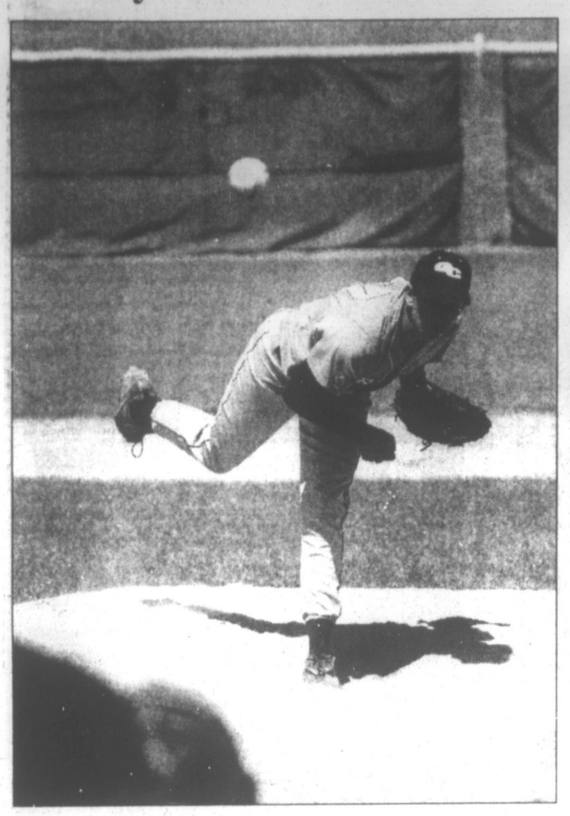
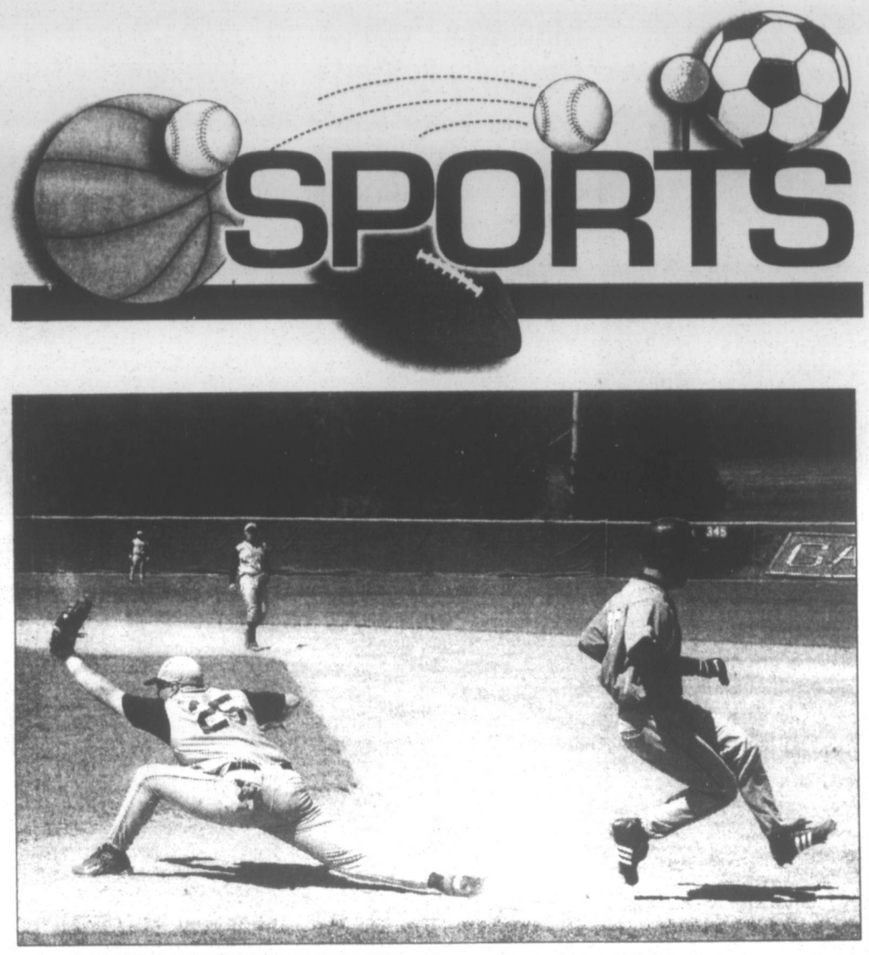
Lakers More Down Than Up In Busy Week On Diamond





FORMER NORTHERN HUSKY Dan Vagnetti, pictured left, played a key role in a Garrett College baseball victory over visiting Harford Community College on Sunday, as he came on in relief in the seventh inning and allowed no runs, and also had the winning RBI in the bottom of the seventh. In the photo directly above, Laker Jeff Romberger beats the throw to first. The Lakers swept the twinbill from Harford, 10-9 and 21-7. See story for details. Photos by John McEwen.

It's been a more-down-than-up week on the baseball diamond for the Garrett College team and coach Eric Hallenbeck, as the Lakers dropped both ends of a doubleheader to visiting Frederick CC on Friday, 18-12 and 7-2; defeated Harford CC twice on Saturday in McHenry, 10-9 and 21-7; lost a pair of games to host Anne Arundel on Sunday, 13-3 and 4-2; handed Montgomery-Rockville a 19-15 defeat on Tuesday at Rockville; and finally lost a twinbill to host Montgomery-Germantown yesterday, 3-2 and 10-3. The results left the Lakers with a 12-17 record.

The Lakers out-hit Frederick in the first game of Friday's twinbill by a 12-8 margin, but Garrett pitchers had trouble finding the strike zone, walking 17 batters.

Garrett took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the second, but fell behind for good in the top of the third when the Cougars erupted for seven runs.

Recording a two-run homer in the sixth for the Lakers was Brandon Benson, who also had a single. Burt Comerford finished with three singles and two RBI, while Matt Butler and Taylor Billingsley each contributed two hits.

A second-inning solo homer by Keith Kellinger gave Frederick the lead for good in the second game. Hitting a double and a single each for the Cougars were Jonas Brinks and Brian Parks, while Dan Leatherman stroked two singles.

Comerford provided a double and a single for two RBI for the Lakers.

The score of Saturday's first game against Harford was knotted at 9-9 after 6½ innings of play, but the Lakers won the game in the bottom of the seventh when Luke Hardwick beat the throw to the plate on a fielder's choice.

Aaron Harper had led off the Laker seventh with a walk. Billingsley followed with a bunt to push pinch-runner Hardwick to second, but he reached third on the play when no Harford player covered second. Dan Vagnetti then rapped a grounder to third and Hardwick beat the throw to home to win the game.

Harper had a two-run triple in the Lakers' seven-hit performance.

The Lakers virtually put the second game away in the second inning when they scored 16 runs, adding to the five they recorded in the first inning. The game was ultimately called after 4½ innings because of the 10-run rule.

The Lakers finished with a 15-5 lead in hits, with Danny Flores going 3-for-3 with a solo homer, two doubles, and a pair of RBI. Comerford added a double and two singles for three RBI, and Billingsley also rapped a double and two singles. Brandon Benson chipped in with two singles.

In Sunday's first game against Anne Arundel CC, the Lakers had just one fewer hit than their hosts (5-4), but committed seven costly errors, which led to the lopsided 13-3 final score. Eight of Anne Arundel's runs were unearned.

Comerford hit a two-run homer in the third inning, but that would be the only offensive highlight for the Lakers.

Garrett's David Rosario went the distance and allowed only one hit in the second game, only to lose, despite the fact that the Lakers finished with a 7-1 lead in hits.

Danny Flores stroked a two-run triple for the Lakers in the top of the fifth, while Jeff Romberger and Joel Chavez each had two hits.

The Lakers seemed to have Tuesday's game with Montgomery-Rockville well under control, as they held a commanding 14-0 lead after 4½ innings of play, but the home team responded with eight runs in the bottom of the fifth to make it a game. The slugfest featured a total of 32 hits.

After Rockville closed the gap to 14-9, the Lakers put five more runs on the board in the seventh and then held on while Rockville scored six runs over the final three frames.

Garrett's Brandon Benson went 3-for-5 with a two-run homer and five RBI, while Matt Butler ripped two triples and a single for four RBI, and Bryan McGee provided a triple and two singles.

Leading Rockville at the plate was Ryan Hannegan, who blasted two home runs: a two-run shot in the fifth and a three-run round-tripper in the seventh. Teammate Danny Arenas finished with three hits.

The first game played yesterday against Germantown had to go into extra innings because the score was knotted at 2-2 after seven frames were completed. Then, in the bottom of the ninth, a Laker error and a passed ball gave the home team a run and the immediate victory.

Marty Cornish opened the bottom of the ninth for Germantown by reaching on the error. He advanced to second on a sacrifice, reached third on a single, and came home to score the winning run on a passed ball.

Jeff Romberger and David Rosario combined on a five-hitter for Garrett, while the Lakers recorded a total of seven hits, including a triple and a double by Comerford.

Beachy Hurls NHS Past Alco, BW; Loss To 'Cats Intervenes

The Northern High School varsity baseball squad won a classic 3-2 pitcher's duel over Allegany Friday behind Greg Beachy's masterful performance, then lost to Westmar Monday by a narrow 10-8 margin. Northern rebounded yesterday to claim an 11-8 win over Bishop Walsh as Beachy turned in another fine showing that gave the Huskies an 8-2 overall record and a 4-2 league mark.

Junior righty Beachy carried a perfect game into the fifth inning against the visiting Campers, and recorded eight strikeouts overall against just one walk. Allegany's Kyle Roberts turned in some fine work of his own, holding the powerful Huskies' line-up to just five hits.

NHS scored once in the first inning, then the respective hurlers settled into their battle. Roberts did not give up a Husky hit until the fourth inning, when senior Michael Bergstrom's single broke the offensive ice for both squads.

Alco pulled even in the fifth inning when a batter walked, advanced to second on a balk, and scored on bloop single by Roberts.

Typical of the tit-for-tat meeting, Northern responded with two runs of its own in the bottom half of the stanza. Senior Matt Bass singled, then advanced into scoring position at second base on a wild pitch. With two outs showing, Beachy took matters into his own hands by blasting a two-run homer that put NHS up 3-1.

Allegany mounted a big threat in the seventh inning by scoring a run on a daring double steal that put the potential tying run on third base, just 90 feet from the plate. Husky coach Phil Carr took a gamble of his own by leaving Beachy on the mound to finish his job, and the junior responded to the skipper's note of confidence by whiffing the next batter and then recording a groundout.

Northern suffered an uncharacteristic defensive lapse Monday, and all but handed a two-run win to visiting Westmar. Six Husky errors led to 9 of the 'Cats 10 runs, despite the Huskies rapping out 11 hits overall to the visitors' 8.

NHS's "stone hands" surfaced early with three first-inning errors that resulted in four Westmar runs. The Huskies muffed three more fielding attempts in fourth, leading to five more Wildcat scores. Westmar's sole earned run came in the second inning.

NHS had no trouble on offense, and scored twice in each of the first and second innings, once in the fourth, and three times in the sixth. The Huskies put the tying run in the batter's box with two outs showing in the final inning, but a strikeout sealed their fate.

"We had guys on all night," said Coach Carr. "We just couldn't get the two-out hit that we needed."

NHS sophomore Corey Carr produced three runs with an RBI double and a two-run single. Senior Eric Johnson rapped out three singles, two of which drove home two runs each, and classmates Darrick Lowdermilk and Preston Sisler both doubled. Northern's errors made for a long day for a pitching trio of starter Mark Logsdon and relievers Carr and Johnson.

Perhaps stung by that defeat, the Huskies went on a scoring rampage in the middle of yesterday's road game at Bishop Walsh that left little chance for the hosts to catch up. Northern broke open a scoreless game with five runs in the fourth, three in the fifth and two in the sixth.

The NHS scoring flurry was highlighted by a two-run home run blast by Michael Wolf in the fifth, and a three-run homer launched by Johnson in the following stanza. The Huskies' 13-hit performance was supplemented by a double and two singles by Preston Sisler, a pair of singles by Corey Carr, and three singles from Lowdermilk.

Beachy allowed just four singles in taking the complete-game win on the mound, whiffing two batters and walking two along the way.

The Huskies will host Salisbury tomorrow at 4:30 p.m., then visit Southern Monday. That Oakland meeting will begin with the concluding half-inning of contest that began a week ago, as NHS goes to bat for the bottom of the ninth down 14-8. Following the conclusion of that game's remainder, the two squads will then commence with a full contest.

Gate receipts from the NHS-SHS game will benefit the Garrett County Relay for Life, which received $600 from the two teams' earlier meeting in Accident.

Rams Tripped Up By Keyser, But Then Win Three Straight

An 8-5 upset loss to visiting Keyser on Friday for the Southern High School baseball team was shaken off quickly by the Rams, who bounced back on Saturday to hand host Preston a 9-1 defeat, topped visiting Beall on Tuesday, 5-3, in a Western Maryland Interscholastic League game, and disposed of Westmar last evening, 8-1, in another WMIL clash to remain undefeated in the league.

The 3-1 week gave the Rams and their coach Jim Bosley an overall record of 8-2 and a WMIL mark of 6-0.

The Rams fell behind Keyser 2-0 in the first inning and never did enjoy the lead, falling behind by a 5-0 margin after 2½ innings of play. They out-hit the Golden Tornados by a 13-11 margin, but also committed three errors.

Tyler Graham had a triple and a double for the Rams, Scott Wildesen provided a double and a single, and Aaron Louden and Cory Bosley each finished with two singles.

Winning pitcher Josh Kuykendall also led his team's effort at the plate, from which he rapped a two-run homer and two doubles for a total of three RBI. Teammate Chris Szafran provided a double and a single, and Joel Shoemaker had a pair of singles.

Graham again paced the Rams' offensive effort with a double and a single for one RBI, while Chad Everd added a pair of singles.

The Knights, who fell to 6-5 with the loss, were led at the plate by Chad Chambers and Jason McNair, who each had a double.

Earning the win on the mound for the Rams against Beall on Monday was Aaron Louden, who went the distance, struck out eight, and walked two. He also led Southern's 10-hit attack with a double and a single for three RBI.

The Rams took a 2-0 lead in the first inning, fell behind 3-2 when the Mountaineers scored three runs in the top of the third, and regained the lead for good with two runs in the bottom of the third.

Also rapping a double and a single for the Rams was Cory Bosley, who also had an RBI, and Wildesen provided two singles.

Kevin Tummino recorded a double and two singles to account for two of Beall's three runs. Logan Thomas and Carter Dickel each hit a pair of singles.

The loss dropped the Mountaineers to 4-4 overall and 1-4 in WMIL games.

Scott Wildesen upped his personal record to 3-0 yesterday by tossing into the final inning, during which he allowed four singles and no runs, struck out six, and walked two. Cory Bosley took the mound in the seventh to get the save.

Wildesen also led the Ram offensive attack, recording a double and two singles for three RBI. Aaron

LEADING THE RAMS of Southern High School both defensively and offensively Tuesday afternoon against Beall High School was senior pitcher Aaron Louden, pictured at left during his delivery. Louden went the distance to gain a 5-3 victory, striking out eight and walking only two, and at the plate he smacked a double and a single to send home three of the Rams' five runs. Sisler Blanks 'Cats During NHS JV Run

The junior varsity baseball team at Northern High School is 4-2 after a busy week of action that saw the Huskies take three of five outings, including a no-hit win twirled by NHS's Matt Sisler Saturday against visiting Westmar.

Northern downed host Bishop Walsh, 14-6, on Thursday, April 14, as Matt Sisler and Brock Glotfelty ripped a double and two singles each. Bryce Manges had a triple.

NHS took revenge by crushing the Spartans the following day by a 12-2 margin. The Huskies' Sean Fazenbaker and Dan Cunningham whacked a double and two singles each. Pitchers Sean Nolan, Nick Logue, and George Dom combined to hold BW to three hits, with Nolan gaining the win.

NHS split a twinbill with Westmar Saturday, taking the opener by an 8-0 margin as Sisler whiffed 14 batters over seven innings on no-hit work. The lefty issued just two walks, but picked both runners off base. The freshman also carried his tour de force to the plate, where he stroked a double and three singles, driving home one run. Brock Glotfelty sent home a run when he ripped a triple, home one run, and Dom Dirienzo and Randy Wilhelm both doubled.

Westmar got revenge with a 12-11 win in the nightcap. Tyler Southerly singled three times in the losing NHS effort, while teammate Sisler doubled and singled, and Dirienzo singled twice and doubled.

The Huskies lost 9-5 at Beall on Tuesday. NHS's highlights included a three-single batting performance by Randy Wilhelm.

Rams Tripped

Louden and Tyler Graham each provided a pair of doubles, with one of Louden's yielding a run. Chad Everd hit two singles.

The loss was the eighth in nine games for the Wildcats.

The Rams will travel to Bishop Walsh this Friday for a 5 p.m. game, host county-rival Northern on Monday and entertain Hampshire next Wednesday, with both of those home contests set to begin at 4:30.

Monday's clash with Northern will begin with the completion of the first game between the rivals which was played at Northern, but had to be suspended in the final inning because of darkness. The Rams currently hold a 14-8 lead, with the Huskies batting in the bottom of the final inning. It will be followed immediately by another complete game.

Gate proceeds from Monday's game with Northern will be donated to the Relay for Life fundraiser for the American Cancer Society, as were proceeds from the game played at Northern.

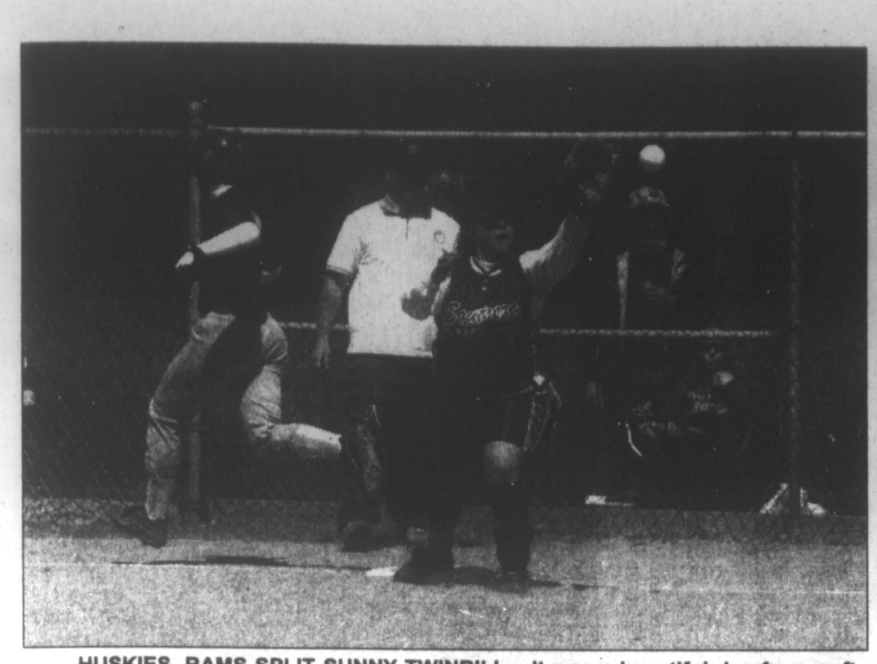
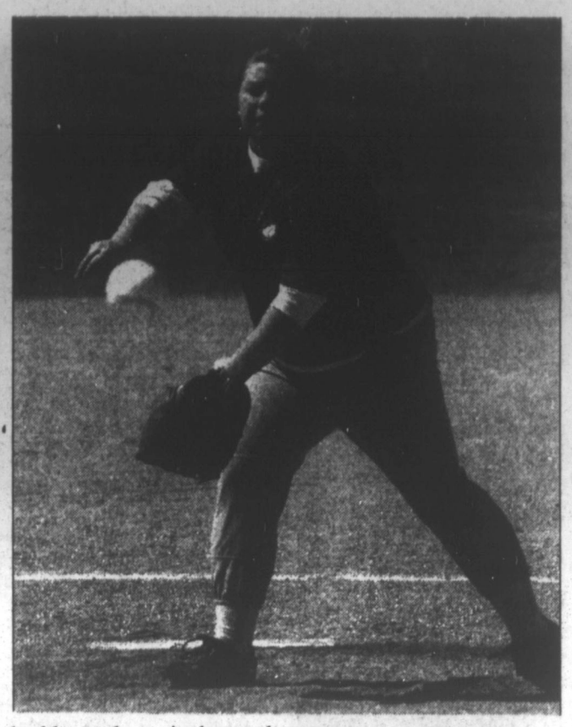
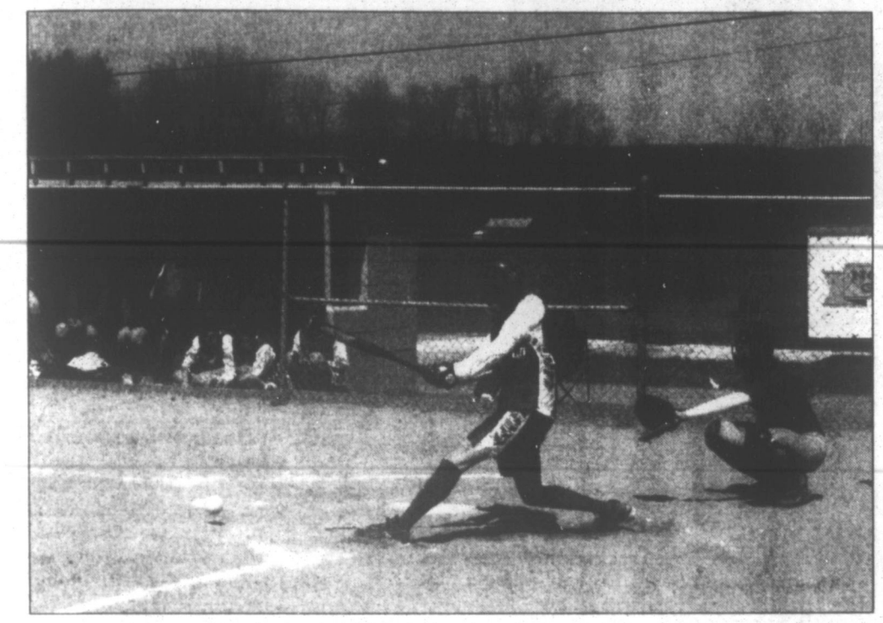
POLARIS The Way Out.





HUSKIES, RAMS SPLIT SUNNY TWINBILL – It was a beautiful day for a softball game Saturday, and the Northern and Southern high varsity softball squads played two in Accident. The host Huskies took the first contest 6-4, and the visiting Rams evened things with a 13-9 win in the second meeting. NHS's opening game win was paced on the mound by right-hander Sarah Masters, shown at left, who struck out six batters in a complete-game triumph. The respective catchers were in the thick of the action in both battles. Northern's Kayla Kipp, pictured above beating out an infield single as SHS's Stephanie Brenneman gathers in the toss, cranked out a home run during a 4-for-4 batting tally in the first game. Ram backstop Kayla Nazelrod, pictured below swatting a ground ball with Kipp crouched behind the plate, cracked a home run of her own in Game Two. The Huskies are currently 2-7 on the year, while the Rams are 3-4. Photos by John McEwen.



Huskies Fall To Beall, Split With Rams, Downed By FH

The Northern High School varsity softball team struggled this week by taking one of four outings. The Huskies started off by losing to Beall last Thursday, April 14, then rebounded to take the first half of a doubleheader with Southern Saturday before losing the second contest to the Rams. On Tuesday unbeaten Fort Hill sent Northern packing in a defeat that leaves the Huskies with a 2-7 mark so far on the season.

NHS fell 11-1 to Beall as Kate Rephann, one of the area's top aces, held the Huskies to just two hits while striking out 10 batters.

NHS sophomore outfielder Kerri Harding ripped a triple in the second inning, then scored the Huskies' lone run when freshman Kasie Fratz singled her home. Beall's Tasha Wilhelm slugged a home run and had three RBI in a 3-for-4 performance at the plate. The Mounties had 10 hits overall, and the Huskies committed five fielding errors.

Northern broke into the win column on Saturday by taking a 6-4 victory over guest Southern in the top half the cross-county twinbill.

Junior Kayla Kipp paced the Huskies at the plate, as the catcher tallied four hits in four at-bats by hammering out a homer, a double, and two singles. NHS senior hurler Sarah Masters twirled the complete game, whiffing six Rams en route to picking up the win. Southern senior Stephanie Brenneman ripped a triple and a single, and junior teammate Ashley Metcalfe doubled.

SHS took the second battle by a 13-9 margin.

Southern senior backstop Kayla Nazelrod belted a home run and a single, and classmate Sarah Bittinger stroked a pair of doubles. Emily Bowman ripped a double and a single, and Julia Bosley doubled.

Fratz was on fire for the Huskies, as the first baseman ripped two triples and a double. Senior Jamie Miller punched out two singles, and Harding had a double.

Box scores were not made available for either contest of the doubleheader.

Top-ranked Fort Hill took no prisoners in the Huskies' visit Tuesday, as the hosts scored six runs in the second inning and four in the third on their way to a 12-0 romp. Northern was limited to one hit, which Dani Glotfelty recorded in the leadoff stanza. FH pitcher Lauren Mouse tallied nine strikeouts to pace the Sentinels to their 13th win in as many outings.

The Huskies are slated to take on host Southern in a twinbill rematch at noon on Saturday. NHS hosts Fort Hill on Monday and Bishop Walsh on Wednesday in 4:30 p.m. contests.

Rams Split With Huskies, Defeat Vikes

The Southern High School varsity softball squad won two of its three games this week, starting off with a Saturday doubleheader split at Northern (see NHS account for details), then the Rams took a 9-5 victory in a road game at Petersburg Tuesday. SHS's record stands 3-4.

Ram pitcher Ashley Metcalfe and her teammates shown little sign of "bus lag" after their long sojourn into Grant County Tuesday, where the junior right-hander whiffed 11 Vikings in taking a two-hit, complete-game victory.

Southern started off the scoring with a run in the lead-off inning, then Petersburg knotted the score in the second inning and surged ahead, 4-1, with three runs in the third. The Rams stormed back to tie the game with three fourth inning runs, then took control for good with three more scores in the fifth and two in the sixth to go up 9-4.

Bittinger sent home three runs by ripping a double and two singles, and Kayla Nazelrod and sophomore Amber Plank punched out a pair of singles apiece to help pace SHS's nine-hit output.

The Rams host Bishop Walsh this afternoon in a 4:30 p.m. contest, then Northern visits Oakland at noon Saturday for a doubleheader rematch. Southern then travels to Beall next Thursday, April 28.

The Ram boys took the top two seed singles' matches behind No. 1 seed Ethan Chorpenning and second seed Pat DiGioia. SHS also took the third seed singles outing in a Jeb Crawford win, and the top seed doubles match as Chorpenning/DiGioia teamed up for the win. The Rams' second-seed doubles squad of Ricky Rickardi/Brad Lilly was edged in a hard fought battle, 9-8 (8-6).

NHS Girls Take Fifth Straight On Courts; Boys Even At 3-3

The Northern High School girls' varsity tennis team stormed to wins over Beall Friday and Fort Hill Monday, while the boys fell in their matches with the Mountaineers and Sentinels. The girls are now 5-1 on the year, having lost only in the season opener against Fort Hill, while the boys' mark stands at an even 3-3.

The Husky girls blasted Beall in a 7-0 sweep, as Nos. 1-5 singles players Amy Brenneman, Lakin Weimer, Amy Lander, Becca Stark, and Jessica Fratz each cruised to victory. In doubles play, Erin Brenneman/Keri Bachtel and Nicole Espada/Jessica Harvey took team wins at first and second seed, respectively.

The boys fell behind the Mounties early, 3-0, but battled back before narrowly being defeated by a 4-3 tally. Tim Glotfelty picked up Northern's first victory at No. 4 singles, then the NHS doubles squads of Gonzalo Velasquez/Chris Fickes and Abe Folmsbee/Chris Wood took their matches.

Monday's home court rematch with Fort Hill gave the Husky girls the chance to take revenge, and they did so in a big way with a 6-1 throttling of the Sentinels. NHS stumbled in its No. 1 singles match, but went on to take the next four singles battles and both doubles matches. Among the highlights were an 8-1 romp by No. 3 seed Lander, and Stark's 8-2 fourth-seed triumph.

The boys fell by a 5-2 margin despite an 8-5 win by Velasquez in the top singles match, and a 9-7 victory for Darryl Glotfelty/Elliot Glotfelty in second-seeded doubles play.

Northern's next scheduled outing is at BW on Wednesday.

Parole Denied

In denying Recek's parole request, the board ruled that he is henceforth not eligible to receive an offer of an automatic parole hearing from the state, although he can petition on his own behalf for another hearing in the future.

Displaying a stack of signed petitions over four inches tall, and a large number of individual letters, parole board chairman Mike Miller told those assembled in the hearing room that the Parole Commission weighed each piece of public input as it prepared for the hearing.

Tichnell, who is also ineligible for any automatic parole hearings, is serving a life sentence in the Western Maryland Correctional Facility in Cresaptown.

Planning Comm. Examining PCL Study Recommendations

As introduced last week, the Garrett County Planning Commission is conducting an ongoing review of the recommendations regarding Deep Creek Lake Watershed Economic Growth and Planning Study conducted last year by Annapolis-based consulting firm Environmental Resource Management (ERM). The 16 major recommendations put forth by ERM are available for review in the consultant's 40-page report, which can be viewed online at www.garrettcounty.org/pandz/dclstudy.htm.

The meeting minutes of the Planning Commission's initial discussions, which are a matter of public record, appear below. Remaining discussions will be published over successive weeks. The minutes may be viewed in their entirety on the web site of the Garrett County Office of Planning and Land Development, which can be accessed through the main Garrett County government web page at www.garrettcounty.org.

RECOMMENDATIONS 1-3

1. Develop a master land use and development plan for the Deep Creek Lake area.

The commission generally agrees with and supports the recommendation. [Planning Office director] John Nelson submitted a letter of request in his budget to ask for professional assistance in funding a countywide comprehensive plan.

2. Protect the scenic quality of the mountains at Deep Creek Lake.

Nelson explained that this was an important issue of discussion for the task force and during the public hearings associated with the study. The recommendation would entail designation of scenic protection areas where buildings would have to meet scenic protection criteria. The recommendation also includes adoption of "view protection" into the Zoning Ordinance. Another recommendation includes replanting to replace trees in previously cleared areas. Discussion ensued regarding the reforestation techniques that are practiced and required in Garrett County. Nelson said that designation of the scenic protection areas would be part of the first step of the comprehensive plan. The ERM recommendations require replanting of trees on any areas that are within the scenic protection areas. Bond would be posted to guarantee replanting on clear-cut areas.

3. Adopt a more proactive stance on the part of County government toward management and enforcement.

The consultant and the task force have recommended that the county address noise and nuisances by adopting and enforcing a rental ordinance. Nelson said that the county intends to adopt a rental ordinance and regulate noise and other nuisances.

Nelson made clear the new changes at the County Planning Office. The name has been changed from Planning and Zoning to the Department of Planning and Land Development. The Department has been reorganized to establish two divisions within that department: (1) the Division of Planning, Zoning and Licensing and (2) Permits and Inspections Division. Jim Torrington is now chief of the Permits and Inspection Division. Nelson continues to be the responsible department head for the Department of Planning and Land Development. William Devore is now the zoning administrator for the Deep Creek Watershed Zoning Ordinance.

The Division of Planning, Zoning and Licensing will be in charge of enforcement after a new employee is hired to enforce the new rental Ordinance. An advisory group is expected to be set up to advise the best ways to develop and implement the new Ordinance. This person will be in charge of licensing all vacation rental units. A Delinquent Building Ordinance will also be adopted to address delinquent buildings in the county. The existing Junkyard Ordinance will be further refined to address existing problem areas in the county. The commissioners have also committed to hire an enforcement officer to implement the new regulations.

Members of the commission recommended that this new department address the noise issues in the Transient Vacation Rental Ordinance early and thoroughly. The commission recommends that noise standards be defined and specific standards be established in the Rental Ordinance, at the earliest possible time. Nelson said that it is envisioned the ordinance will take effect this summer.

3.i. Address noise and nuisances by adopting and enforcing a rental ordinance. Members of the commission recommended that a new licensing manager monitor this enforcement and address the noise issues in the Transient Vacation Rental Ordinance, early and thoroughly. A draft copy of the new rental ordinance was prepared in September 2004. The commissioners have already committed to hiring a person to enforce this ordinance, and monies have been allocated in the 2006 budget. Licensing fees for renting could also offset costs. The new ordinance would cover issues such a maximum overnight occupancy, noise, nuisances, trash and parking.

3.ii. Hire a zoning inspector. The commission generally supports this concept. Costs could be off set by a possible increase in permit fees. Nelson noted that money for this position has not been allocated in the 2006 budget. Though the commission supports this recommendation, the members would like more information on the duties that would be assigned to the new inspector.

3.iii. Increase inspection and enforcement for stormwater management and sediment and erosion control, especially for development on steep slopes. Sub-recommendations include:

a. Become a county that is the delegated authority by Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) for enforcement of sediment and erosion control. The county would have to hire an inspector for sediment and erosion control, to provide countywide enforcement, as Frederick County has already done. Nelson noted that currently one MDE inspector has a wide geographical area to cover, in multiple counties.

b. Develop an understanding under which the MDE contracts with the Garrett Soil Conservation District to conduct inspections.

Nelson feels that other duties could be assigned to these new inspectors. This would enable the county to be proactive in enforcement and not complaint-driven.

The commission generally supports adoption of these recommendations. Nelson noted that money for these inspector positions has not been allocated in the 2006 budget. The commission supported the recommendation for a county erosion and sedimentation inspector by a 5 to 1 vote.

3.iv. Issue citations for illegal parking on public streets. The commission supports this recommendation and feels that the county sheriff' office should press this issue. The commission feels the issue especially needs attention in the problem areas around the Lake, such as Marsh Hill Road.

Further discussion notes will be published next week.

"If we lose these monies from what was the USDA Rural Development Program, we lose water and sewer money, community facilities, loan guarantee money, and the operation of such places like the Garrett Rehab Center and the outreach office in Grantsville," Yoder said.

He explained that the programs his organization has to subsidize would be the first to go. These include the Area Agency on Aging, which provides the "Meals on Wheels" program, as well as meals for seniors at centers around the county. The agency also makes visits to the homes of seniors to help them do basic chores and provides health and nutrition information.

Some of the other clients of Yoder's agency who will be affected include those receiving rent subsidies. It will be nearly impossible under the Bush administration's proposed cuts to run Section 8 housing, Yoder said. It may be impossible to continue subsidizing rents.

Others affected will be those who depend on the GCCAC's transportation service, which makes hundreds of thousands of passenger pickups and deliveries each year for those who can't afford their own transportation or are incapable of driving.

"Obviously, this would drastically affect the way we do business," Yoder said. "We were hoping to do a home ownership project in Kitzmiller, help turn the Pritts garage in Oakland into an artisan center, and continue doing other things like the home repair program. If this legislation passes, all of these will simply be gone," he said.

Yoder said that what bothers him the most about the news is that so many different groups in Garrett County have worked so hard for things to get better. "And things have gotten better," he said. "We've just turned the corner with the help of people like the county commissioners. This kind of thing could make us slip back again. I just don't want to lose what we've gained."

Garrett County has a medium income of $36,000, yet the people who seek the services of his agency earn less than 60 percent of that. The medium income for the state is $64,000.

Despite this blow to his agency, Yoder still offered some points of optimism. Even though the Bush Administration fought back even harder with Congress when it appeared that there was bipartisan support against the proposal, Yoder feels that part of the key is for people to contact their two senators and one congressman.

Speaking to a reporter on Wednesday evening having only hours before returned from Washington, D.C., where he had a discussion with Rosa DeLauro (D-Connecticut), ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, Yoder said that she seemed to understand the hardships that the Bush proposal would cause.

"I really believe that we have a lot of bipartisan support in Congress. Congressional people are out in their community more than administration officials, and they see firsthand the good work that's being done. But we've got a hard road to go.

"My gut feeling is that we can pull it off in Congress if we show the support is there," he said.

Delegate George Edwards has already penned letters to the governor and to the congressional delegation. Even Governor Erhlich has been in contact with Congress, though he has not as of this writing contacted anyone in the Bush Administration.

"I just don't want to lose everything we've gained in these past few years. I just can't stand the thought," Yoder repeated.

Shaffer is currently working on her own story collection, tentatively titled Sgt. Giggles, intended to reach young children of military families. "When Joe was in Baghdad he would send home an audio tape about once a month to let the kids know what he was doing. He would talk to them in the funny voice of a 'Sgt. Giggles' character in order to comfort them in his absence by making them laugh. The kids also made tapes of their own to send to him, letting him know they were thinking of him, too."

Although Shaffer has yet to find a publisher for the Sgt. Giggles project, she has procured the services of her niece, an accomplished artist living in Michigan, to provide illustrations for the book, including more of the family in the family-oriented project.

Chicken Soup For The Military Wife's Soul is currently available at local bookstores.

Main Street manager. "This first mural should depict something historical about Oakland."

A packet of information about the proposed mural is available to all those interested in this project. Included will be historical photos and information for reference, and a scale drawing of the wall to be used for the mural. The packet also contains two forms: a narrative application and a budget detail form.

The forms must be submitted separately, and the narrative application must include a full-color rendering of the proposed mural.

"The Design Committee will provide funds for the preparation of the wall, brushes, and paints," Ross said. "Please include these elements in your proposal."

The committee is also pursuing a larger scale project for next summer that will include four to six murals, which will be done around town simultaneously, she added.

For copies of the RFP packet, questions, or additional information, persons may call Ross at 301-616-3026. Deadline for submissions is May 13.

GALS Group To Hold Event

GALS (Garrett Area Ladies Society), originated by Maggie Lemak, will hold many upcoming events and is looking for women interested in joining.

Lemak said she identified a need for a women's group that could provide social interaction on an ongoing basis in a supportive atmosphere.

"The focus of GALS is to continually broaden friendships, interests, and community service. The group is non-denominational, non-political, and non-partisan," she said.

The next event will be Wednesday, May 4, with dinner at Will O' the Wisp followed by a conversation with dermatologist Dr. Sean McCaugh. He will discuss the latest treatments for aging and sun damaged skin, among other topics. Reservations are required.

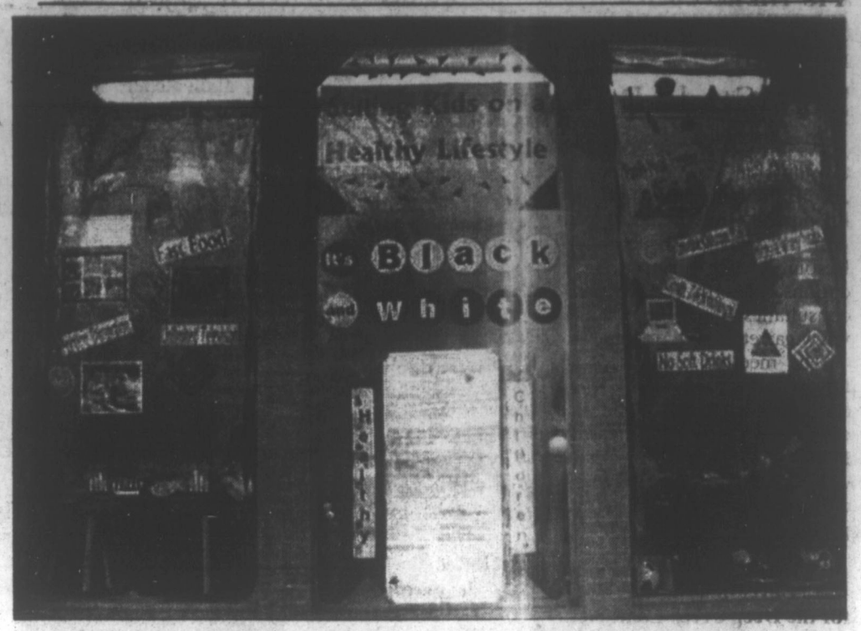
Buckle Honored By State For Service Learning

Joanne Buckle, a senior at Southern High School, was recently recognized by the Maryland State Department of Education as a Student Service Star.

MSDE presents this annual award to the students to show appreciation and respect for the contributions they make to their communities. These students serve as role models for others, inspiring fellow students and adults to become similarly involved, said a spokesperson.

Each student has earned beyond what is required in the service leaning plan, giving hundreds, and in some cases, in excess of 1,000 hours of service to their communities, the spokesperson added.

Joanne is the daughter of Gillian and Terry Shreve, Mtn. Lake Park.



APRIL IS THE MONTH OF THE YOUNG CHILD, and this year's theme is "Children's Opportunities Are Our Responsibilities." With this in mind, the local Kids First Committee sponsored a window display at the Ruth Enlow Library in Oakland reflecting the mission to "Sell Our Children on a Healthy Lifestyle." "Children with weight problems face serious medical, emotional, and social consequences," said a committee spokesperson. "Extra pounds can lead to high blood pressure, diabetes, heart disease, and orthopedic and mobility problems." At the library until the end of the month, the display stresses that children can learn early that a healthy diet and increased physical activity are the keys to a healthy life.

He has been involved in Scouting for 11 years. He has earned 38 merit badges and completed Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class, Star, Life and Eagle rank. He is currently working to complete the Eagle Palms.

For his Eagle project, he worked to improve the Yough Glades Elementary School ecological trail. Local businesses listed contributed supplies for the project, including Sams' Agway, 84 Lumber, and Rigidply Rafters. Bachtel Enterprise contributed two park benches.

"A special thanks to Scout troop members, Scout families, and friends who contributed hours of labor for cleaning the trail and installing bird feeders and benches," said Andrew.

An Eagle Scout Court of Honor for Andrew was held during Sunday worship service at St. John's. Pastor Keith Pittsnogle and Bishop Ralph Dunkin led the worship service. Scout troop leader Scott Rush presented Andrew his Eagle Scout award and badge.

Andrew presented his parents, Ed and Peggy Roth, Eagle Scout parents pins. Then Andrew spoke briefly on "It Takes a Village to Raise an Eagle Scout (Den, Pack, and Troop)."

Following the worship service, a luncheon was provided by the Roth family and served by the St. John's Relay for Life team members. The reception program followed in the church sanctuary.

Andrew presented mentor pins to Scott Rush and Liz Goldsborough, and will present a mentor pin at Troop 31 spring Court of Honor to Mike Bernard, who was unable to attend the service. Keith Harvey, principal of Yough Glades Elementary School, discussed how the school students and community members have been able to use the trail since its completion last September. Also, Paul Shogren, an Eagle Scout, spoke on Eagle Scout memories and responsibilities. Carl Rebele attended, representing the Oakland Wal-Mart, where Andrew is employed.

Andrew is a senior at Southern High School. He works with the Garrett County School to Career Program as a third-grade aide every afternoon at Yough Glades Elementary School. He is also employed by Dennett Road Nursing Home. He plans to attend West Virginia University at the Potomac campus located in Keyser, W.Va., this fall, where he will study elementary education.

Andrew resides at Gnegy Church Road with his parents, Ed and Peggy Roth, and his sister Alison. He is the grandson of Weir and Marilyn Roth of Oakland, Carole Sue Roth of Horse Shoe Run, W.Va., and the late Charles E. Roth Sr. and the late Therman Kelley.

Doug Duncan, Terry Lierman To Speak At Annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Event

Doug Duncan, Montgomery County executive, and Terry Lierman, chair of the Maryland Democratic Party, will headline as speakers for the Garrett County Democratic Club's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner, set for Monday, June 20, at Wisp Mountain Resort, McHenry. The event will open with a reception at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7.

Duncan is currently serving an unprecedented third term as the top elected official of Maryland's largest jurisdiction. His governing style has been described by the Washington Post as "county leadership that knows when to quit mulling and start moving."

With a county school system that is the largest and the most diverse in the state, Duncan has invested heavily in public education, increasing funding by more than 90 percent to provide all-day kindergarten, decreasing class sizes, hiring more teachers, and increasing training, according to a Duncan spokesperson.

Providing environmental leadership, he has led Montgomery County to preserve more farmland and open space than any other county in the nation. In addition to his efforts to improve air pollution and relieve traffic congestion, his Stream Protection Strategy has been hailed as a model by the Environmental Protection Agency, noted the spokesperson.

Under Duncan's ambitious anti-poverty program, Montgomery became the first county in the nation to implement a local Earned Income Tax Credit, targeting relief to working poor families. He also expanded access to health care, increased transit subsidies, provided job training, more than doubled annual spending on affordable housing, and signed into law a living wage bill to "ensure that working men and women earn a decent salary," said the spokesperson.

"With his unique sense of urgency, Duncan has led his county through its transformation from a suburban bedroom community into a thriving urban center recognized for visionary land planning, its global technology industry, and vast open space and parks," she added.

Lierman was elected chair of the Maryland Democratic Party in December 2004 after three decades of leadership in public policy, business, community service, and political organizing. Throughout his career, he has been a policy and political advisor to Democrats both in Maryland and across the United States.

Most recently, Lierman worked on Howard Dean's campaign for the presidency. Lierman was national finance co-chair of Dean for America, and, following the nomination of Senator John F. Kerry, he served as co-chair of Grassroots Action Institute and Network (GAIN), a weeklong seminar series at the 2004 Democratic National Convention.

"Doing well by doing good" is the motto to which Lierman ascribes as he begins his tenure of leadership of Maryland's Democratic Party.

In addition to these speakers and other entertainment, the GCDC will hold a silent auction and a 50/50 raffle during the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner. An open cash bar will be available.

Tickets for the event are $25 person and can be obtained at Englander's, Oakland, or by calling Doris Goldsborough at 301-334-3007, Betty Pritt at 334-9339, or Susan Davis at 301-245-4252. The deadline for reservations is June 2. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Golf carts will be provided for those in need of assistance from the parking lot.

Maryland Unveils Statewide Library Card, Privileges

The state of Maryland has introduced a new statewide "MPower Card," which enables residents to access any public library in the state. Persons can obtain an MPower Card from the library of their choice and then present it at the checkout of any Maryland public library to borrow books or reserve materials.

"This card knows no boundaries," Ruth Enlow Library director Cathy Ashby said. "Vacationers to Deep Creek Lake, for example, can borrow books from the Ruth Enlow Library and return them to their home library.

"The challenge today is that people are extremely busy, so we have made it even easier for people to access everything they want from the library at the place that's most convenient for them Ashby continued. "Whether it's their neighborhood or office, or even hundreds of miles from home. The MPower Card makes library access simple and easy for all."

The Oakland Library and all branches will distribute the MPower card to new patrons, and to existing patrons who request it. Existing patrons should keep in mind that their current library card will now function in the same way as the newly designed card.

For additional information, persons may call their local library branch or the Oakland Library at 301-334-3996.

Grantsville Senior Taking Lifelong Learning To Heart

by Jo Donaldson

Edna McKenzie of Grantsville likes the opportunity she has to learn offered at the Grantsville Outreach Center of Garrett College. She has already attended 15 courses offered there through the college and has signed up for three more.

"All these things you wanted to do when you were young and then when you were raising your children – you have the time to do it now," said McKenzie, who believes college courses are not just for the young.

"I get a lot from the college courses," she said. "They are very informal, great for senior citizens. I take both day and evening courses.

"I take courses primarily for pleasure," she said. "There are good classes and they relieve a lot of stress. They are very enjoyable."

McKenzie likes the painting courses best so far, but also has taken classes in self defense, cake decorating, wills and probate, the truth about vitamins and herbal supplements, facts and fallacies about fad diets, exercise classes, and enhanced drawing skills.

McKenzie, a tax-preparer is very busy right now, so she will wait until after the tax season to take her next classes. She plans to start a drawing class and two painting classes.

"You don't have to be a straight A student," she said. "There is a lack of pressure at the Outreach Center. The classes are very good. I feel at ease. I've had great instructors and plenty of variety. I would definitely recommend them."

"People like the convenience of the classes in Grantsville and also the informal atmosphere," said Grantsville Outreach Center coordinator Terry Beachy.

The center has been in operation since June 2001. More than a thousand students have signed up for the 200-plus courses offered to the public at the center since that time, according to Beachy.

"We offer a variety of classes to address the needs of the public. They could be computer, personal interest, or vocational," she said. "If a group of people like a business or just a group of friends want a particular course, I try and offer it."

Courses offered at the Grantsville Outreach Center include Basic Computer Skills, Cake Decorating, painting courses, several Microsoft courses and QuickBooks Accounting Software, Self Defense, Stress Management, Basic Sign Language, Garrett County History, Healthy Living, Nutritional Meal Planning for Diabetes and Beginning Calligraphy, Medical Coding, Photography, German, Spanish, Professional Babysitting Training, and various exercise classes.

Some proposed new courses include Medical Transcription, Licensed Nail Technician, Drawing for the Non-Artist, Photographing Nature, and Writing for Profit.

Courses are offered on an ongoing basis. Students are asked to register at least two weeks prior to the start of classes to ensure a seat.

For further information, persons may contact Beachy at 301-895-3368 or via e-mail at tbeachy@garrettcollege.edu.

STUDENTS PARTICIPATE IN ENERGY WEEK PROJECT – A variety of activities were held recently to honor Maryland Energy Week, including an open house with door prizes. The county commissioner also signed a proclamation. The Maryland Energy Program is a coordinated effort between Garrett County Community Action and Department of Human Resources, Maryland Office of Home Energy Programs. A coloring contest and an essay writing contest were held in the Garrett County Schools with over 400 students participating. The first, second, and third place winners were awarded a Wal-Mart gift certificate. Each student who participated in the contest received a thank-you gift. Students participating in the coloring contest were pre-kindergarten to third grade students from Yough Glades, Kitzmiller's kindergarten class, and Crellin's kindergarten class. Kitzmiller's fifth grade and Lori Burdock's seventh grade language class at Northern Middle School participated in the essay contest. Coordinating both contests were Amy Piper-McConnell, AmeriCorps coordinator, and Kelly DeWitt, office manager of the Community and Emergency Services Departmen, both of Community Action. Judges for the essay contest were Mary Beckman, Kathy Leatherman, Samuel Leatherman, and Daniel Leatherman. Pictured above left are the winners from Kitzmiller. SAMSUNG/RADIO SHACK 500 REVIEW

Biffle dominates

Aura of intimidation building for Roush Racing's No. 16 car

By AL LEVINE
Cox News Service

Justin, Texas

The latest NASCAR hotshot reminds his crew chief of Dale Earnhardt, is as tough on his neighborhood lake in North Carolina as he is on intermediate tracks and easily could have doubled his two wins this year.

Greg Biffle is on one giddy roll right now. It began in last year's Nextel Cup finale, when he won at Homestead, Fla., and continued Sunday at Texas Motor Speedway.

Driving a backup No. 16 Ford from the rear of the field, Biffle won the Samsung/Radio Shack 500 by 3.244 seconds over Jimmie Johnson's No. 48 Chevrolet. Jamie McMurray was third in the No. 42 Dodge, the first of three Chip Ganassi-owned cars in the top five.

It was Biffle's third win in the past eight Cup races, and it could have been two more. He finished third at Atlanta after a bad pit stop while in the lead and was ninth at Bristol when he got passed by cars with fresher tires because he stayed on the track to maintain his lead.

On Sunday, Biffle led 219 of the last 248 laps. He is strengthening his position as a championship contender, second in points, 135 points behind Johnson.

Just as impressive, Biffle seems to be building on a reputation as a fearless hard-charger.

"Those guys are very similar," said Biffle's crew chief, Doug Richert, who worked with Earnhardt in his early championship years. "They both drove 120 percent every lap. Dale always had the 'Intimidator' black hood coming up behind you. Well, it might be a Post-It or a National Guard [hood], but [competitors] have to think twice about who's coming because [Biffle's] not afraid."

"He's definitely aggressive," Johnson said, "from the Busch Series when I raced there and into Cup. He's always been fast. He's always been hard on the gas. It's hard to spend a lot of time with drivers who aren't on your team, but I do see him around home and he does have a fast boat. We get out there and race around a little bit, so it doesn't matter if it's on the track or on the lake."

Biffle is almost embarrassed by all the praise and suggests his image of fearlessness should come with an asterisk.

He was downright nervous and somewhat sore getting back on the track after hitting the wall in practice Friday when the right front tire went flat, knocking out his preferred car for this race.

"I've been thinking about it since I crashed," he said. "It's been in the back of my head. I thought about it all day today and all day yesterday because I was lucky that I crashed in the spot that I did. There is a worse area on the track for it to go flat and you could get in the wall harder than that. It was a hard lick."

Still, he didn't ease off.

"If there was an in-car camera to watch me, [it would have shown that] I worked my butt off today," Biffle said. "There wasn't five minutes I could relax."

That may be the key to Biffle's success this season. He's one of the drivers actually enjoying what the reduced spoiler has done to the handling of the cars.

Two opponents of the new spoiler were vocal in their displeasure. "I'm not sure about the small spoiler right now," Bobby Labonte [38th] said after wrecking early.

"I agree with Bobby," Dale Earnhardt Jr. [ninth] said. "I've felt that way but I haven't said much because I got grilled pretty hard when I said anything about that at California. If you really want to get technical about it, we do need a little bit of spoiler back on the car."

You won't be hearing that from Biffle. A loose car is just his style.

"I don't want to brag," he said, "but [the new spoiler] makes the car harder to drive. That's my take on it. Everybody else's take may be different."

Biffle made a bit of history Sunday. He was the ninth different winner in nine years at Texas, a record for a track from its inception.

RACE NOTEBOOK

Sauter penalized for carburetor swap

By AL LEVINE
Cox News Service

Justin, Texas

The swift hand of NASCAR justice came down on Johnny Sauter's Busch Series team early Sunday.

In a random inspection after Saturday's O'Reilly 300 at Texas Motor Speedway, the No. 1 Dodge was caught with an illegal [too big] carburetor apparently placed in the car while it was impounded.

The situation was serious enough for every top NASCAR officer at the track — from President Mike Helton to Busch Series Director Joe Balash — to get involved in the interrogation process Saturday, which went on for nearly four hours.

NASCAR still wants to learn how and when the carburetor was switched from one that passed pre-qualifying inspection on Thursday. The cars were locked down, unavailable to be worked on before Saturday's race.

The No. 1 team was disqualified from the race and its 14th-place finish erased from race records. Its $27,790 share of the purse will be redistributed among the rest of the field. Cars that finished behind the No. 1 will move up a spot in the revised results.

Further penalties are expected for crew chief Joe Shear and owner James Finch.

"It's very serious," NASCAR spokesman Jim Hunter said. "This was blatant. Under the circumstances, we felt this penalty was appropriate and there may be additional penalties."

It's the latest move by NASCAR to curb cheating. "All the competitors in that garage have got to know they're competing on an even playing field," Hunter said.

Sauter was 15th in Busch points with a best finish of 16th at Nashville two races ago.

Labonte wrecks early

Bobby Labonte kept his misery streak intact Sunday, wrecking his No. 18 Chevrolet on the 32nd lap of the 334-lap Samsung/Radio Shack 500. It was his fourth early-race accident in seven races.

"I was loose on that run and I went to turn a switch off coming off Turn 2," Labonte said. "I hit the switch and looked up and somebody spun and checked up and I ran into the back of [Kyle Busch's] car. It was my fault that I didn't get out of the gas in time."

Stewart singed

Tony Stewart suffered slight burns after his No. 20 Chevrolet blew an engine and erupted in flames while dropping oil on Lap 297. He has small burns on the back of his right thigh and on his right elbow.

COMMENTARY

Forget composure, drivers need to display a little personality

By JEFF GLUCK
Cox News Service

Rocky Mount, N.C.

If Tony Stewart had spun Kurt Busch in the dwindling laps of the race at Martinsville two weeks ago, everyone would be screaming for Stewart's head.

Suspend him. Fine him.

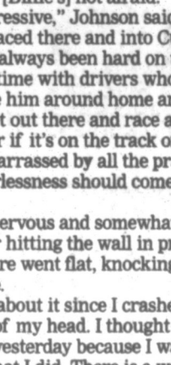
There probably would have even been a fight in the pits.

Instead, the perpetrator was Jeff Gordon, whose clean-racing reputation immediately allowed broadcasters and sportswriters to forgive him.

But the more interesting figure in the incident was not Gordon. Rather, the defending Nextel Cup champion earns that honor.

If you missed it, Busch was trying to squeeze back in line while cars drove on the bottom of Martinsville Speedway's tight turns.

Gordon already was in line, and although both were running in the top five, Gordon didn't want Busch to pass on the outside. So when Busch tried to cut down to the inside, Gordon held his ground and bumped him back up the track.



BUSCH

Busch hit the wall and finished 19th. Gordon won the race.

When Gordon came back around the track a few laps later, Busch rammed him and seemed like he was going to wreck the race leader.

"I don't know what his intention was," Gordon said after the race. "He turned right down into my hood, then he ran me up the track and drove straight down into me again."

In other words, Gordon said, Busch seemed intent on payback: You wreck me, I'll wreck you.

Busch had a temper in his younger years, and is still loudly booed by fans because of an incident with veteran driver Jimmy Spencer at Indianapolis in 2002.

Brash and cocky, Busch underwent media training to become less of a hothead and more of a classy, even-tempered driver.

I feel bad for Busch. His true feelings and thoughts are no longer permitted, and he talks in convoluted sentences that don't make any sense.

That's not the real Kurt Busch.

When he won the Cup, he went on the "Live with Regis and Kelly" and came across as sensitive, pleasant and gentle.

Then, after a top-five finish at Daytona in February, he went on "Best Damn Sports Show Period" and tried to act macho and manly. It didn't work. At one point, Busch tried to rib then-host Tom Arnold. Frankly, Arnold said, "I have no idea what you just said."

The real Busch is likely neither of those personas. He's probably just a regular guy who has been trained to change himself depending on the situation.

After getting wrecked by Gordon, Busch spoke to reporters about how disappointed he was for his sponsor, blah blah blah. Only when someone asked about nearly wrecking Gordon did he reveal any emotion.

"That was just me showing my displeasure," he said, trying not to flash his anger.

Just like that, the interview ended, and he walked away.

Inside, Busch was exploding with emotion, furious at Gordon. How do I know? I listened to him on the scanner after he wrecked. I can't print what he said.

Roush Racing President Geoff Smith told USA Today's Chris Jenkins that Busch should be praised for his maturity and restraint.

"Smith says if the same incident had happened a few years ago, the 'early Kurt' would have gone on TV and come up with 'a colorful dig at the other driver's personality,' " Jenkins wrote.

What's so wrong with that? If a driver has a shot to win a race, gets wrecked and doesn't show any emotion, that seems like more of a problem than taking a few cheap shots.

Public-relations training has turned Busch into a boring, cookie-cutter driver. If I had five minutes alone with Busch, I would plead with him to ignore those people and speak his mind every now and then.

Fans don't like Busch not only because of the incident with Spencer, but how Busch acts now. Watching from Turn 3 at Martinsville, I could hear the fans cheering over the roar of the engines when Busch spun out. And they weren't cheering for the reason you think.

NASCAR fans hate Gordon more than anyone, which is why I believe they cheered knowing Gordon was going to look bad for the wreck.

If Busch wrecked Gordon Sunday instead of just bumping him, my theory is that Busch would instantly start getting cheered wildly every Sunday instead of booed.

Show us some personality. Fans love a little fire, a little passion.

Why else would they like Tony Stewart?

How far will you travel to eat at your favorite restaurant...two miles, ten, maybe even twenty for a special occasion providing the food is excellent? Our tiny friends, the hummingbirds, exceed your record by thousands of miles each year when the weather turns warm once more. Soaring on gossamer wings that operate faster than the eye can begin to comprehend, the tiny birds with their needle-like beaks and tongues miraculously remember and return to their providers' feeders from the previous year. Just as the Creator tells the flowers to bloom in the spring, He has programmed the hummingbirds' return.

The Lord will guide and provide for us, also. In Psalm 145, David praises the Creator... "The Lord is good to all, and His compassion is over all that He has made."[vs.9] "The eyes of all look to Thee, and Thou givest them their food in due season. Thou openest Thy hand, Thou satisfieth the desire of every living thing."[vs.15-16]

This week, won't you travel to your local house of worship to remember your Creator? He awaits to provide you with food for life.

Tell People What You Think

There are many situations when it can be difficult to tell others what we really think. Sometimes we may fear that the truth will hurt their feelings, or we may simply fear their angry response, and at other times, we may just be inclined to tell people what we think they want to hear. Whatever the reason, honesty is usually the best policy, especially since it is impossible to accurately predict how others will react to what we might say. In this regard, one of the hardest things to learn is how to speak the truth openly, yet with a gentle spirit. If someone has hurt your feelings, why not say, "Ouch! That hurt my feelings," in much the same way that we would say, "Ouch! That hurt," if someone were to step on our toes? This sort of response is surely preferable to letting resentment build up or responding in a hurtful manner to others. Another instance when it can be difficult to speak truthfully may occur when we are interacting with someone who is in a position of authority. And although our integrity may suffer when we withhold or whitewash the truth to suit others, we should remember that the truth can at times be painful. So, we should choose our words very carefully and speak the truth in a spirit of love and gentleness.

Hear, for I will speak noble things, and from my lips will come what is right; for my mouth will utter truth; wickedness is an abomination to my lips. R.S.V. Proverbs 8:6-7

Herb Effective In Treatment Of Hot Flashes

Black cohosh is an herb that has been used traditionally to treat menopausal symptoms (hot flashes). It is also known as black snakeroot, bugbane, rattleweed, squawroot, and macrotys. Typically, the root and underground stem of the plant are used in black cohosh preparations. Black cohosh, a member of the buttercup family, affects estrogen receptors in the body. Its mechanism of action in the treatment of hot flashes is still unknown.

A study published in 2002 showed this herb to be safe and effective in the short-term treatment of hot flashes. The American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology states that black cohosh may be helpful in the short-term (six months or less) management of hot flashes. The recommended dose is 40 mg per day. Common side effects are stomach upset and rash. There have been rare reports of hepatitis and seizures with the use of black cohosh; however, this is controversial. Due to its activity on estrogen receptors, black cohosh should not be used in women with a history of or a high risk for breast cancer.

PROVIDING AAA TOWING TO GARRETT COUNTY – Jeff and Kecia Coleman, Swanton, have now opened Deep Creek Towing and Recovery, a sister business to Rt. 36 Towing located in Frostburg. "We are the major towing company for AAA in Garrett County, and have been towing for AAA for more than 10 years and continue to grow," said Jeff. They provide 24-hour towing and recovery service along with jump starts, tire changes, and lockout service. Pictured above are the Colemans, Jeff, Brant, Shawnee, and Kecia. See story for more details.

Let's Get Down To Business!

This is a feature of The Republican to better acquaint our readers with various area business establishments.

DEEP CREEK TOWING AND RECOVERY

Deep Creek Towing and Recovery, the major towing company for AAA in Garrett County, now has a new location in Swanton. Kecia and Jeff Coleman have been in business for 11 years, and six months ago opened their Swanton location. Deep Creek Towing is a sister company to Rt. 36 Towing in Frostburg.

The business offers 24-hour towing and recovery service, jump starts, lockout service, gas, tire changes, and local and long distance towing. They tow for many motor clubs besides AAA, including Allstate, Cross Country, US Auto, Geico, GE Financial, and Assurion. They operate two rollbacks and one 4x4 wrecker.

"We can also provide direct calls for AAA members," said Jeff. "We provide four point tie down service for vehicles not wanting a chain tie down. We can now tow trailers, including fifth wheels and goose neck, and have specialty equipment to tow motorcycles of all sizes. We also tow classic cars."

Employees are Eric Smith, Tom Spiker, Travis Wilt, John Muir, John Brant, Shelle Custer, and Brant Coleman.

Plans for Deep Creek Towing include adding more trucks to the fleet and adding a service and storage location in the McHenry area, said Kecia.

"We would like AAA members living in or visiting the Deep Creek Garrett County area to know they can call us for AAA service needed directly any time of the day or night," said Jeff.

Deep Creek Towing, which accepts major credit cards, and cash and will soon accept checks, may be reached at 301-387-8283.

TV PIPELINE

Basinger started career in 'Dog' of a series

By Jay Bobbin
© Zap2it

Kim Basinger

Q: Please help me convince my trivia friends I'm not crazy. Was there a cop or detective show on television back in the '70s, with Kim Basinger, called "Cat and Dog" or "Cat/Dog"? Her character was the "Cat" part, and I don't remember who was "Dog." –Greg Brown, Stone Mountain, Ga.

A: Attention, trivia friends: He's not crazy. Before her big-screen career got going, Basinger starred in the short-lived ABC series "Dog and Cat" in the spring of 1977. Her character was a police rookie, and Lou Antonio – also a noted television director – played the veteran sergeant with whom she was teamed.

Q: Did Jason Alexander and Michael Richards ever win Emmys for playing George and Kramer on "Seinfeld"? –G.A.B., Bedford, Ind.

A: Richards won three times for the show, while Alexander never won despite being nominated for the series seven times. The sitcom's fourth season – which included the episodes "The Contest," "The Bubble Boy" and "The Junior Mint" – is scheduled for a DVD release on May 17.

Q: With the renewed interest in "Kojak," will the old series with Telly Savalas be coming out on DVD anytime soon? –Marty Connelley, San Antonio.

A: Actually, it is out. Universal Studios Home Video released the complete first season of the Savalas version in a boxed set last month. Since the company recently released the second seasons of "Knight Rider," "The A-Team" and "Magnum, P.I." on DVD, more "Kojak" is likely to be on the way, too.

Q: Who is the actor who played David Palmer in the first season of "24," and what is his height? He is the same person who is now doing insurance-company commercials. –The Feslers, Luther, Okla.

A: He's Dennis Haysbert, and yes, he is pretty tall. Sources list his height as 6 feet 4 1/2 inches. Also a star of the movies "Far From Heaven," "Random Hearts," "Absolute Power" and "Heat," he was a "24" regular during the first three seasons of the Fox suspense series ... with his character, David Palmer, serving as the U.S. president during the last two of those years.

Q: I recently watched "Jerry Maguire" on cable. What is Cuba Gooding Jr. doing these days? I don't recall seeing him in anything since that movie. –Renee Grant, Ogden, Utah.

A: Since winning an Oscar for that 1996 film, he has made other movies such as "Men of Honor," "Pearl Harbor," "Rat Race," "The Fighting Temptations" and "Radio." Gooding has two projects scheduled for release later this year, "Shadowboxer" and "Dirty," and he currently is filming a thriller titled "End Game."
